Six Members Of Congress Shared Home Of Lobbyist

50 Others Attended Fetes, Group Told

Publisher Is Attacked for Demanding Wires in Court Action.

By Sidney Olson.

Turning the spotlight on the workings of the social lobby in Washington, the Senate Lobby Commmittee yesterday watched Robert E. Smith, a representative of Western power company and railroad association interests squirm reluctantly before admitting that six members of the House of Representatives, whom he called "some of the boys," had lived in a Northwest Washington mansion with him last summer.

Smith, a ruddy-faced, mild-appearing man, flushed while trying to remember the names of the six members of the House with whom he had lived last August, "splitting expenses seven ways."

He had already given the committee a list of "about 50" members of the House whom he had entertained at parties and dinners last year while discussing pending legislation.

Gives Names of Six.

Five of the names of the "boys" with whom he lived at 3128 Thirty-eighth street northwest "during the hot spell," came easily. These were Representatives Scrugham (Democrat) Nevada; Sutphin (Democrat), New Jersey; Cary (Democrat), Kentucky; Fiesinger (Democrat), Ohio, and Clark (Democrat), Idaho. After clutching at his gray-fringed head for several minutes he remembered that Representative Pettengill (Democrat), Indiana, was the sixth.

The six Representatives last night issued a joint statement saying "any inference that we were the guests of Mr. Robert Smith or anyone else is contrary to the facts." They said that all seven had joined in renting the house from an Army officer. They said Smith represented himself as "interested in conservation and irrigation in the West."

Acting Chairman Lewis D. Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, brought out that Smith had not told the Congressmen he was paid by utility and railroad interests. Smith insisted, however, that "several of them knew it, anyway."

The investigation was interrupted when Senator Schwellenbach spied Deputy United States Marshal Harry C. Allen near the door. He summoned him to the dais in order to permit him to serve Senator Hugo Black (Democrat), Alabama, with a subpena requiring that Black appear in District Supreme Court to answer an injunction suit brought by William Randolph Hearst.

Hearst Seeks Wires.

Hearst is seeking a court order to compel return of telegrams which he alleges are held by the committee. He also is trying to prevent further examination of his telegrams, and is seeking to enjoin the Western Union from delivering a subpenaed message to the committee. He is charging an invasion of the freedom of the press.

As Black smilingly accepted service of the subpena, while photographers' flash-bulbs flared, Schwellenbach stopped the proceedings to make a statement. He said:

"There has just been served on the chairman of this committee a subpena instituted through court proceedings by William Randolph Hearst in an effort to stop this investigation.

"A sum in excess of $3,500,000 has been spent by public utilities of the country in an effort to defeat one single piece of legislation.

Publisher's Action Scored.

"If the public utilities, William Randolph Hearst, the American Liberty League and other special interests of this country succeed in preventing this committee from proceeding, we may expect hereafter

Exhibit Arrives Late; Museum Rejects It

When a famous Nourredin interior which was bought in 1933 by a Mohammedan art collector in Damascus, Syria, arrived at the Kansas City Museum, the museum rejected it because it arrived too late.

Washingtonians certainly aren't late in renting rooms and apartments. One of the reasons is that they consult the classified columns of The Post the first thing in the morning. This little Post Want Ad rented a room the same morning it appeared:

Students at Princeton Form 'Veterans of Future Wars'

Payment Now of 1965 Bonus of $1,000 Is Asked; Nation-Wide College Organization Sought; Vassar Starts Gold Star Mother Group.

By the Associated Press.

Princeton, N. J., March 16.—Princeton University undergraduates active in campus affairs organized tonight "The Veterans of Future Wars" which they proposed to expand into a national intercollegiate organization.

At the same time at Vassar College, sponsors of the Veterans of Future Wars announced, the first chapter of an auxiliary society, the Association of Gold Star Mothers of Veterans of Future Wars, was formed.

Thomas Riggs, Jr.

In a manifesto, the officers of the vetenans said the organization demanded immediate payment of a $1,000 bonus due June 1, 1965, to each member.

"Because it is customary to pay bonuses before they are due," said the manifesto, "the Veterans of Future Wars demand immediate payment plus 3 per cent compounded interest annually from June 1, 1965, backward to June 1, 1936."

Payment now, they said, would "lift the country out of the depression" and would enable the beneficiary to enjoy it before he has been slain in a future war.

The Gold Star Mothers will seek trips abroad for young women so they may view the prospective graves of their future sons.

Organization plans of the veterans provide for division of the country into eight regional districts to be headed by regional commanders. The founders plan to encourage the organization of chapters in all American colleges.

Senators Rebel At Blank Check Plan for Relief

Bi-Party Attack Aimed at Funds to Continue Florida Canal.

By Felix Bruner.

Revolt against "blank check" relief appropriations flared in the Senate yesterday as a group of both Democrats and Republicans fought against the principle of allowing the President to obligate the Government to finish construction of large projects not authorized by Congress.

The specific controversy involved an amendment to the Army supply bill calling for additional appropriations for the Florida ship canal, but the dispute indicated the trend of the imminent battle over new relief appropriations.

Estimates of the cost of the canal run as high as $200,000,000, half the cost of the Panama Canal. The project was started by President Roosevelt under the works relief law without specific authorization by Congress. He has allotted $5,400,000 from the works fund and construction has been started. Congress is now being called upon to supply additional money to continue the work.

Fund Request Being Finished.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt was completing his relief message, which will be sent to Congress within three days. Speaker Byrns hinted that the amount might be less than $1,000,000,000 and that the sum would be intended to carry the load only until next January of February rather than for the entire fiscal year ending June 30, 1937.

Sentiment for investigation of administration of relief was growing as Senator Rush Holt (Democrat), West Virginia, returned from a visit to his home State prepared to resume today his attack upon Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator.

Senator Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, is pushing his demand for an investigation. He is expected to be joined by Senator Hastings (Republican), Delaware. Davis is author of a resolution asking for an inquiry.

Mayors Plead for WPA.

At the same time, the United States Conference of Mayors renewed its request for an appropriation of $2,400,000,000 to continue the relief program. The organization backed up its request with requests from mayors of 60 cities that WPA be continued.

The Senate fight started when Senator Fletcher (Democrat), Florida, introduced an amendment to the Army supply bill for a $20,000,000 appropriation to continue work on the canal and three other WPA projects. Of the amount, $12,000,000 would be used to continue canal construction. Debate on the amendment will continue today.

Oklahoma Vote Goes to Landon By Unit Rule

By the Associated Press.

Oklahoma City, March 16.—The Oklahoma Republican convention adopted the unit rule late today, assuring Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas the State's 21 votes for President at the national convention in Cleveland.

The State's six delegates-at-large were instructed to "vote and work for Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas for the Presidential nomination, and use every legitimate means to that end."

The delegates-at-large, with six district delegates already instructed for Landon, constitute a majority for the Kansan, and will control the delegation under the unit rule.

The delegates at large chosen are: Mrs. Carl Klick, Oklahoma City, active in the Young Republican movement; Lew Wentz, Ponca City oil man; W. B. Pine, Okmulgee, former United States Senator; Raymond G. Fields, Guthrie newspaper publisher; Grant McCullough, Tulsa party leader; Writ Franklin, Ardmore, independent oil producer.

Slogan Sounded.

James S. Twyford, Oklahoma City, the keynote speaker, sounded the slogan:

"Alf has both feet on the ground."

C. C. Hawk, retiring State chairman, ridiculed the charge of Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, that the "Standard Oil Co." was attempting to dominate the Oklahoma delegation.

He passed the hat to make up a State party deficit of $514.

"If we had that Standard Oil support, we wouldn't be in debt," he declared.

Resolutions were passed recommending re-election of W. G. Skelly, of Tulsa, as national committeeman, and Mrs. H. H. Sayre, of Ardmore, as national committeewoman.

The recommendations will be followed by the State's delegation, which fills the two positions.

Keynoter-Chairman.

Cleveland, March 16 (A).—Henry P. Fletcher, national chairman of the Republican Party, late today announced the keynoter-temporary chairman of the party's national convention would be named April 21.

Fletcher, after conferring with the convention's arrangements committee, said "not a single name was mentioned."

The Republican chairman said that for the first time in political history it was decided to have the keynoter's address at night, "at a

Roosevelts, Married 31 Years, Entertain at Dinner Tonight

By the Associated Press.

With spring wanderlust already upon them, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt today will celebrate their thirty-first wedding anniversary.

A quiet dinner for a few friends of long standing tonight to mark the anniversary will be one of their last in the White House for a few weeks. Thursday they leave for Florida and a vacation.

There Mr. Roosevelt will take his first fishing trip on the new Presidential yacht, Potomac—and that's what he likes best to do.

There Mrs. Roosevelt will start some "off-the-record" wandering until March 25—and that's what she likes best to do.

Wearing the Gibson Girl pin-on watch her husband designed as her wedding gift, Mrs. Roosevelt outlined these plans:

She will go to Warm Springs, Ga., with her husband, spend Friday there, travel on to see him receive a degree at Rollins College, Winter Park, Fla., Saturday, and then see him off upon his boat trip.

And what she'd do from then on she hadn't yet decided, she said.

At tonight's anniversary celebration Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Miller and Undersecretary of State Wil-

Farm Checks To Be Mailed As Vote Nears

400 Million Payments Starting in September Scored by Snell.

Davis Denies Attempts to Influence Election; Planting Rises.

By Robert C. Albright.

Flow of nearly $400,000,000 in AAA benefit checks to farmers cooperating in the Administration's new farm program will begin in September, two months before the general Presidential and Congressional elections, published hearings of a House Appropriations sub-committee disclosed yesterday.

Asked by Republicans if it were "merely a coincidence" that benefit payments formerly were "heaviest" in October, 1934, just before the last Congressional elections, Chester C. Davis, AAA farm administrator, denied the payments ever had been "so calculated as to have an influence on an election."

Testifying before the House group, Davis said that between 30,000,000 and 40,000,000 acres will be converted to soil-building purposes under the program, that it is impossible yet to give "precisely the basis for payments," but that disbursement of benefit checks probably would begin in September.

House minority members, who have charged that not only farm benefit payments, but relief funds as well, have been poured into doubtful districts just before election, sprang into action, challenging plans to distribute farm benefit checks on the next election eve.

Snell Critical.

"It is mighty funny that the only time they can find to pay out this money is a month or six weeks before elections," said House Republican Leader Bertrand H. Snell.

"In looking over these printed hearings, it does not seem to me that they have any more program in mind, or anything more definite, than they had before the original AAA. They don't know how many acres will be retired, how much will be paid per acre. They don't know anything definite, except that they are going to pay out a lot of checks before elections."

Representative Chester C. Bolton, of Ohio, chairman of the Republican Congressional campaign committee, sharply questioned Davis at the House hearings.

Bolton remarked on the "coincidence" of moving checks into circulation in October, 1934, and Representative Lloyd Thurston (Republican), of Iowa, added:

"There were some interesting coincidences about that time."

Cites Requests.

"Yes," retorted Davis, "I had a lot of them called to my attention, and I had Congressmen coming to me to ask if we could not arrange to get checks out in certain districts at a certain time, but the answer would be that they were in the flow."

"Would it not be possible to make the payment the following calendar year, at which time we would have more definite information?" asked Bolton.

Davis said it is the intention of the AAA to start making payments "as soon as a farmer can prove that he shifted the land from intensive use and that he put it into positive soil-building uses."

"As soon as that can be checked and verified and the papers come in and the payments can be made, they are going to be made," he said. "We say that August and September probably will be the months when they will start, because you cannot take a man's statement that he has taken, for instance, so much out of cotton. He has to show that he has used the land."

Denies Vote Influence.

Pressed on possible election use of the funds, Davis said:

"Of course we realize the natural apprehension that these payments might be so calculated as to have an influence on an election, but I

Loss of Relief Faces 15,000 Needy in D. C.

Leaders Plan to Drop Employables to Meet Fund Slash.

Speed on Appropriation Urged as Basis of Cut Is Revealed.

Discontinuance of direct relief for 5,000 "employable" cases being cared for by the District Board of Public Welfare and resumption of payment for the 4,100 "unemployable" cases on relief rolls seemed the likely outcome of the relief crisis precipitated last week-end by the Budget Bureau's slash of the requested supplemental relief appropriation for the next three months to $250,000.

At a special meeting yesterday, the welfare board and District Commissioners George E. Allen and Melvin C. Hazen decided to use the $250,000 for the relief of unemployables only, leaving the employables to shift for themselves, unless additional funds can be obtained. More than 15,000 persons are affected.

After the meeting, a special committee of welfare board members met with Representative James P. Buchanan, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, to urge him to consider a joint Congressional resolution that would make possible the immediate appropriation of relief funds.

Long Delay Feared.

Without such a resolution, it was pointed out, the District would have to wait passage of the deficiency bill, which might be a matter of months and would result in the imposition of unnecessary hardship upon those on relief.

Representative Buchanan assured the board members that the joint resolution would be considered at the next meeting of the Appropriations Committee, Wednesday, but indicated that he would oppose any attempt to raise the appropriation requested to include funds for employables.

"The dole must stop or our civilization will be demoralized," he told reporters after the conference. "When Congress passed the $4,800,000,000 appropriation we thought that direct relief for every able-bodied person was stopped."

Basis of Slash Revealed.

This distinction between the employables and unemployables—basis of the Federal Government's WPA policy—also was the basis on which Daniel W. Bell, acting head of the Budget Bureau, slashed the requested supplemental appropriation for relief from $808,000 to $250,000, it was revealed yesterday in a letter from President Roosevelt to Speaker Byrns.

To his letter requesting an appropriation of $250,000 "for the purpose of affording relief to residents of the District of Columbia who are unemployed or otherwise in distress because of the existing emergency," the President attached Bell's explanation of the appropriation.

In computing his estimate, the explanation showed, Bell used as a base the $1,506,000 figure for relief designed solely to meet the needs of unemployables, contained in the 1937 District appropriations bill recently passed by the House.

Bell pointed out that this involved $125,000 a month, and that since the welfare board had $125,000 on hand, only $250,000 additional would be needed until the start of the new fiscal year.

12,000 Now on WPA Jobs.

Under the new WPA relief setup inaugurated last winter, all unemployables were to be cared for by the local governments while all employables on the rolls by November 1 last were to be absorbed in works projects.

More than 12,000 cases in the District have been transferred to the WPA projects and the 5,000 "left-over" cases still on the District rolls are made up almost entirely of persons who were not on the rolls on November 1.

If the White House and Congress continue to refuse funds for the care of these employables, as seems likely, their only recourse, short of

How Many Feet Has Caucasian? New Deal Asks, Answers on Air

But First of $75,000 Radio Series Fails to Reach Climax on Reason Why Monkeys Scratch, Due to Delay From Audience's Laughter.

By the United Press.

The New Deal settled for all time last night, in a Nation-wide broadcast, the question of how many feet has a full-grown Caucasian.

Financed by a $75,000 Works Progress Administration grant and produced by 35 experts, under direction of William Dow Boutwell, the program opened with a spirited rendition of the tune "Good News" on an organ, and then swung promptly into some clever dialogue between Miss Information and Mr. Test Master.

There was so much giggling and so much guffawing on the part of actors and studio audience that the program never did reach its climax—concerning the real reason why monkeys scratch. This information was in the script, but the New Deal's first ten minutes on the air was used up before Mr. Test Master got an opportunity to explain that monkeys scratch not for what Miss Information was thinking about, but for dandruff.

Mr. Test Master opened the program with this question:

"How many feet in a Scotland Yard?"

Audience Laughs.

"Why, uh, 2 feet 11 inches, I suppost," Miss Information reported, snappy-like, while the radio audience laughed.

Then Mr. Test Master told Miss Information and all the radio listeners to get out their pencils and paper and listen closely because he was going to ask a lot of questions to see how smart they were. The band played "School Days," while the radio fans rustled for their writing materials. Then Mr. Test Master asked:

"Do you think a croquette ever makes a good wife?"

Miss Information giggled and Mr. Test Master told her to be quiet, please. His next question:

"Where would you go to buy a goober?"

Miss Information said she thought that was a sweet potato, but Mr.

Parley Bid Acceptance Is Intimated in Berlin Despite League Rebuff

Flandin Demands Speedy Sanctions

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

London, March 16.—France and Belgium today demanded the League of Nations Council adopt a resolution branding Germany a violator of the Locarno and Versailles treaties.

The action, preliminary to the Franco-Belgian demand for sanctions against Germany, followed virtual rejection of Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's conditional acceptance of the Council's invitation to participate in its deliberations.

After French Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin, in behalf of both France and Belgium, asked that Germany be declared a treaty violator, the Council adjourned until 3:30 p. m. tomorrow without voting on the resolution. Thus it postponed receiving a Franco-Belgian demand for punitive action against Germany.

Hitler's Conditions Rejected.

The Council, which sat in public session only 15 minutes, heard its president, Stanley Bruce, of Australia, announce that Joseph A. C. Avenol, League secretary general, had sent a new telegram to Germany, virtually rejecting Hitler's conditions on which his representatives would participate in the London discussions.

The formal Council session followed private sessions and two secret meetings.

The Franco-Belgian resolution showed conclusively that they intend to ask Great Britain and Italy to apply sanctions against the Reich.

The resolution, designed to unleash the Locarno Pact's punitive machinery, probably will be adopted tomorrow or Wednesday. Once this is done Great Britain and Italy automatically are bound to aid the French and Belgians.

The resolution was submitted publicly2after a stormy secret session during which Great Britain reportedly tried to persuade the French and Belgians not to submit their demands until Hitler had answered the Council's second telegram.

Will Consider Demands Today.

The British failed and it was announced officially that tomorrow's Council session will consider the Franco-Belgian demands.

The British merely succeeded in delaying a vote on the resolution until Hitler has had time to study the League's latest telegram.

In view of the curt nature of the telegram rejecting the major points in Hitler's demands, it is expected that Germany will not respond to the Council's invitation.

Flandin was red-faced as he read the joint Franco-Belgian resolution quickly, in a tense atmosphere.

British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden sat with his hand to his wrinkled brow. He played nervously with his watch chain.

Soviet Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff, looking immensely satisfied, twiddled his thumbs.

Earlier the Council avoided the onus of burning its bridges by partially accepting Hitler's first condition, that German representatives be received as equals. But it rejected the stipulation that Germany must have a vote in the Council's decision. That would have enabled the German delegate to block all votes under the Council's unanimity rule.

Germany Denied Vote.

Two resolutions adopted by the Council provided that Germany might participate in the deliberations with the same rights as other parties to the dispute but, like France and Belgium, might not vote.

The second resolution declared the Council not competent to consider Hitler's second condition—that the Council discuss his peace proposals as outlined in his Reichstag speech of March 7. This stipulation, it was decided, had to be submitted to the countries signatory to the Treaty of Locarno.

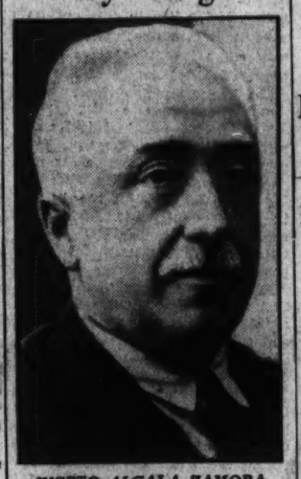
May Resign



NICETO ALCALA ZAMORA, President of Spain, who will resign, it is reported. Soldiers yesterday drove off alleged Communists who stormed the extensive properties owned by the President.

Spain Decrees 'State of Alarm' For One Month

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, March 16.—The Spanish cabinet tonight agreed to declare a state of alarm for a period of one month throughout the entire country after a series of political disorders which extended even to the estate of President Niceto Alcala Zamora.

The president signed a decree providing for the revision of all proceedings whereby Jesuit property was to be returned to the Society of Jesus. All orders authorizing the property return were suspended for re-examination.

The attack on the president's property, by mobs alleged by police to be Communists was part of a series of incidents which swept across Spain as the new Leftist parliament opened its first session.

Home Barricaded.

Senorita Torres' servants barricaded her home and staved off the mob until two trucks of storm police came to the rescue. The police removed the president's aunt to the jail of the city of Jaen for her personal safety. Also guarded there were three local priests and the Marques de Las Fuentes Del Moral.

Circles close to the president said he is prepared to present his resignation "at the moment he may deem opportune." He was said to be "seriously upset" by the recent developments in the political situation.

President Alcala Zamora signed a decree today prohibiting the removal from the country of currency sums in excess of 5,000 pesetos.

Terrified by Mercy Death Talk, 5 Flee Asylum; 2 Are Captured

By the Associated Press.

Salem, Oreg., March 16.—Dr. Roy Byrd, superintendent of the Oregon Feeble-Minded Home, said today five inmates, excited over a sociologist's discussion of mercy deaths for hopeless mental deficients, fled from their ward last night.

Two were captured quickly. Three others are at large.

Officials of the home claimed inmates became excited when they learned of a statement by Dr. S. B. Laughlin, Willamette University sociologist, advocating children beyond hope of rehabilitation be put to death with anesthetics.

Mrs. L. D. Idleman, head psychologist at the home, described scenes among the inmates as "pitiful."

"The patients are repeatedly asking whether they are to be chloroformed," she said. "They are badly excited and we may have more trouble unless they can be calmed."

Dr. Laughlin's statement provoked widespread comment. Physicians and sociologists over the country both supported and opposed the suggestion. A number said the proper approach to the problem is birth control.

The home here has 989 inmates, most of them described as hopeless cases.

Official Forecasts Reich Will be Represented in Pact Debate.

Press Paves Way For Participation

Hitler Lashes at France in Rhineland Speech; Hurls Defiance.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 16.—Adolf Hitler's acceptance of the League of Nations Council's decision in the Locarno Treaty dispute was foreshadowed here tonight by a government official who said "we probably will go" to London.

Simultaneously it was disclosed that Friedrich Gaus, one of the chief German delegates at the Locarno conference 11 years ago, has been in London since last Friday.

Should the chancellor accept the Council's decision, he is expected to send Joachim von Ribbentrop to represent the Nazi nation around the Council table.

Earlier, at Frankfort-on-Main, Hitler made his third campaign speech in the remilitarized Rhineland the vehicle of his bitterest attack upon France since his denunciation of the Locarno pact.

The press appeared to be preparing the way for the acceptance by calling the Council's reply to the Reichsfeuhrer "a new invitation on the basis of full equality."

Addressed Locarno Powers.

The German press uniformly says that Hitler did not ask the Council to consider his peace proposal, but "addressed this part of his Saturday's reply to the Locarno powers as distinguished from the Council."

Some sections expressed surprise that the Council "should have gotten so mixed up."

The press further says it is now possible at the end of the present Council sitting that a large conference will be called to take up Hitler's offer to negotiate a new peace treaty in Europe.

"The last paragraph of the Council's reply to the German government which can be regarded as a result of the complicated situation says 'regarding the second question it must be pointed out that it is not the task of the Council to give the German government the assurance which it wants,'" the Berlin Tageblatt reported. "This is right."

"The second condition of the Germany reply," the paper continued, "was the Reich's addition to its complete equality demand the assurance 'that the foreign powers in question are ready in due course to begin negotiations over the German proposals.'

Made No Request of Council.

"But Germany never requested this assurance from the Council. To the contrary, the last paragraph of the German reply said 'the German government for this purpose (to obtain this assurance) would contact the British government if conditions were borne out.'"

Hitler hurried back to Berlin tonight, following his Rhineland address.

Although his speech at Frankfort-on-Main was filled with standard declarations and appeals to the German people to stand behind him, it was pointed out that such phrases did not necessarily exclude diplomatic maneuvering.

The Reichsfuehrer's address was before one of many campaign mass meetings held throughout Germany on the "day of the defense force," celebrating the first anniversary of German rearmament in defiance of the Versailles Treaty.

Shortly before mounting the platform to the cheers of crowds crying "we want our Fuehrer," he had been told of the action of the League of Nations Council at London which rejected his offer to discuss new peace proposals as a condition to his representation at discussions of the scrapping of Locarno.

"If my proposals are rejected then, my German people, refuse to accept these rejections by standing behind me!" he shouted.

"It is impossible to refuse justice to people united like one man, to people who are masters in their own house," he declared.

He closed his hour-and-ten-minute speech with the assertion that Germany has extended her hand many times and that "more cannot be expected of us."

Again Denounces France.

The Reichsfuehrer was greeted by cheers that grew louder as he hurled defiance across Europe's frontiers and launched into an at-

Move to Discard Processing Tax Gains Strength

House Committee Members Scan Income Returns in Hope of Aid.

Fresh indications that the House Ways and Means Committee may discard processing taxes from the Administration's proposed $792,000,000 tax bill appeared yesterday, as tax draftsmen hopefully eyed early reports on the Treasury's first quarterly income tax returns.

Treasury officials unofficially were looking for a revenue increase of some $450,000,000, but Administration spokesmen said this would be no more than had been counted on before the President submitted his tax plans to Congress.

Following another day's session of the House tax sub-committee, Chairman Samuel B. Hill said no decision on processing taxes has been reached, and the committees had confined itself largely to administrative details of the proposed $620,000,000 tax on undisturbed corporate earnings. In other quarters a growing trend in sub-committee sentiment against processing taxes was reported, however.

Course Still Uncertain.

"I do not know yet whether we are going into processing taxes or any other kind of excise taxes," Hill told reporters. "But do not get the idea that we are not going to, for we may do so."

Asked if, in case income tax returns showed a heavy increase in anticipated revenues, this fact might influence the sub-committee's decision, Hill replied:

"If it shows that we are going to get a lot of money we do not now expect to get, it will relieve our burden to that extent. If we find that we need more money, the excise taxes are the most equitable that we can go to."

Representing Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, who left yesterday for a vacation in the South, Commissioner of Internal Revenue Guy T. Helvering appeared before the sub-committee again. Helvering will speak for the Treasury in tax matters while the Secretary is away, it was said.

Harrison Watches Closely.

Watching closely House committee proceedings, Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said his group will not get its tax studies under way until after the Hill sub-committee has completed deliberations. He predicted the Senate bill will not vary widely from the House measure.

The House has yet to go deeply into the proposed "windfall" taxes, reaching processing levies refunded under the Supreme Court rice millers' decision.

Although some $217,000,000 in refunded or unpaid processing taxes is the object of this special levy, sub-committee members believe the maximum amount they could recover is $150,000,000, and the probable amount, about $100,000,000.

Foreign Stockholders Angle.

Most of yesterday's session was passed in studying the problem of taxing the gains to foreign stockholders under the proposed corporation dividend tax. Hill said the sub-committee asked "more information."

"As a general proposition," he said, "we have decided that if we are to get this tax, it must be withheld at the source. How much to withhold, and the mechanics of the thing, we have not worked out.

"It must be some flat or arbitrary rate, because we do not have the same opportunities for working these things out as in the case of domestic taxes."

Hill said he thought such a tax could be imposed without invading treaty obligations.

Asked as to the possibilities of looking outside the President's recommendations for new taxes, Hill said:

"We have been working on the corporation tax plan practically all of the time. We have not given any thought whatsoever to other things. When we decide on this and get estimates of the revenue, we will know what more we need, and we are proceeding on that basis."

Early Report Is Hope.

The sub-committee hopes to complete its exploratory studies this week, and report to the full Ways and Means Committee, which will hold public hearings on their report.

Senator J. Hamilton Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois, yesterday introduced a Senate resolution proposing a tax on interest from some $20,000,000,000 of Government securities which he said are now exempt from direct taxation.

Several similar resolutions have been offered in House and Senate, but the Administration, faced with the necessity of floating billions of new bonds, never has militantly supported the proposal.

U. of M. Is Advised To Seek Tax Ruling

Baltimore, March 16 (AP).—The University of Maryland today was advised by Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor to appeal to the State tax commission to determine whether holding companies of college fraternity houses are exempted from taxation.

Declining to rule on a request from H. C. Byrd, president of the university, O'Conor pointed out that in previous cases it has been held that property belonging to a holding company was not tax free, even though used by a charitable or benevolent institution.

President Byrd asked whether holding companies, formed by fraternities to own fraternity houses, were tax exempt. He said they are "in one sense philanthropic and educational," and "have aided the university materially in relieving the housing congestion."

Senate Will Set Dangerous Precedent if it Approves Florida Canal Project Funds.

By Franklyn Waltman

IN considering the proposal to add $12,000,000 to the Army appropriation bill for the purpose of carrying on the Florida ship canal project during the next fiscal year, the Senate should give serious thought to the precedent which would be created by approval of that expenditure.

The House properly rejected the Administration's recommendation on that project and the Senate should do likewise—not particularly because the Florida project is of dubious merit, but on the broad ground of supporting orderly and rational fiscal policy. If the Senate does not, its action will form a precedent which may come back to harass Congress, with deleterious effects on sound budgetary procedure.

* * * *

The Florida canal project was not authorized by Congress, but gets its validity from a Presidential executive order allocating $5,000,000 of WPA money to it. Subsequently Mr. Roosevelt made available $400,000 additional of WPA money for the project.

Engineers variously estimate that the Florida canal will cost a total of between $160,000,000 and $200,000,000. Instead of undertaking to finance the entire cost of the project out of relief funds, the President requested Congress to carry on the work by adding $12,000,000 to the regular annual rivers and harbors appropriation for the project. If that is done, the remainder of the cost will have to be appropriated year by year until construction is completed.

Mr. Roosevelt, under the blanket authority voted to him by Congress over the spending of the last $4,800,000,000 relief fund, was well within his authority in undertaking the project, although his judgment might be questioned. But it is doubtful whether Mr. Roosevelt has the right to use relief funds, not to construct completely costly projects, but barely to start such projects and then to throw the burden on Congress to provide money for their completion in subsequent years.

Had Mr. Roosevelt allocated $160,000,000 or $200,000,000, whichever is the proper cost estimate for the Florida canal, the point raised here would not be pertinent. The belief existed when the $4,800,000,000 fund was voted that the President's ability to spend was limited to that sum.

But under the procedure being followed in the Florida ship canal there would be no limit. The President might well take $100,000,000 of relief money and by allocating it to start 20 different costly projects commit the Federal Government to eventual expenditures of $1,000,000,000 or more. What happens then to budget control and the power of parliament over the purse strings?

* * * *

In recent years it has been the huge so-called emergency expenditures which have been the basis of concern to those alarmed over the New Deal fiscal policies. Little attention has been paid to the so-called ordinary and permanent budget. But that budget has been rapidly increasing, as the regular departments have been expanded, as national defense appropriations have soared and as emergency relief projects, such as AAA and farm relief have been added to it.

Now if the Administration gets approval for its scheme to load the Florida ship canal and the Passamaquoddy Dam and, perhaps several other pre-New Deal projects inspired more by politics than economic sense, on the regular budget, the latter will reach a figure annually which might be impossible to cover with current revenue, except by the most painful taxation.

* * * *

Not a cent should be appropriated out of the general Treasury for the Florida canal until Congress has had an opportunity to study and examine the project. This would be not only sound fiscal policy but is the essence of democracy.

If the Federal Government can undertake construction of a canal said to be the longest in the world and to cost one-half as much as the Panama Canal without consulting Congress, why go through the farce of having a Congress? In this instance Congress is not even afforded the honor of being a rubber stamp.

And, in addition to rejecting the proposal to unload the Florida canal project on the Treasury for several years to come, Congress in the forthcoming relief bill should, in language specific and clear, forbid the use of any of the new appropriation for the commencement of any project that cannot be paid for out of the sum thus appropriated. If it does not do that, Congress will indeed give the President a blank check on the Treasury.

* * * *

As though it were not painful enough to be forced to pay Federal taxes for such projects as the Florida canal, Passamaquoddy, WPA marionette shows, and radio broadcasts on where to buy goobers, the Internal Revenue Bureau seems to delight in annoying the taxpayer in petty ways.

Income tax return form 1040 just happens to be a quarter of an inch too wide to fit in the large standard size envelope. In the name of efficiency, why should the harassed taxpayer who is trying to get his report in on the last day be forced to hunt all over town for an envelope in which this form will go?

Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, opened the attack with a point of order that the amendment constituted new legislation and therefore did not belong in an appropriation bill. The point was lost by a vote of 42 to 32, which was considered a test of opposition to "blanket" appropriations.

Twelve Republicans and 20 Democrats voted in favor of the point of order and in opposition to the amendment. Six Republicans, the 2 Farmer-Labor members and 34 Democrats voted against the point of order. The Republicans included Senator McNory, of Oregon, minority leader.

Clark contended that the President had no right to authorize expenditures in excess of the $4,880,000,000 appropriated in the old relief bill. Senator Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, replied that the relief law gave the President full authority. Senator Adams (Democrat), Colorado, joined with Clark in his contention.

"The law gave the President no authority to start projects on the installment plan, a million down and a million a year forever," Clark insisted.

"The President now has sufficient funds to complete the canal," Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, suggested.

"Then, why doesn't he do it?" asked Senator King (Democrat), Utah.

"Because he wants Congress to share the responsibility," Glass chuckled.

Attack by Vandenberg.

Following the vote on the point of order, Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, took up the fight, pointing out that the project, one of the biggest ever undertaken, had been turned down by the PWA and that there still was no adequate engineering report available for guidance of Congress.

"This is the first major waterway ever undertaken without authorization of Congress," he said. "There is not a scintilla of economic justification for it. This new appropriation is just an admission fee.

"The canal has been discussed romantically for 50 years but it never occurred to anybody to build it until easy money began to flow from the RFC and the PWA. It is an amazing experiment with the Treasury twice empty already. It is a totally extraordinary procedure that would be funny if it were not so sinister."

Vandenberg produced letters from shippers saying they were not interested and probably would not use the canal when it is finished. He said the ditch will be 200 miles long, twice as long as the Suez Canal, now the world's longest artificial waterway, and that passage would require 36 to 40 hours from open water to open water.

Vandenberg said the Commerce Department had estimated that if all available shipping should use the canal the saving would be about $6,000,000 a year "which would barely pay the interest on the cost."

The Michigan Senator recalled that fear had been expressed that the canal might contaminate the water supply of southern Florida through seepage of salt water into underground streams of fresh water.

"If you vote for this installment, you are morally committed to spend the balance," Vandenberg told the Senate.

The Florida waterway appropriation was proposed in the budget, but was rejected by the House. The Senate committee failed to write it into the bill. Similarly, the House has rejected an appropriation of $9,000,000 to continue work on the Passamaquoddy power project in Maine. The President has allotted $5,000,000 from relief funds for this development, which is expected to cost about $30,000,000.

Labor Is Cool To Roosevelt's Rail Pact Plea

Workers' Chairman Agrees to White House Parley Proposal, However.

By the Associated Press.

Spokesmen for railway labor told President Roosevelt yesterday they could not be expected to continue negotiating with management over rail consolidation differences "to the point of jeopardizing the rights and interests of those we represent."

The President, in a letter to J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, and J. A. Phillips, acting chairman of the Railway Labor Executives' Association, recently suggested that divergent views be worked out through conferences rather than legislation.

Reminding that "negotiations have been in progress for some time," Phillips wrote the President yesterday that:

"Coming as it did, in the midst of our negotiations, your letter was received with some surprise.

"It covers a multitude of points, which, because of the status of the negotiations, we feel a hesitancy to answer at this time."

Phillips said "the good faith" of rail labor was demonstrated by the fact that it had instituted negotiations.

"We believe," he continued, "that already a reasonable length of time has been devoted to the task. * * *

"However, we are meeting with the carriers' committee again today (yesterday), and, should negotiations fail, we will, in compliance with your request, arrange to confer with you."

After a lengthy conference between the groups, however, spokesmen said no tangible results were achieved yesterday, but another meeting would be held today.

In the background lis the question of whether rail labor will seek legislation to protect employes displaced by co-ordinations.

A spokesman for the Association of American Railroads said Pelley had not yet replied to the Roosevelt letter.

Meanwhile, general reduction of basic charges was held necessary last night by Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, if railroads "are going to survive their present interest."

Speaking on the radio, Wheeler said "the old high-handed freebooting days of railroading are done."

He said motor competition has stirred "the sleepy giant, the railroad monopoly, into almost unheard-of activity. And perhaps it will be this activity which will save him."

Commenting on the recent slash in passenger rates decreed by the Interstate Commerce Commission, Wheeler contended various experiments with low fares had proved beneficial.

He argued that if sinking funds were set up by the roads to pay off bonded debts they would "no longer be the playthings of the speculators."

time when people not able to attend personally may hear the speech broadcast."

Borah Denies Attack

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, denied yesterday that he was attacking Gov. Alfred M. Landon of Kansas when he charged that the Standard Oil Co. would direct the selection of Oklahoma delegates to the Republican National Convention.

In a telegram to Louis Levand, publisher of the Wichta (Kans.) Beacon, Borah said:

"Replying to your telegram, I made no reference, directly or indirectly, to Gov. Landon. I denounced the Standard Oil Co. for its activities in trying to secure an uninstructed delegation and for its activities in seeking to control such delegation. Because I denounced the Standard Oil Co. you charge I am attacking Gov. Landon My only aim was to drive this sinister influence out of Republican politics and to give the people of Oklahoma a chance to select their own delegates. Now you claim in doing this I am attacking Gov. Landon. Insofar as my charges go, I am prepared to support them. I think you owe Gov. Landon an apology for your blundering defense of him when no defense was called for."

The Associated Press reported that in a telephone interview with the Tulsa (Okla.) Tribune, Wirt Franklin, president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, denied that the Standard any longer had monopolistic tendencies, and that any charge that Landon is opposed to the interests of the independent oil operator is false.

Fish "Not Surprised."

Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New Yoark, commenting on the selection of delegates in Oklahoma, said he was "not a bit surprised to hear that W. G. Skelly, of the Skelly Oil Co., affiliated with the Standard Oil group, and Republican national committeeman from Oklahoma, has succeeded in delivering the Republican delegates to Gov. Landon."

Appeal to U. S., La Follette Tells WPA Strikers

Governor Washes Hands of Wisconsin Capitol Siege as Threats Fly.

By the United Press.

Madison, Wis., March 16.—Gov. Philip M. La Follette tonight washed his hands of the strike of 100 WPA workers entrenched in the statehouse since Thursday and told them to take their troubles to Federal authorities.

In a conference with strike leaders, La Follette said he was without power over WPA and helpless to aid them in their battle for higher wages. Six of the strikers had invaded his office to "put the heat" on him.

His announcement climaxed a dramatic scene in which the strikers threatened to bring their wives and children to the capitol to "starve alongside of us."

"Can't Be Scared."

La Follette, after listening to threats, delivered this ultimatum:

"One thing about this guy here," he said, referring to himself, "and that is that you can't scare him."

He referred the workers to Regional WPA Director F. R. Shanley, who flew here from Chicago today at the Governor's request.

The strikers insisted that Shanley come before them, refused to send a delegation to him, and began to picket La Follette's office after attacking him as a "wishy-washy liberal" and a "foxy politician."

Meanwhile, State WPA headquarters charged that two of the strike leaders—Lyle Olson and Irvin Cohen—were not WPA workers, but organizers for the Wisconsin Workers Alliance, a labor organization.

Tenants to Be Checked.

Officials said they would question the capitol "tenants" to determine how many of the men sleeping there and eating free meals, prepared by WPA cooks, actually were striking workers.

When La Follette told the delegation he had no power to aid their cause, one striker asked:

"Does that mean we have to make a march on Washington?"

"That certainly would be more effective than a march on someone who lacks authority," La Follette replied.

"Well, we're going to camp here in the capitol and make Washington come to us," he was told.

Bank Withdrawals Limited in Rhineland

The bank at Bergzabern, across the frontier from Wissembourg, limited withdrawals to 40 marks for each depositor. At Saarlouis the limit was 30 marks.

Residents of Trier were reported seeking to deposit their money in Holland or France.

Housing Chiefs See Roosevelt, Plan Program

Relief Funds Considered to Finance New National Activity.

A national housing program will be ready for President Roosevelt's attention when he returns from his contemplated three-week Florida vacation, Administration housing chiefs announced last night after a three-hour conference with the President.

At present uncertain of many important details, but agreed on the whole, they stated that the method of financing housing by relief funds had been considered.

Stewart McDonald, Federal housing administrator, who attended the conference with John Fahey, chairman of the Home Loan Bank Board; Peter Grimm, Treasury housing expert, and Gov. Marriner S. Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board, said no new agencies would be created.

He outlined the probabilities as including Federal aid for low-cost housing and slum clearance, and encouraging of private capital to build homes for middle-income groups.

The conferees stated that the President, who said recently that he hadn't been able to find any two housing experts who agreed on anything, had outlined his views.

The problem giving the most trouble, they said, was how to provide Government aid for slum clearance and for low cost housing without conflicting with the present upturn in the building trades privately financed.

McDonald, in testimony before the Senate Banking Committee, had already revealed plans to cut the FHA pay roll 30 per cent and to reduce the agency's liability for insurance by 50 per cent.

liam Phillips will be guests. The President's mother may travel from Hyde Park to be present, but none of the children is coming.

Gifts Are Uncertain.

Whether the Roosevelts will give each other anniversary presents was not mentioned by the First Lady. But if they do, Mrs. Roosevelt made one thing clear—hers to the President would not be a spare set of white studs for white waistcoats, to preclude such emergencies as that in which he recently wore black studs with a full dress costume.

She gave two reasons: (1), such a gift is expensive. (2), he prefers pictures, books, original letters for his unending collections.

Where the President will board his boat, and when he'll return here are secrets, but "a week or ten days" is set as the duration of the fishing trip.

Postmaster Named.

Nomination of Henry A. Storm as postmaster at McLean, Va., was sent to the Senate yesterday by President Roosevelt, according to the Associated Press.

Land Law on Aliens In Arizona Upheld

Phoenix, Ariz., March 16 (AP).—Arizona's alien land law—used in an effort to halt Japanese farming in the fertile Salt River Valley—was held constitutional by the State Supreme Court today.

The opinion warned violators the statute "has real teeth in it."

The court, however, dismissed restraining orders issued by the Maricopa County Superior Court to halt five Japanese from cultivting valley land. The dismissal was ordered on the grounds neither "the evidence nor the findings of fact" support the judgment.

The decision was written in the appeal of N. Takiguchi and applied equally to the cases of four other Japanese.

The Japanese were convicted in September, 1934, and enjoined from cultivating their lands on the grounds they were ineligible aliens.

They were prosecuted as the result of a campaign by American farmers to drive them from the valley. Several bombs were tossed in the vicinity of Japanese homes and for a time international complications threatened.

Mdivani Rites Await Arrival Of Widow's Kin

James Van Alen Reported on Way to Florida by Special Plane.

By the Associated Press.

Palm Beach, Fla., March 16.—The aristocratic Van Alens tonight pondered funeral arrangements for the second of the Mdivani princes to marry into their family and to die a violent death.

They had reached no decision, however, on the obsequies for Prince Serge, Louise Astor van Alen's bridegroom of a month who was killed by a kick of his polo pony in the midst of a Sunday game.

Prince Serge's brother, Alexis, who was killed in an automobile accident in Spain last year, had been the first husband of the Van Alen heiress. They were divorced, however, before his death, and he later was married and divorced from Barbara Hutton, now the Countess Court von Haugwitz-Reventlow.

Wait Brother's Arrival.

Friends said the Van Alens were awaiting the arrival of James van Alen, brother of the bereaved princess, reported coming by special plane from his northern home, before deciding definitely.

It was understood services probably will be held at the villa here tomorrow, after which Serge's body will be sent by train to Newport or Providence, R. I., for burial.

One thing, at least, was certain—he would not be buried in Palm Beach. This exclusive resort of the socially elect has no cemetery, although West Palm Beach, just across Lake Worth, has.

Louise Van Alen Mdivani stood in the rain at the Gulf Stream polo field near Delray Beach yesterday and dry-eyed watched her second "prince charming" die.

She did not weep during the hour that physicians worked over him in a vain effort to save his life.

Once at home, however, she and her mother, Mrs. James Laurens Van Alen who was described as deeply attached to both her Mdivani sons-in-law, broke down and spent last night under physicians' care.

Participants in yesterday's game for the Southeastern polo championship, in which the Texans were leading, 4 to 2, when Mdivani's fatal injury brought suspension of play, revealed he violated rules when he charged his mount across the line of play in a desperate reach.

Fault Already Called.

A fault already had been called by the referee, they said, before Mdivani's mount crashed into that ridden by Cecil Smith, eight-goal man heading the Texans, and Serge went down to die beneath the flying hoofs of his rearing mount.

They were emphatic, however, in stressing the Georgian's sportsmanship.

While fellow players were reluctant to discuss Mdivani's ability at polo lest their remarks be construed as reflection on the dead man, they said—asking their names be not used—he was not an experienced polo'st and occasionally, without intention, committed faults.

"It takes about 10 years to 'season' a polo player," said one, and "the prince had been playing but a comparatively short time.

"But his game had improved wonderfully in the past year * * * still, that did not overcome the fact he was playing 'over his head' against men with handicaps of 5 or more goals." (Mdivani's handicap was zero.)

All said Mdivani's mount was well trained. His confidential secretary, Robert O'Malley, Los Angeles, said today he had once warned the prince against playing "green" mounts, but that Mdivani laughed at his caution.

Serge's sister, Mme. Jose M. Sert, wife of the noted Catalan artist, was reported prostrated at her Paris home, where she went after grief over Alexis' death caused her to give up her estate in Spain. Twice she telephoned Palm Beach last night.

Reported on the high seas was the third, and youngest, of the Mdivanis, David, groomsman in Serge's wedding here Febrdary 8, who was understood locally to be en route to England aboard the Ile de France.

Irish Will Shun War In Europe, Envoy Says

Miami Beach, Fla., March 16 (AP).—Ireland doesn't want to fight, the Free State's Minister to Washington said today, and will stay out of any European war.

However, Michael MacWhite, vacationing here, said he believes the present threatening situation growing out of the movement of German troops into the Rhineland "will eventually be cleared up by peaceful negotiation."

"A lot of 'face-saving' is going on," he said.

50,000 Sought As Vigilantes In Akron Strike

Ex-Mayor Calls on Citizens to Preserve Order; Ban on Gun Sales Asked.

By the United Press.

Akron, Ohio, March 16.—Fifty thousand vigilantes were asked for tonight to preserve "law and order" in the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. strike. Simultaneously, the Federal Government appealed again for a peaceful settlement. None appeared imminent.

President Paul W. Litchfield, of the Goodyear Co., charged tonight in a telegram to Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins that forces supporting the Goodyear strike "would block any settlement because peace is not their objective."

Answering her appeal for a "just, fair and honorable settlement," Litchfield said that a vast majority of his employes "are not now and have not been in sympathy with this strike, but by force have been prevented from working."

Miss Perkins had urged Litchfield to resume negotiations with employes. A similar appeal to the union was not examined at the local's headquarters pending return of John House, youthful local president, from Columbus.

L. C. Nelson Sparks, fighting former mayor of Akron, who was sworn in as a special deputy sheriff after Unionists shouted down a Goodyear peace proposal, renewed his plea for "50,000 vigilantes by tonight." He charged that radicals have "lighted the fires of disorder" and pledged that his vigilantes would tell them "to get the hell out of here." Sparks said he had enlisted 25,000 citizens.

Two other civilian groups were being mobilized.

The newest of the three was the "Security Club," an organization of nonstrikers, led by L. D. Holtz. Holtz reported he had 6,000 volunteers.

The United Rubber Workers Union called for mobilization of all union war veterans to "preserve peace."

Reports were circulated that Goodyear planned to reopen the three plants which were closed four weeks ago after 70 veteran tire builders were dismissed.

City and county officers met with Mayor L. D. Schroy to decide what action to take in such emergency. After the meeting, Police Chief Frank Boss asked all Akron dealers in guns and ammunition to keep their stocks out of sight and to stop sales.

Renewal of N.Y. Service Strike Is Union Threat

Lockout Charged by Labor Official; Board Accused of 'Bad Faith.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 16.—The possibility of a new strike of building service employes arose tonight, as union leaders charged that 2,000 elevator operators and allied building employes had been locked out when they returned to work today, under an arbitration agreement reached early yesterday.

There will be "a bigger rumpus than ever," declared James J. Bambrick, head of the Building Service Workers Union, "if the realty advisory board doesn't keep its word and reinstate the strikers."

He said 5,800 men already had walked out in sympathy with those locked out.

Bambrick said the realty board had signed the agreement ending a 15-day strike in "bad faith," and with no intention of living up to it.

"This is a well-designed scheme on the part of the board," he declared, "for locking union members out of buildings where they were formerly employed.

"We consider this a wholesale lockout. They agreed unequivocally to take our men back. I think they got together yesterday and sabotaged the agreement."

In reply to Bambrick's charges, William Rawlins, executive secretary of the realty board, said:

"There is evidence that the union itself has acted in bad faith, by the appearance before 9 a. m. of strikers with 'lockout' signs, which obviously had been printed in advance."

He said it was clearly understood that strikers would not be taken back in cases where they had been guilty of violence, and where their jobs had been filled by replacements hired with the assurance of permanent work.

Briton Admits Extortion Plan In Hutton Hoax

Detectives Arrest Man as He Calls for 'Ransom' Package.

By the Associated Press.

Manchester, England, March 16.—A jobless Englishman was jailed today after police said he admitted attempting to extort £200 (about $1,000) by an offer to disclose a kidnap plot against the 3-week-old son of Countess Barbara Hutton Haugwitz-Reventlow.

Police said Alfred Molyneux, 21, of Lancashire, confessed, saying:

"I admit I wrote the letter, knowing perfectly well that I know of no such plot or any persons who intended to kidnap the child. I wrote it in moments of depression, as I was without money and with a wife and two children to support on 30 shillings ($7.50) a week.

"I sincerely regret my action and hope I have not caused the count and countess any worry or anxiety."

Molyneux was trapped by police when he went to collect the money. A letter he had written the countess, which her lawyer gave to police, told her:

"Let your messenger be outside the long bar at the Gaumont Picture Theater March 14 at 7 p. m. and let him have a red silk handkerchief in his left hand.

"He will be asked, 'Daily?' and must reply, 'No, weekly.'

"If you intend to heed this, put an answer in the personal column of the Manchester Evening Chronicle March 12."

The advertisement was inserted and an inspector bearing a dummy package stood outside the theater as directed. Other detectives watched nearby.

Molyneux, it was testified at a hearing today, was arrested when he appeared and received the package. The defendant did not testify, saying he had nothing to add to his statement to police. He is charged with attempting "to obtain by false pretenses and fraudulent pretenses £200 from Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow.

Detective Inspector Forster testified the countess received a letter March 7 at her London home reading:

"Dear Countess:

"I have read of your having a charming little son. Now don't get pannicky.

"You should know that two men have left Manchester to kidnap this son and you'd be surprised to hear what elaborate plans have been made for his confinement while they wait for the ransom they intend to demand from you.

"If you would learn of these plans, please send some one to meet me in Manchester at once and I will let you know what I know.

"Do not get the police or I shan't talk. Please be sure to bring £200 in treasury notes."

The letter added "I am doing this for revenge. Money does not matter so much," and gave the instructions.

The countess' baby was born February 24. The countess, heir to Woolworth millions, was married last May to the Danish nobleman.

She had been divorced the day before from Prince Alexis Mdivani, killed last August in an automobile wreck in Spain. He was a brother of Prince Serge Mdivani, fatally injured Sunday in a polo accident in Florida.

Soviet Admits Failure To Increase Industry

Moscow, March 16 (AP).—The Soviet government admitted tonight development of the Stakhanoff movement to increase industrial production has failed to live up to expectations and ordered immediate steps to eradicate sabotage and bureaucracy, held responsible for the failure.

Directors of the chief branches of heavy industry and managers of many factories and mines were summoned into conference by Commissar of Heavy Industry Ordzhonikidze, who told them the shortcomings of production must be overcome in April.

Resumes Long Sleep

LUCILLE HARTLESS.

Girl Who Slept 18 Weeks Falls In Coma Again

Lucile Hartless, 15, Being Fed With Tube; Shows No Loss of Weight.

By the Associated Press.

Lynchburg, Va., March 16.—Lucile Hartless, 15, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Hartless, of Timber Lake road, who awoke January 10 after a deep slumber of 18 weeks' duration, has lapsed into a coma again.

When she will emerge again this time, her doctors cannot tell. However, her sleep is not quite so death-like as the one that prevailed last autumn, as an aftermath of what was believed to be influenza of the brain and a slight attack of infantile paralysis.

She is being fed through a slender rubber tube inserted through the nostrils. Apparently she is not suffering from lack of nourishment, since she appears to be keeping her weight.

The girl, whose plight attracted wide attention several months ago, began to reveal signs of returning to her long sleep about a week ago. Recently she was moved back to Lynchburg Hospital. Her parents, first greatly encouraged over her condition, were dismayed as Lucile gradually became less and less responsive, finally dropping off to sleep.

Last January, Lucile woke with a start after revealing signs of returning consciousness for several days prior to the 10th. She didn't know that Christmas had come and gone, that there was a new baby at her home, and that it was winter, instead of summer when she went to sleep.

J. Edgar Hoover Gains After Sinus Operation

Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, was recovering last night from an operation for sinus infection on Saturday.

Aids said Hoover was much better and might be back at work in a week or so if recovery continued.

The trouble became bothersome after Hoover returned from a rest in Florida recently, but he addressed a crime-prevention conference in New York last week nevertheless.

Mother Gives 2 Children Away To End Hunger

Paternal Grandmother to Contest 'Gift' of Pair to Strangers.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, March 16.—Mrs. Linda Jones, 22, said tonight she had found happiness by giving her children to strangers—to save them from "hardships and hunger."

But the children's paternal grandmother said their father would investigate the action of his estranged wife before he would consent to their adoption.

Mrs. Jones told how she enlisted the help of a woman friend in obtaining new homes for two of her three children.

"My neighbor wants to give her baby away," the friend, Mrs. Kathleen Eder, told passersby in a nearby park.

So it was that Mrs. Einar Sorensen visited Mrs. Jones' drab basement room. Mrs. Jones said she had given Mrs. Sorensen permission to adopt baby, Dolores Jones. But officials of the State department of social welfare said permission also must be obtained from the father, Marion E. Jones, a plasterer.

The young mother said she did not know to whom Marion Edward, jr., 2, had been given.

"I know he has a lovely home," she insisted. "I'm satisfied with that.

"I was desperate," explained the young mother. "There was nothing ahead of the children but hardships and hunger. They were undernourished."

Mrs. C. H. Hess, Jones' mother, said in San Bruno that he is "certainly going to investigate" his wife's action.

"She does not have exclusive right to the children," Mrs. Hess declared. "My son and his wife never have been divorced."

The couple's third child, Edna, 3, lives with the father.

LANGROCK FINE CLOTHES

"Listen to this"

"Remember when I thought I was smart and saving money, and bought that Stylo suit for $28.50? Well, it lasted just a few months. It cost me about $57.00 a year to wear it, and it never did fit or look RIGHT.

Over in that closet, there's a $45 LANGROCK suit that has already seen three years of hard service, and it's still going strong. That soft construction, I've found, is what makes it keep its shape indefinitely. That suit always looks swell!

Let's take a run over to see the new Spring models. They tell me LANGROCK has some mighty smart numbers this year . . . and I'm adding another to my wardrobe."

3-Year-Old Boy Safe After Day In Dust Storm

By the Associated Press.

Lamar, Colo., March 16.—Frost-nipped toes and tiny sand burr wounds were all that bothered 3-year-old Stevie Benson tonight, after almost 24 hours spent in southern Colorado's worst dust storm of the year.

For him, safe in a hospital bed here, the removal of the prickly sand burrs was much worse than his night in the dust storm.

"I slept out," announced Stevie today, as he walked into the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Fetters, 6 miles from his home. "I'm hungry."

Black Roller Cloud.

Behind him 1,000 persons were searching in the wake of a "black roller" dust cloud that swept across the ranch country, turning daylight to darkness, as Stevie wandered away yesterday.

Dust covered his body, and his tiny feet bristled with burrs. He held his shoes in his hand. Rivulets of mud caked his tear-streaked cheeks.

While he was eating with Mr. and Mrs. Fetters, L. E. Walker and W. A. Gradehouse, members of a searching party, stopped at the house for water.

"Why, that's the boy we're hunting;" they exclaimed.

Searching Parties.

On the way home he fell asleep. When the party reached the Benson home, only the boy's grandmother, Mrs. Bert Fritz, was there. The father and mother were out with searching parties.

Members of a party of CCC youths passed through the field where the boy slept last night, but they did not see him.

Apparently he had huddled into a hollow in the prairie, and remained there for hours, while the dust, so dense it seemed almost solid, swirled about him.

Meteor Fragment Identified in N. J.

New Brunswick, N. J., March 16 (AP).—Rutgers University scientists declared today at a metallic object which crashed through a Red Bank garage "appeared to be a genuine fragment" of the blazing meteor which streaked over New Jersey.

Three other metal fragments found in widely separated towns were to be examined to determine if they were shed by the meteor which shot across the sky early Saturday morning and vanished eastward.

Prof. George Winchester, head of the Rutgers physics department, who inspected the cylindrical 1-pound object which bored through the Red Bank garage said it seemed to be almost pure iron. Dr. Helgi Johnson, assistant professor of geology, and Dr. Robert Atkinson, associate professor of physics and astronomy instructor, agreed the metal was apparently part of a meteor.

PWA Unionists Strike Against WPA Wages

St. Louis, March 16 (AP).—About 2,000 members of building trades unions went on strike today on 22 Public Works Administration projects in St. Louis and St. Louis County in protest against the wage scale of the Works Progress Administration.

The St. Louis Building Trades Council, which called the walkout, demanded that the WPA pay prevailing union wages for skilled workmen instead of "security" wages of $55 to $95 a month, contending union rates were paid for WPA work in New York, Chicago and other cities.

The strike stopped all work on PWA projects on which only union labor is employed.

Reporter Calls 'Victories' Of Italy Propaganda

Boston, March 16 (AP).—Linton Wells, American correspondent, returning from the Ethiopian war zone, said today Italian reports of "smashing victories" were "purely propaganda."

Wells arrived aboard the S. S. Exochorda, which put in here to discharge passengers before going to New York tomorrow.

He reported the Italian people grumbling over the high cost and scarcity of food because of League of Nations sanctions.

Wells said the slowing up of trade because of sanctions made three of Italy's principal ports seem like dead cities.

New Deal Radio Skit

Test Master told her she was wrong again, before he shot this query:

A Caucasian's Legs.

"How many legs has a full-grown Caucasian?"

Next he asked:

"What kind of material do you need to make a gusset?"

"You mean a chicken's gusset?" asked Miss Information.

"Gusset, not gullet," growled Mr. Test Master.

"Oh, gusset!" exclaimed Miss Information. "A gusset apple?"

"That's russet," snapped Mr. Test Master, out of patience. "I said 'gusset'—and if you must talk any more, talk on your fingers."

"Did George Washington write the Monroe Doctrine?"

"What seven States are included in the Tennessee Valley?"

"What do the initials U. S. S. R. stand for?"

He was in the midst of asking in what country Mussolini functioned as king, when Miss Information cried in pain.

Sprained Her Hand.

"I was trying to talk on my fingers and you didn't hear me," she explained, "so I talked louder and sprained my hand."

By then the 10 minutes were growing short and Mr. Test Master started talking like a trip-hammer, omitting large chunks of his script. He did get around to the question of feet for Caucasians, though, and said every Caucasian (with the possible exception of one-legged ones) has two feet.

Tune in again at the same time tomorrow night, kiddies, and Uncle Sam'll be on the job with more fun, music and education. He will be broadcasting twice a week, in fact, until the $75,000 runs out, which Boutwell figures will be in September.

Franco Regime Arrests Paraguay Communists

Buenos Aires, March 16 (AP).—Reports from Asuncion today disclosed that Communists are the first to feel the weight of the new Paraguayan government's decree declaring Paraguay a totalitarian state.

Several Communist leaders were arrested in Paraguay over the week-end and deported to Argentina. They included Oscar Crydet, former student leader.

The Communist Party long had been banned from Paraguay, but when Col. Rafael Franco overthrew the Ayala government by revolution last month, the Communists resumed their activities.

As president, however, Col. Franco banned all political activities except "those emanating from the state and the liberating revolution."

Job Surety Law Of N. Y. Ruled Void by Court

Judge Denies Injunction; Calls Use of Funds Unconstitutional.

By the Associated Press.

Albany, N. Y., March 16.—New York State's unemployment insurance law was declared unconstitutional by a Supreme Court justice today, and Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., immediately announced plans for an immediate appeal to the Court of Appeals—the State's highest tribunal.

Supreme Court Justice Pierce H. Russell held the law invalid.

He refused, however, to grant an injunction asked by the Associated Industries of New York State. He explained he did not wish to stop the State's job insurance machinery from operating, before the Court of Appeals had passed on the law's constitutionality.

Justice's Opinion.

Justice Russell said:

"It is my opinion that the compulsory contribution by an employer, to be paid as an unemployment insurance benefit to an employe of another, is without validity under our present system of government, and constitutes unwarranted, unreasonable and arbitrary transfer of the property of one to another, in violation of the due process clause of the Constitution."

Today's decision came close on the heels of another by Supreme Court Justice William F. Dowling, of Utica, that the law was constitutional in all its provisions, except that relating to strikers and discharged employes.

His opinion was delivered in an action brought by W. H. H. Chamberlin, Inc., and E. C. Stearns & Co., of Syracuse, attacking the validity of the law.

Argument of Appeal.

Argument of an appeal from this decision is scheduled Thursday, before the Court of Appeals.

Justice Russell said he based his decision on the United States Supreme Court's due process interpretation in the Railroad Retirement Board case.

"As the courts of this State are bound to follow such decisions, in cases where its interpretation of the Constitution applies, then it is decisive upon the validity of the unemployment insurance law of this State," he wrote.

The State law applies to employers who hire four or more persons. Benefits become payable March 1, 1938.

Creates Unemployment.

Justice Russell said the State contended that industry creates unemployment, and therefore should pay toward the cost of mitigating it.

"I do not agree," he declared, "with the premise that unemployment is caused by the omission of any legal duty, or the commission of any wrong, by industry as such, or that the burden to maintain a condition of employment is one that industry assumes and must discharge.

"Industry lives and thrives on employment of its workers. It dries up and dies when its condition precludes the employment of workers, and when it is so burdened by exactions that its condition demands such preclusion, then loss and misfortune follow both to it and its employes."

New York State's unemployment insurance law is similar to the national law.

U. S. Dentist's Wife Shot by Brahmin

Georgetown, British Guiana, March 16 (AP).—Doctors sought today to save the life of Mrs. Rona Whitney, 20, wife of an American dentist, who, police said, was shot yesterday by Ramsubhag Misir, wealthy Brahmin Indian, who later killed himself.

Police said the shooting brought an end to a three-month romance that started when Mrs. Whitney arrived here with her 5-year-old daughter, Gloria, from Jamaica. Misir left an Indian wife to whom he had been married nine years.

Mrs. Whitney married Dr. Cephas Whitney, American-born dentist, at the age of 14 and lived here with her husband until two years ago, police said.

The dentist's young daughter was a witness to the shooting.

Treaties' Sanctity Urged at Vatican

Vatican City, March 16 (AP).—The Vatican newspaper, Osservatore Romano, appealed to the nations to regard the sanctity of treaties in a front page editorial today.

Quoting an old Latin saying that national safety is the supreme law, the newspaper said that, in international affairs, a treaty garanteed by invulnerable reciprocal faith brings public safety for all nations and thus becomes a common supreme law.

"There does not exist any other principle or other force," said the newspaper, "which can assure justice, inspire and regulate customs, give stability to international life, and constitute a safeguard of civilization."

2 Police Indicted.

Fatal Shooting Of Girl Roomer Told on Stand

Events preceding the fatal shooting of Virgie Lyttle, 25-year-old department store clerk, were described by witnesses yesterday at the trial of Charles F. Hisey, 53-year-old printer, charged with murdering her.

The shooting took place the morning of August 20, in the Hisey home, 414 Rittenhouse street northwest, where Miss Lyttle was a roomer.

Miss Girlie Garrett, who was in an adjoining room when the killing occurred, said she heard Miss Lyttle cry out:

"I can't, Mr. Hisey. Get away!"

In Excited Voice.

Then, Miss Garrett said, she heard Hisey, in an excited voice, say:

"Listen, Virgie——"

After a moment's silence, she said, she heard a shot. Later on, according to Miss Garrett, Hisey said to his wife:

"Mick, I hated to do it."

She said that Hisey had tried to persuade her sister to accept the $200 loan, so that she could repay a "boy friend" in Hopewell, Va.

Irvin Goldstein, assistant United States attorney, pictured Hisey as a cold-blooded, scheming murderer. He said Hisey purchased the revolver only three days before the killing, planning then to kill Miss Lyttle. Hisey had been paying attentions to the girl, Goldstein said, and apparently shot her when she refused to accept a loan of $200, to tide her over a financial emergency.

Killed Accidentally.

Nugent Dodds, attorney for Hisey, said he would show that Hisey was despondent, that he had been drinking a half-gallon of whisky a day for some time, and that he planned to commit suicide. He would further show, he said, that Miss Lyttle was killed accidentally when she tried to thwart Hisey from killing himself.

Miss Esther Mae Lyttle, sister of the slain girl, told of an automobile ride, which she and Virgie took downtown with Mr. and Mrs. Hisey. Mrs. Hisey, she recalled, cautioned her husband about his reckless driving, and she quoted Hisey as saying:

"It doesn't matter to me; I have nothing to live for."

The prosecution tried to show that Hisey had a special interest in Virgie, while the defense sought to picture his interest as paternal.

Miss Lyttle said that Hisey treated her, Virgie and Miss Garrett "like a father."

But Miss Garrett testified that, when she and Virgie went riding with Hisey, he always asked Virgie to sit on the front seat with him. And on one occasion, she said, Hisey asked that Virgie remain in the car with him, so that he could talk with her alone.

Another witness was Policeman Robert I. Talbert, who arrested Hisey, after the latter had shot him in the shoulder. He said Hisey had a "peculiar" look.

The case may go to the jury today.

Unnamed Woman Pays $1,253,773 Gift Tax

New York, March 16 (AP).—Almon G. Rasquin, collector of internal revenue in Brooklyn, opened a letter today—and found in it a check for $1,253,773.40.

It was, he learned, a gift-tax payment made by a woman living in Nassau County, whose name Rasquin did not disclose. He said the amount of the tax indicated she had given away about $3,000,000.

Beatty Is Buried Near Lord Nelson

London, March 16 (AP).—Earl Beatty, hero of the Battle of Jutland, who was raised to the peerage after the World War, was buried beneath St. Paul's Cathedral today near the tombs of Earl Jellicoe and Lord Nelson.

The Archbishop of Canterbury paid a final tribute to the admiral, comparing his "passion for victory" with that of Nelson.

The body wa borne through the streets in a solemn procession from the Horse Guards Parade at Whitehall and through the Admiralty Arch.

The coffin was drawn on a gun carriage by naval ratings. Covering it was the Union Jack, which flew from the Lion, flagship of the battle cruiser squadron commanded by Beatty at Jutland. Eight admirals were among the pallbearers. The Duke of York represented the King in the procession.

Lawyer Kills 2, Self, In Swedish Courtroom

Nykoping, Sweden, March 16 (AP). A demented lawyer killed the prosecutor and a witness in a courtroom today, then committed suicide.

The lawyer, named Willen, had been disbarred. He rose in the rear of the courtroom, pulled out two revolvers and started firing.

He killed Prosecutor Cederbrum and a witness named Anderson.

Two bullets were embedded in the wall above the judge's head.

When both guns were empty, he killed himself with a third revolver.

Hoan Regime Is Issue In Milwaukee Voting

Milwaukee, March 16 (AP).—The municipal primary campaign, one of the liveliest in Milwaukee's history, closed tonight with the newly formed Farmer-Labor-Progressive Federation facing its first test in the polls tomorrow.

The veteran Socialist mayor, Daniel W. Hoan, whose 20-year administration and political theories were principal issues of the campaign, seeks renomination against three opponents.

He is backed by the federation, a coalition of Progressives, Socialists and other self-termed "liberal" groups.

Milwaukee elections are nonpartisan, but Hoan's rivals—Sheriff Joseph J. Shinners, Democrat; John C. Schafer, former Republican Congressman, and Otto R. Werkmeister, Republican—all assailed his socialism.

Detroit Bank Blamed In $349,000 City Loss

Detroit, March 16 (AP).—City officials, reiterating their contention that the National Bank of Detroit is responsible for the loss of $349,000 in city trust funds, made no move today to obtain possession of $13,500 cash and securities found in the safe deposit box of Harry M. Tyler.

Tyler, who was assistant city comptroller, committed suicide in his richly appointed home a few hours after the shortage was disclosed last Thursday.

Village Head Freed In Vice Accusation

Chicago, March 16 (AP).—William C. Loeffler, president of the suburban village of Stickney—in which the State charged remnants of the Al Capone "syndicate" had attempted to resume operations—was acquitted of a malfeasance charge by a criminal court's jury tonight.

The jury deliberated less than two hours over the State's charges that Loeffler countenanced unrestricted gambling, taxi dancing and houses of ill-repute in the suburb.

Capt. Daniel Gilbert, of the State attorney's police, had testified that Ralph Capone, brother of "Scarface Al," and other Capone followers, had financed resorts in the suburb as an opening wedge in a "comeback" attempt.

Crazed Man Kills Aunt, Hurts Mother, Ends Life

Joliet, Ill., March 16 (AP).—Apparently crazed, police said, because of fear that he would lose his 2-acre truck farm, Laurence Dvorak, 40, killed his 74-year-old aunt with a hatchet today, hacked his mother with the same weapon and then shot himself to death.

The mother, Mrs. Julia H. Dvorak, said she saved her life by feigning death after being struck several blows. Mrs. Dvorak said her son had been brooding for months over being on relief and the fear that his small piece of land would be taken away from him.

8 Gaming Ring Suspects Indicted for Tax Frauds

Detroit, March 16 (AP).—A Federal grand jury indicted eight men today, charging they were partners in a powerful Detroit gambling syndicate.

Using the weapon that smashed the Capone liquor ring in Chicago, the Government obtained indictments charging the men with evading $463,933 in income taxes during 1929 and 1930.

Those indicted were Daniel W. Sullivan, George Weinbrenner, Lincoln Fitzgerald, Thomas Gleason, John Emmet Grace, Samuel B. Meyers, Cornelius Hurley and Francisco Licini.

"The increasing number of youths involved in crime is appalling," said Chief Justice Denis J. Normoyle. "I believe this method will be educational and preventive."

WOODSHIRE TWIST

FROM AN OLD BRITISH SECRET

This simple test is but one of the ways to demonstrate the toughness of Woodshire Twist. A pencil has been ruthlessly punched through the material. When the pencil is removed, the hole will close by slightly working the cloth with the fingers, leaving no trace. No thread has been broken—proof of fineness in yarns used in making Woodshire Twist.

TAKE the threads of the finest imported wool yarn and twist them into worsteds that would give more than ordinary wear when woven into cloth, that would make a material at once strong for the roughest going, that would hold a press when ordinary materials would give in, and that would look thoroughbred—that was the task confronted and conquered in creating Woodshire Twist.

It was done. But it took an old British secret and it took painstaking search to find the maker who could do it.

Back in the years British spinners and weavers developed a special twist in the making of worsteds for men's clothing.

It was more laborious. It was costlier, too. But it made British-made clothes famous the world over.

So it was determined that Woodshire Twist must be this type of fabric . . . then to find the American maker who could and would weave it.

After raw wool is drawn into thin "slivers" and the fibers combed into thin parallel strands, it is woven into threads. From these threads are made the worsteds with which the cloth is woven.

But in the making of Woodshire Twist it is not all as simple as that. The strength of these worsteds starts back with the selection of fine, long, crimpy wool fibers.

And after the threads are made, as many as three are twisted together according to the old British method.

So Woodshire Twist came about only because of an ambition that would brook no compromise, a dogged determination to start with yarn and to develop worsted, cloth and suit to meet a self-imposed standard. Woodshire Twist is a Woodward & Lothrop fabric and suit—a man's suit that can "take it" as well as look it. Woodshire Twist Suits with two pairs of trousers—A Man's value, $45.

Rich Exporters Caused 'Crisis,' SynagogueTold

'Social Regeneration Plan' Opposed by Wealthy, Ickes Tells Broup.

Wealthy exploiting classes have provoked a national crisis, Secretary Ickes last night warned the United Synagogue of America. Several hundred persons at the Willard Hotel convention applauded as the Cabinet officer denounced those who oppose the social regeneration program of the New Deal.

"Opposing the social regeneration of the National," he said, "stand the exploiting classe, composed of those men who already are too rich and powerful for the good of the people, but who nevertheles are greedy for more riches and more power.

"These would turn back the hands of the clock. They have always opposed bitterly every social advance.

Sefishness Charged.

"They are against slum clearance, against low rent housing, against cheap electric power; they are for low wages and long hours for those who carry the heaviest burdens of life; for child labor and economic exploitation of women; ;they are for laissez faire; for the statue quo onte; they car not nor have they ever cared how the great mass of the American people live.

"Little they reck whether 60 per cent of our citizens are living at or below the margin of existence. Let it go to 70 or even 80 per cent, provided there is no interference with their own baneful economic habits.

"To be sure, people must be fed, and clothed, and sheltered, but expend on them no more than is barely enough to keep them alive in order that they may continue by their toil to add to the wealth and the power of those who have built themselves up on the exploitation of their fellowmen and by means of special privileges which have ben granted to them by a complacent Government."

The speaker drew a parallel between the wanderings of the Israelites and New Deal social reform movements.

"It is to be the function of our Government," he asked, "further to foster, protect and encourage a concentration of wealth that has already reached a point where it threatens the very life of the Nation as it has already put its soul in jeopardy or is the ideal to be that of serving the best interests of the greatest number of our people?

Social Issues.

"Here are fundamental social and political issues upon which the future of America depends and the solution of which cannot longer be postponed. In the decision that must be made such a group as I have the privilege of addressing tonight will be profoundly influential.

"The situatio ncan only properly be called a crisis.

"In this crisis in our national life you and I have grave responsibilities that we cannot evade without forfeiting our birthright. May all patriotic and right-minded citizens join hands to bring our America into the promised land."

Ickes emphasized existence of a tendency for concentration of wealth "in the hands of a few."

"According to the findings of the nonpartisan Brookings Institution, as published in 'America's Capacity to Consume,'" he said, "'at 1929 prices a family income of $2,000 may be regarded as sufficient to supply only basic necessities.

"'However accurate this generalization may be, it is significant to note that more than 16,000,000 families, or practically 60 per cent of the total number, were below this standard of expenditures.'

Drab Picture.

"Here is a drab picture, indeed, of that Garden of Eden from which we were turned out in 1929 and back to which the Liberty Leaguers so ardently hope to entice us.

"Almost two-thirds of the total number of American families at the height of our so-called prosperity, did not earn enough to supply themselves with the bare necessities of life."

Other speakers included Joseph Wilner, Rabbi Solomon Metz, the Rev. L. Novick, Martin Wechsler, Dr. I. H. Levinthal, Representative H. P. Kopplemann, of Connecticut, and Mrs. Samuel Spiegel.

Earlier Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, escorted by the blue-uniformed members of Jewish War Veterans Auxiliary, Post No. 58, addressed the Women's League of the synagogue.

"We will prosper," she said, "according to our ability to grow spiritually and morally. Material problems will solve themselves as we realize unselfishness is true spiritual progress, and without it we will achieve little in the coming years."

Gov. Peery in New York For Bond Refund Talk

New York, March 16 (AP).—Gov. George C. Peery of Virginia was to return to Richmond tonight after conferences with various interests here in regard to refunding State bonds in the amount of $11,750,000.

Gov. Peery said nothing definite had been decded and he had no announcement to make. Decisions relative to the refunding will be made after his return to the State capital, he added. Refunding of the Century Bond issue to effect interest savings was authorized by the recent session of the Virginia General Assembly.

Important Progress in Rockets To Explore Sky Secrets Told

Smithsonian Institution Reports on Vehicles to Hurtle Into Space Bearing Scientific Instruments and to Bring Back Data.

While the rocket ship which will carry human passengers is yet a dream in science's "never, never land," important progress is being made in rocket vehicles to carry scientific instruments for bringing to earth secrets of the skies.

In a report announced yesterday, the Smithsonian Institution, which financed some of the rocket research by Dr. Robert H. Goddard, of Clark University, declared that at present man-carrying rockets are impossible but that less ambitious hopes are practical.

Dr. Goddard's rockets, on which he has been working 15 years, weigh 58 and 85 pounds, have attained speeds of 700 miles and hour and have risen 7,500 feet in short experimental flights in the desert near Roswell, N. Mex.

The motor of the rocket develops 200 horsepower per pound of its own weight. It is a combustion chamber in which liquid oxygen and gasoline mix with explosive forces. The resulting power is exerted downward through nozzles to the tail of the rocket.

Retired Coal Operator's Death Called Suicide

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lonaconing, Md., March 16.—Charles W. Hoffa, 70, retired coal operator of the Georges Creek field, was found dead in his home yesterday by members of the family with a bullet wound in the head. He had been in ill health, and investigation by Dr. George P. Paulman, county coroner, resulted in a certificate of suicide.

He was prominent in Masonic and other organizations and was a member of Ali Ghan Temple, Mystic Shrine, Cumberland. Besides operating independently he had been a member of Hoffa Bros., coal operators. His brother, Arthur Hoffa, resides at Barton, Md., where he served as mayor. Surviving are his wife, three sons and five daughters.

Miss Ault Will Assist In Home Demonstration

Frederick, Md., March 16 (AP).—Miss Judith Ault, St. Thomas, Pa., has been appointed assistant home demonstration agent in Frederick, Carroll and Montgomery counties, it was announced today by Miss Venia M. Keller, of extension service of the University of Maryland. Her appointment becomes effective April 1.

Miss Ault was graduated from Hood College with a B. S. degree in 1931 and for five years has been home demonstrator with a company in Cumberland.

1936 License Plates On Sale in Virginia

Richmond, Va., March 16 (AP).—Virginia's new orange and blue license tags today went on sale at 117 branch offices of the motor vehicle division, Director John Q. Rhodes, jr., announced.

Six stations in Richmond and four in Norfolk have been opened in addition to the 107 regular distribution offices, and approximately 250,000 sets of tags have been sent them. The 1935 license plates expire on April 1, but motorists have a 15-day grace period in which to obtain the 1936 tags.

Mrs. Roosevelt Cites Honesty As Vital Need

Scores Ruthless Dealings in Her Address Before Buisiness Women.

Speaking at a dinner of the Washington Business and Professional Women's Club, held in Hotel Washington last night to open National Business Women's Week, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President, urged the necessity of honesty in human relationships in order to promote better understanding and greater prosperity.

Mrs. Roosevelt said that youth starting in business today is finding it difficult to reconcile the ethical theory taught in the schools to the dishonest ruthlessness practiced in the world. She said that greater honesty between employer and employe and between dealer and customer would mark a tremendous forward step in business.

The First Lady also said that the "new outlooks" she considers necessary to solve current problems would prohibit business and professional women from thinking only of their own field. She quoted the President as saying "that a lawyer must think as a citizen as well as a lawyer" and advocated that business women think of themselves in relation to the entire community.

Garden Urged as Hobby.

Miss Emma Hahm, president and manager of Allies Inn, 1703 New York avenue northwest, delivered a short address, in which she said that every business woman should have a garden as a hobby. Success in business, she declared, is often due in large part to the relaxation and interest in community life derived from a pleasant home and garden.

Miss Margaret Lambie, attorney, also advocated business women learning how to relax. She said that while there was little difference between the point of view of men and women in the same field, that men had learned how to use their leisure to better advantage.

As a formula for a better world, Miss Lambie advised "more ethics in economics, more statesmanship in politics and more love in humanity."

Pin Money Called Bunk.

Miss Mae Murray, president of the local club, introduced the speakers and honor guests. In a brief speech she declared that "women working for pin money is bunk" and that few men today would care to assume the entire financial burden of a family. Many women, she said, now contribute toward their families support. About 300 members and guests were present at the dinner.

In a radio broadcast earlier in the day, Miss Charl Ormond Williams, honor guest and president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, said that if the 10,000,000 working women in the country were to "enjoy a day of feminine rest the wheels of business and industry in this country would cease."

She said that such a "day of rest" would prove definitely that women are indispensable to American business and cited the large number employed in factories and as clerks, telephone operators, and in domestic service. The unemployment problem, she went on, would not be settled by supplanting women with men, because such a move would only force women and their dependents on relief rolls.

In another event to mark National Business Women's Week, Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss Williams will participate in a Nation-wide broadcast from the White House tomorrow at 6:35 p. m.

His Hair Roots are NOT Dead

Hair roots are a part of the human body and do not "die" as long as the body itself lives. They become inactive when (1) they are attacked by some local scalp disorder (such as dandruff) or (2) when they have not received sufficient nourishment. Hair roots are alive, even in a bald scalp and are ready to respond to proper stimulative treatment.

Seventeen years ago Paul A. Thomas discovered the proper method of stimulating the dormant sources of hair growth. His method has been improved each year and today is as near perfect as any scalp treatment can be. First, Thomas treatment overcomes all local scalp infections, stops scalp itch and abnormal hair fall. It then stimulates the tiny glands in the scalp which nourish the hair. Thus, "sleeping hair" obtains sufficient strength to grow again and become visible on the scalp.

Come in today and learn how Thomas can help you to have a good, healthy head of hair. Thomas never makes a charge for consultation or complete scalp examination. All service is rendered in private.

Operator Fined $10 as Speeder In Trolley Car

Judge Warns all Motormen to Observe Traffic Regulations.

A motorman, charged with driving his street car 34 miles an hour on upper Georgia avenue, was fined $10 in Traffic Court yesterday. Thus was exploded an argument made in a previous case that street cars, since they operate on "private right-of-ways," are not subject to traffic regulations.

In fining Slater F. Elkins, the motorman, Judge John P. McMahon warned that operators of street cars will have to join with automobile operators in observing traffic laws.

"This court," he said, "will hold motormen to strict accountability. A speeding street car encourages violations of traffic laws. A driver of a private car, attempting to get around a fast street car, is tempted to break the speed laws."

Cards on Table.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, is preparing to "lay his cards on the table" when hearings before the House traffic subcommittee reopen today.

Maj. Brown was asked by Representative Wood (Democrat), Missouri, to furnish data on alleged ticket "fixing" practices in Washington.

"I am going to lay my cards on the table. I have no apologies to make. The facts and figures speak for themselves," said Maj. Brown.

Planning to defend his department against recent ticket "fixing" charges, the police chief said he would show by records that 93.9 per cent of all traffic cases over a three-year period went into court.

Approximately 200,000 cases were handled during that period, Maj. Brown declared. Of these, only 6.1 per cent were disposed of by warnings or cancellation.

Cites Recent Case.

To bolster his contention, Maj. Brown cited a recent case where a member of Congress sent him a ticket received by a member of the latter's office staff. Brown returned the ticket "unfixed," pointing out that this driver had already been warned, and was not on official business and consequently could claim no immunity.

"The word 'fix' has no place in my department," said Brown. "We don't even know what the word means. There is no such practice and never will be."

Various efforts to promote street safety in Washington were rewarded over the week-end by a marked decrease in the number of accidents, 16 being reported Saturday and 17 Sunday. The average is 30 to 35 a day for week-end holidays.

The city's nineteenth traffic fatality, however, was recorded yesterday, with the death of Winnie Horton, 50, 2505 Champlain street northwest. He was struck by an automobile at Vermont avenue and H treet northwest, March 4.

Francis Shipman, 20, 1001 Twenty-third street northwest, alleged driver of the car, will appear before a coroner's jury. Horton suffered internal injuries, and fractures of both legs.

Gamblers Ordered To Jail by Judge

Baltimore, March 16 (AP).—Pleading guilty to violations of the State lottery laws, seven men today were ordered confined in the city jail until at least part of the remaining defendants, accused of conspiracy in the alleged numbers rackets here, have been tried.

Judge Charles F. Stein in criminal court, declined to renew their bail, pending sentence, asserting the men were "not entirely frank" in their testimony and that some of them had shown in the past fines would not prevent them from breaking the law.

He accepted the guilty pleas of Hyman Smolkin, George Billard, Sam Goldstein, David Drutz, Frank Pratt, colored; Jesse Dell 'Arciprete and David Dannenburg. These were the first to be brought to trial in the State's attorney's investigation of lottery tickets in the city.

Dell 'Arciprete and Dannenburg took the blame for starting and controlling the numbers syndicate involved. The other five admitted conspiracy to violate the lottery law.

7 Maryland Counties To Get 40,000 Trout

Baltimore, March 16 (AP).—With the opening of the trout fishing season due April 1, the State Conservation Department today announced that 40,000 trout were being distributed in the streams and lakes of seven counties.

Raised in the three State fisheries, the trout have been allotted to Garrett, Frederick, Allegany, Baltimore, Washington, Anne Arundel and Howard counties.

Welfare Head Meets Jobless Chief

Former Judge M. M. Doyle, acting chairman of the Board of Public Welfare, confers with William Goldstein, chairman of a committee from the District Unemployed League, on District relief crisis.

15,000 Face Loss of Relief

finding employment in private industry, would be for Henry Hopkins, WPA administrator, to lift his November 1 ruling and absorb them on new works projects.

Whether this will be done, or whether discontinuance of relief for these 5,000 cases will be one of the first steps in a Nation-wide effort to reduce the burden of relief, is still in doubt.

In announcing the policy of caring for unemployables only, agreed upon at yesterday's meeting, Elwood Street, director, and Judge Michael M. Doyle, acting chairman of the board, explained that "it was felt in this way we will be caring for the most helpless."

Alternatives were presented District officials by the reduction in the supplemental appropriation, they explained. One was to spread the sum available to all those on relief; the other was to cut off the employables "who have the best chance of getting something else to do" and devote all the funds to the unemployables.

Welfare Board members and the Commissioners felt that "to spread it thin would mean that a poor job would be done all around and that no one would be adequately cared for."

The average relief budget, for example, was $30 per person, Street cited. If all were to share in the funds to be made available, the budget would have to be reduced to $10 per family. On the other hand, if the employables were cut off permanently, a considerable reduction in overhead costs could be effected and all the needs of the unemployables could be met.

Decision Unavoidable.

In this connection, former Judge Michael Doyle, a board member, pointed out that the 1937 appropriation supply bill by keeping the relief figure down to a sum calculated to meet the needs of the unemployables, would have forced the Commissioners and Welfare Board to "have come to this decision sooner or later."

"In taking this action now we are anticipating a policy that would have been forced upon us in three months anyway," Doyle said. "The members of the Welfare Board felt it was much more advisable to make our administrative adjustments now, so that the staff could be tapered off gradually."

Elwood Street, director of the board, estimated administrative cost of caring for the unemployed could be cut by 50 per cent with elimination of relief for the employables.

At the conference besides Hazen, Allen, Doyle and Street, were Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, auditor; M. Alice Hill, director of the public assistance division; Coralie F. Cook, assistant director of the board; Paul M. Kirby, deputy director of the assistance division, and W. W. Spaid and Dr. Henry J. Crosson, board members.

Unemployed League Protest.

The meeting, held in executive session, was interrupted for about 15 minutes while Doyle listened to the protest of a delegation of six members of the Unemployed League led by William Goldstein, organization secretary, against the announcement of the Welfare Board on Saturday that no further relief checks would be distributed.

When Doyle explained the dilemma confronting the District the delegation left. Goldstein said the league would picket the White House and Congress for additional funds.

Bell's slashing of supplemental relief funds was assailed bitterly last night in a statement from the national affairs committee of the Socialist Party, located in this city.

"Twenty thousand people in the District of Columbia, Capital of the Nation, will have to beg for bread or accept starvation after April 1," the statement read. "When relief is denied to sharecroppers in Arkansas or in some other distant State, Government officials give the plausible excuse of distance or administrative difficulties. They can have no such excuse today. Relief is now being denied to those who dwell a stone's throw from the Capitol or the White House.

"The District of Columbia has had one of the highest death rates in the country, according to this week's health index. The action of the budget director will do nothing to lower it."

New "Hunger March" Planned.

Preparations for a new "hunger march" on the National Capital were reported last night by Representative Marcantonio (Republican), New York, according to the Associated Press.

The march, he said, was planned for April 11 and would be led by officers elected at a convention of the Workers Alliance and the Unemployment Council to be held in Washington April 9 and 10 to protest cuts in Federal relief and in WPA funds.

Herbert Benjamin, active in Communist demonstrations in the past, and head of the long files of "hunger marchers" that trudged past the White House during the last days of the Hoover Administration, is helping plan the new march.

Marcantonio, recently jailed in New York during an unemployment demonstration, said he had been informed the purpose of the proposed demonstration was to "peacefully petition Congress" for higher relief and WPA standards.

Ex-Democratic Leader Finishes Prison Term

Springfield, Mo., March 16 (AP).—Millard F. Dunlap, 79, former Jacksonville, Ill., banker, was released today from the Federal Prison Medical Center here after serving the minimum term of a two-year sentence on a conviction of violating the national banking act.

President Roosevelt remitted the $10,000 fine assessed against Dunlap, one-time treasurer of the Democratic national committee, making possible his release.

Dunlap left immediately for his home with a son and daughter. Hospital officials said he was in "fair" physical condition.

House Adopts Bill for Model Basin for Ships

Plant Would Be Built Near District; Cost Limit Is Set at $100,000.

The House yesterday passed and sent to the Senate a bill which authorizes the Navy Department to construct a model basin in the vicinity of Washington for use in designing ships and aircraft.

Recommended by the Committee on Naval Affairs, the bill was amended to strike out a specific authorization to acquire 55 acres in the vicinity of Cabin John, Md., and to insert a substitute provision for acquiring "a site at a cost not to exceed $100,000 in the vicinity of Washington, D. C.

The object of the bill is to provide a modern model basin, where models of new ships, private as well as public, and aircraft may be tested for the purpose of securing the most efficient and economical design.

The basin will be made available to private concerns at cost.

This new basin will replace the present ship-model basin in Washington Navy Yard. Built in 1900, it is now out of date and inefficient.

The amendment deleting the Cabin John reference was asked by Secretary Claude S. Swanson "in order to permit the Navy Department to have the freedom of action necessary to acquire a suitable site at a reasonable cost."

It is understood, however, the Navy Department has an option on the Cabin John tract.

The House also passed a bill authorizing the Secretary of War to acquire additional land for the use of Walter Reed Hospital.

Although not approved by the Budget Bureau, the bill was reported favorably by the House Military Affairs Committee. The land to be acquired covers four parcels adjacent to and on the south side of the hospital reservation. Extending from Sixteenth street on the west through to Georgia avenue on the east, the tract contains almost 23 acres.

The bill carries an authorization of $204,162, which was substituted for $200,000.

Clarksburg College Club 80 Hear Dr. Brunauer

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., March 16.—Dr. Eseher Caukin Brunauer, of Washington, research associate in international education, American Association of University Women, will address the Clarksburg College Club at a hotel luncheon here Saturday afternoon.

She will speak at a dinner meeting of the Fairmont Chapter of the American University Women Friday evening at Fairmont, and at a similar dinner Saturday night in Morgantown.

The subject of her address will be "The Methods of Disseminating Foreign Propaganda in the United States."

Powell Is Indicted In Virginia Slaying

Charlottesville, Va., March 16 (AP). Luke Powell was released under $1,000 bond today following his indictment by a Greene County jury on a charge of having murdered Fred Clatterbuck, near Ruckersville, Saturday night.

Clatterbuck was fatally shot at Powell's service station after Powell had ordered him away. Clatterbuck was said to have been advancing on Powell when the latter fired once over the other man's head, and then shot him three times.

Block Film Sales Opposed at Capitol

By the Associated Press.

The practice of "block booking and blind selling" of motion pictures was criticized yesterday before a House Interstate Commerce sub-committee.

William H. Bristow, national secretary of the Congress of Parents and Teachers, labeled the practice "undemocratic and monopolistic" and urged approval of the Neely-Pettingill bill which would prohibit the practices.

A statement submitted to the committee for Mrs. Ray Norse, representing the American Association of University Women, held the practice prevents freedom of expression by communities interested in improving moral standards in motion pictures.

Miss Helen W. Atwater, editor of the Journal of Home Economics; Dr. Izorah Scott, director of the legislative department of the W. C. T. U.; Nita S. Hinman, representing the National Woman's Trade Union League; Canon William Sheafe Chase, superintendent of the International Reform Federation, and Mrs. Albert H. Putney, of the national board of the Y. W. C. A., also opposed block booking.

A Team And Its Leader.

What use, if any, is the conductor to a symphony orchestra? That is a question which naturally occurs upon learning that the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra was on Sunday obliged to execute a complicated opus entirely in the dark. All the players continued to go through the paces of Beethoven's No. 3 Symphony as smoothly as if every light in the Philharmonic Auditorium had not suddenly gone out. Neither notes nor baton seemed of the slightest use to them.

This musical novelty, unintentionally introduced to music-lovers in Los Angeles, seemingly leaves conductors out on a limb. Actually, it further establishes the indispensability of the leader. If Otto Klemperer had not spent hours with his men in rehearsal; had not drilled them mercilessly on the importance of every nuance; had not co-ordinated the team to the point where it became far more than the sum of its members, the orchestra would have been even more in the dark than was the case.

The Russians were the first to attempt a conductorless symphony orchestra and the innovation was tried in New York City some years ago. The musicians were arranged in a circle so that they could watch the concertmaster who, it soon developed, was actually the conductor without that title. This experiment added as little to musical progress as that tour de force of the great German conductor, Hans Bulow, who once trained his men to give an entire concert from unaided memory. In neither case were the musicians playing independently of a leader, though that was the impression given.

Any and every symphony orchestra is essentially a correlated group. Each member depends upon the conductor for leadership and he, in turn, relies upon their unified response. A similar interpendence, it may be observed, marks the relation of the orchestra and the community. Such realization should not only spur the campaign of the National Symphony Orchestra, but also afford Washingtonians satisfaction in feeling an integral part of its success.

The Berry Report.

Co-ordinator Berry has just made public a report by the Council for Industrial Progress, which has been discussing various proposals for a successor to the NRA. The work has been hampered by the prevalent hostility to all plans that savor of industrial regimentation. That attitude of mind is easily explained by the disappointment and disillusionment that followed an over-ambitious attempt to regularize competitive practices. However, the collapse of the NRA has left both labor and industry facing problems for which solution must ultimately be found.

There is evident need for a modification of the anti-trust laws to permit competing industrial units to agree upon labor policies, formulate trade-practice agreements and eliminate unfair practices by disciplining offenders. While a number of the strong active trade associations refused to participate in the deliberations that have been carried on under Maj. Berry's leadership, they, like the participants, are vitally concerned in the questions that have come before the conference. Under present statutes, the legality of many existing agreements is subject to challenge. These laws must be liberalized if competing groups are to co-operate freely and effectively to prevent exploitation of labor and suppress destructive forms of competition.

Unfortunately Maj. Berry's council has coupled a demand for revision of the anti-trust laws with recommendations for new prohibitions that call for the banning of certain practices that might or might not be unfair, depending upon circumstances. If industries are to have the right to combine voluntarily, they should not be hampered by arbitrary legislative definitions of fair practice. That is a matter that should be decided by those concerned, of course with full safeguards against public exploitation.

If the Federal Trade Commission were not handicapped by the rigid provisions of the present anti-trust laws, it could exercise discretionary powers of supervision over organized industry without interfering with reasonable restraints upon competition. It is not at all necessary, or desirable, to add another commission, as the Berry council suggests, to take over the F. T. C.'s judicial functions. What we need is simplified enforcement machinery and simplified legislation, not a multiplication of agencies and new kinds of legal restraints.

Perspective Is Essential.

In spite of its truculent wording, perhaps intensified by hasty translation, the German note to the League Council represents a perceptible advance in the handling of the most serious crisis Europe has confronted since the close of the world war. A touch of Teutonic arrogance, designed in part for domestic consumption, can not obscure the significant fact that Germany is willing to negotiate on her violation of Rhineland demilitarization.

Although resentment over Germany's contemptuous attitude toward her treaty obligations is still uppermost, a disposition to take a long-range and objective view of the problem is apparently gaining ground in London. Such a view requires a much wider perspective than is afforded by the present crisis alone, and such a perspective is now essential.

The machinery of the League of Nations has clearly failed, in three consecutive crises, to stop aggressive actions by powerful militaristic governments. First the Geneva organization was flouted by Japan, then by Italy, now by Germany. It is not easy to argue convincingly at London that drastic punitive measures must be taken only against the third of these treaty violators, who in the last analysis has so far in fact merely sent detachments of troops into her own territory. Too clear in memory is the fact that Japan was not punished, and Italy only mildly chastised, for actions which involved outright invasion and seizure of territory from fellow-members of the League.

The case for a preventive war against Germany being thus morally and legally deficient, to say nothing of the disaster such a course would be to all participants, only two general lines of action appear practical in London. One of these, which Germany can easily force by inept diplomacy now, is to ring that country with a defensive alliance primed to invade from half a dozen points at a given signal. This, of course, means perpetuation and intensification of present tensions, until at last some spark ignites the European powder magazine.

The other alternative is a frank recognition of the fact that neither the peace settlements nor the League of Nations has solved the basic problem of the overpopulated, virile and seemingly underprivileged state, as now demonstrated by the consecutive outbursts of Japan, Italy and Germany. To confront this problem realistically, however, requires international consultation far more ambitious and well-prepared than the present emergency meeting of the Council. For this underlying issue is aggravated more by economic and financial than by political difficulties.

While it is unlikely that the Rhineland crisis can be solved without probing back to the deeper underlying issues, it is also clear that constructive outcome can be expected only by negotiating one step at a time. For that reason the Council yesterday acted wisely in inviting Germany to participate at London on a basis of full equality with the other Locarno signatories, while refusing to discuss Hitler's proposals of March 7 until the more immediate issue is co-operatively examined.

With German willingness to examine the tangle step by step, and Anglo-French willingness to proceed to more fundamental steps when that which is immediate has been taken, the present crisis may yet prove to have far-reaching constructive possibilities. Without such good will on both sides the chances for ultimate, if not immediate, disaster in Europe must remain dominant.

Promise For Television.

As long ago as 1884 a disc with a spiral of small holes was patented as the key to television. Today scientific men are still patiently spinning similar discs before photosensitive cells in an effort to produce an illusion of continuous action on a screen at the other end of a wire. Their experiments have met with the success which usually attends protracted intelligent effort. In 1927 the first public demonstration over a considerable distance was staged between this city and New York. The next year images in color were wired across the Atlantic and a few radio stations began, though crudely, to broadcast for visual reception.

Yet the public seems increasingly less impressed by these miracles. Recent news from Leipzig, for example, described a booth at an industrial fair in which one may both see and speak to a person in Berlin. It is not regarded as particularly remarkable. And the plans of the German Olympic committee, to set up large television tents in Berlin for those unable to find seats in the stadia, are taken almost as a matter of course. However, the president of the Bell Telephone Laboratories would seem to believe that the public, in counting on immediate perfection of the device, is indulging in a bit of wishful thinking.

"We do not consider wire-television commercially possible at this time," he is quoted as saying recently. "There is not enough money in the world to add television to the telephone connections of this country." As for himself, this engineer would not pay a nickel to see the person at the other end.

No more would we—generally. But there are thousands who would pay rather more than a nickel to see the Olympics contemporaneously on a screen. And that is far more encouragement than the venerable Alexander Graham Bell had during his many months of experimenting prior to the epochal March 10, 1876. It was then that the forgotten Mr. Watson came bursting into the laboratory to announce that he had heard plainly Mr. Bell's request to "come here," made at the other end of the world's first telephone circuit.

Peace And Progress.

In yesterday's papers President Eamon De Valera emphasized the accomplishments of the Irish Free State so that those who honor St. Patrick today might know that the snakes—this time those born of the "troubles"—are once more on the run. As the shamrock is "drowned" in keeping with the ancient custom the toast should be for his assurances that "the past year was one of peace and ordered progress" for the Auld Sod.

When the Fianna Fail government took office the principal obstacle to its progressive program lay in the fact that Ireland was dependent on the outside world for practically all her needs. Agriculture was the main endeavor of the land but at that, many foodstuffs were imported. Now the picture has brightened. The Irish Times reports for 1935 alone an increase of 31,000 acres under production in the Free State. More important is the analysis of economic holdings, which reveals 101,800 acres divided among 6,244 farmers today as against 48,346 acres among 2,699 farmers in 1931.

As for industry, the Times estimates that "several hundred" new factories have been established since 1932, including 121 clothing factories and 12 shoe factories. Important advances are also reported in the field of housing: 13,240 houses were built last year with government aid, as compared with 3,015 five years ago.

The net effect has been to achieve a better balance in foreign trade while unemployment totals remain in the neighborhood of 100,000, representing virtually no change over the past few years. In the light of population increase abnormally stimulated by restrictions on emigration, this is regarded as a gain, though the percentage is still very high for a predominantly agricultural country with relatively small resources.

The Blame Should Be Shared

The ubiquitous "youth problem" continues a vital factor in national lawlessness. J. Edgar Hoover, speaking in New York last week, reminded us that no less than 20 per cent of our crime "is committed by persons not yet old enough to vote."

The director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation finds this "supposedly advanced civilized country" needing both more advancement and more civilization, not merely for the sake of children but also because of children. "We of law enforcement," he says, "find these children stealing automobiles, committing almost a thousand murders every year; we find that there are tens of thousands of burglaries and larcenies perpetrated by boys and girls who in any other generation would have been under the discipline of vigilant parents. This is an undeniable indictment of the American parent today."

The competence of Mr. Hoover to draw conclusions in this field is beyond question. The fact that many parents are unfit or careless cannot be gainsaid. That crimes are committed in greater variety and by younger persons today is obvious to all. But surely the expert will not limit his "indictment" to parents, nor find the new crime urge peculiar to America.

Last year, there were over 1,400,000 major crimes and some 12,000 murders in this country. Both the number and the seriousness of crimes seem to tend steadily upward. But it would neither solve nor explain one of the world's biggest problems to lay it too conclusively at the door of the home.

Neither sternness nor piety of parents has stayed wayward footsteps by children. Education is also an insufficient factor, for there are many college degrees in prisons. Indeed, the whole warp and woof of our civilization is involved in making youth law-abiding.

Alamo A La Mode.

Texas, the biggest State in the Union, has put itself in the hands of a Broadway beautifier. Its Frontier Centennial Exposition, scheduled to open June 6, started out according to Hoyle with cotton-and-cattle shows, Chamber of Commerce capers, and the usual remounting of State heroes on bigger and better fair ground sites. But bronze Sam Houstons and Davy Crocketts are going to find unexpected competition this year. Texas has recruited Tin Pan Alley to pep up its State song and shine up the old pan handle. Billy Rose is to be the glorifier.

Shed a tear for memories of the last round-up! Mr. Rose is a super-salesman as well as showman, but he has the Broadway slant. No doubt he could make Sally Rand the Eighth Wonder of the World, if he chose, and how he out-barnumed Barnum with "Jumbo" is now history. But his circus in the Hippodrome was as foreign to the real tanbark affair as the high hats and swallowtails which attended it.

At least it's clear now why they recently banned a statue of Buffalo Bill from the Texas Frontier Centennial Exposition. He could scarcely have kept his pedestal in competition with Guy Lombardo, Shirley Temple and the "Frontier Follies."

A St. Louis woman, 104, says she is no longer interested in politics. In rare cases, with age comes wisdom.

Tahiti No Escape.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I enjoyed the editorial in The Post of March 13 about those two young couples from Michigan who are fleeing to Moorea, an island off Tahiti, to escape "mediocrity."

Someone must have given them a copy of "The Moon and Sixpence" as a wedding present. Perhaps Mr. Walls, a school teacher, just decided he had rather bound the islands on a liner than on a map. Or maybe the other bridegroom, Mr. Hogan, abandoned his planned course in the management of hostelries because he remembered Vicki Baum's story of a hotel in which "nothing ever happened." At any rate, their brides have stocked up on cruise clothes, permanent waves, and enough cosmetics to last until death or civilization's beauty parlors call them.

At least these four modern rebels are more explicit in what they're running from and after than Maugham's hero was. His was a revolt against generalities—society, inhibitions, the established order of things. Theirs is against specific amenities—spring cleaning, putting the cat out, living on Main streets, keeping up with the Joneses.

But I'm afraid the Hogans and the Wallses are in for disillusionment. The design for living in Michigan or Moorea is strangely comparable—meals have to be cooked, huts have to be cleaned, clothes have to be mended. However, if it's monotony they're leaving their homes for, in all probability they'll find a cure for that in the sheer novelty of the new scene.

If it's mediocrity, as they say, which they hope to avoid—that is another question. Mediocrity is the same the world over—a man may feel it watching the world come and go as he remains rooted behind a hotel or school desk. But it's equally as evident when one is unable to thatch a roof or haul coconuts as successfully as one's island neighbor. TILLIE.

Washington, March 14.

"What About The States?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see by the papers that Mr. Roosevelt is trying to decide how much relief money to demand of Congress; also that the Mayor of New York and a lot of other mayors are pressing for large relief allotments.

I am a plain taxpayer. I've just sent my annual subscription in the form of income tax toward the cost of our Government. I'm concerned about Federal relief expenditures.

I should like very much to know something about State and municipal finances—for apparently it is states and cities to which relief allotments are made. Which of our States and larger cities balance their budgets? Which are in the "red" or in the "black?" Are they paying off their indebtedness, or are they going worse in the hole? Are their administrations, over a term of years, excellent, good, poor or rotten? M. K. T.

Washington, March 15.

Laemmle's Start.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: News that Universal Pictures has been sold and that Carl Laemmle, founder and president, is out of the game, brings back the time he told me of how he happened to get into "the movies."

It was at the beginning of the 1900s that he came to Chicago from Springfield, or maybe it was Peoria, with a few hundred dollars obtained from selling out a small tailoring shop. His intention was to go into the 5 and 10 cent store business. He had heard it was a gold mine. (So it was!)

After a day's hunt, he leased a store away out on Milwaukee avenue, one of Chicago's interminable prairie thoroughfares. He felt pretty good over getting such a quick start, so he said, to himself, "Why not?" when tempted by the "5 cents admission" sign on a "nickelodeon," as the first motion picture houses were called, near the Palmer House.

"I came out walking on air," he told me. "I said to myself: It's the biggest buy in the world. I never dreamed so much entertainment could be had for that little money. This is the business for me!"

He turned his new store into a motion picture arcade. The rest is history, and maybe Barbara Hutton's millions were saved to her in that same decision.

Lotteries And Ethics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is truly astonishing in this day and age to find a type of mind similar to that of your correspondent, R. H. Feltwell, who breaks into your valued columns in last Saturday's issue.

In a troubled world such as we are living in, this gentleman can find nothing to arouse his community spirit, apparently, until some well-meaning people speak of raising money for worthy causes by means of a lottery!

The gentleman evidently is unaware of the existence of a vast body of suffering—due to unemployment—among our worthy and self-respecting citizens. Mr. Feltwell is apparently blind to the insecurity of existence which is so common today; blind too, evidently, to the rags and broken footwear that the children of millions of our citizens are forced to wear.

All these things seem to go unchallenged by a certain type who, however, rush into print immediately some one proposes something that does not exactly coincide with their own strict code of ethics. Just why is this?

GEORGE A. HENSHAW.

The High Price Of A Republic.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At frequent intervals some cheer leader steps out front to proclaim that despite the 53 kinds of taxes under which we are sweating we are at least spared the burden of a useless king and his costly retinue. While paying my income tax yesterday the revenue officer tried to comfort me in that way.

Stopping at a library on the way home, I found in President Roosevelt's budget statement for 1936 the sentence "I recommend that $4,000,000,000 be appropriated by the Congress in one sum subject to allocation by the Executive." And the total budget estimate was $8,520,000,000.

A special message by Edward VIII to the House of Commons on the same day read "His majesty desires that the contingency of his marriage be taken into account so that in that event there should be provision for her majesty, the Queen, and the members of his majesty's family, corresponding to the provisions which the House of Commons has been willing to make in like circumstances in the past."

That means, as I soon discovered, about $2,000,000 a year for the 500 persons of all degrees and stations in the royal household, including the ecclesiastical and medical household, the lord chamberlain's office, etc.

By simple calculations from official statistical reports I also found that the per capita cost of government last year was $168 in Russia, $67 in the United States, $2.65 in Siam, $40 in Sweden, $4 in Iran, $34 in Norway, $35 in Holland, $26 in Argentina, an average of $3.90 in the British colonies, $25 in Germany and $40 in France.

Kings, shahs, and emperors seem to be less expensive ornaments than are elected officials. At any rate in the countries above mentioned the cost of government averaged just three times as much under presidents as under kings. Evidently thrift is not the chief virtue of republics.

Holt For The Common Man.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your correspondent, J. O. Knott, in his letter of March 14, attacks Senator Rush Holt, of West Virginia, because Holt wants the graft and crookedness taken out of the WPA in that State.

J. O. Knott claims to be a native West Virginian, but admits that he has not been near his native State for the past 25 years. He shows that he is utterly ignorant of what is going on there today.

Mr. Knott is a romantic idealist and loves to believe that "God is in heaven, and all's right with West Virginia." Let me tell him that things are rotten there politically and that Rush Holt is the first Senator who is really representing the common man rather than the big mining interests and power trust.

If Senator Neely would back up some of his fair words with as vigorous action as young Holt does in favor of the underdog, he might stand a better chance of re-election. The people of West Virginia have reached a point of desperation and they want and will elect men who stand for the masses rather than the big vested interests as has been the case in the past.

I heard Senator Holt deliver his address in the Y. M. C. A. open forum some time ago and he did not "in the baldest terms denounce the Supreme Court of his country," as Mr. Knott says. Holt pleaded in a very logical manner for amending the Constitution. Is there any treason in that? Senator Holt has not attacked Roosevelt. On the contrary, he has consistently co-operated on all social legislation of the Administration. However, he has been an intelligent and constructive critic. What he wants is to have WPA administered so that the local grafters and politicians will not get all the funds while the unfortunate starve. ARISTOTLE.

Alexandria, Va., March 14.

Believes America Indifferent.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Four sovereign states, England, France, Belgium and Italy by their delegates in London, have solemnly declared that Germany has violated the Locarno treaty. They condemn the violation, but abstain from passing sentence.

"He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone." As neither sovereign would stone the sinner it was decided to invite him to lunch and talk the matter over.

How many treaties have been violated by the four sovereigns that joined in the rebuke to Germany?

America is indifferent to Hitler and whether he parks 1,000 or a 1,000,000 men in the Rhineland. America has a bristling interest in learning whether or not these states so sensitive to treaty obligations, intend to respect the treaties they made with the United States, agreeing to pay a small moiety of the money advanced to help them in their struggle for existence.

JOSEPH A. CONRY.

Washington, March 15.

Pegler's Perspective.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Three cheers, no, a hundred, for Pegler, the man who sees things as they are," says A. Neville in a recent issue of The Post.

Pegler at his best is thoughtful and entertaining, but his sense of humor is sometimes rankytank and screwy. At least that is what a good many Post letter-writers seem to think, and a hundred cheers or so were needed to counterbalance what they have had to say since he started on his trip to Europe.

Before that trip, his wisecracks about men and things in this country were bad medicine to many an easygoing patriot. Any such who read the Pegler column in The Post of March 12 must admit that the trip has done him good.

"Come over to Europe and learn to appreciate your own country," he says, and winds up:

"By all means come over to Europe this year, and don't miss Germany. If you never appreciated your own country before you will then."

If sightseeing in Europe has that effect on Pegler, might it not be a good thing if other ill-advised critics could be sent over to enjoy its benefits? TIPTON TALBOTT.

Ten Cents' Postage.

Post Office, Tuesday.

WASHINGTONIAN Malcom McGregor's New York young lady accepted his pre-theater dinner invitation for the other evening and suggested 7 o'clock as the hour. There wasn't time to write; he had to wire, and, determined to use as many words as the flat-rate permitted, he "meticulously" repeated his first word—for emphasis: "Elegant, elegant! Seven leaves plenty time to get to show."

Now he asks this Column what recourse he has against a telegraph company which rendered his tender message: "Elegant Elephant, Seven leaves plenty time to get to zoo."

Otherwise, however, today's mail-bag is undampened by lamentations. To begin with, Mr. Claus Bogel, of the Congressional Library—because his heart responds to our occasional histrionic lapses—sends up a poignant reminiscence of the Theater's Golden Age. It's a transcript from the program for a "Benefit to Lester Wallack, in the Metropolitan Opera House, New York."

And it reads:

C. B. assures us that receipts for the single performance were $20,300, whereof Wallack got all except the odd $300.

And "Whew!" moans C. B. "If we could only get them all together again!"

But when were they together? C. B. forgot to send along that historic date.

Then there is Mrs. L. S. Jackson with a word of cheer so hearty that it ought to have been prevsaged by Pinero for the speech on Encouragement which he puts into the worldly wise mouth of Diplomat Hilery in "His House In Order." Mrs. Jackson informs us:

"You will probably be pleased to learn that your recent column about Music-Appreciation was admiringly read aloud to her students by the Central High School teacher of this subject."

Glad? We're delighted! We appreciate that music-appreciator's appreciation of our appreciation almost as highly as we appreciate music.

"I never believed," he avers, "in the theory that Nature imitates Art; but there is ample evidence that Nature competes with Art—and competes successfully. Haven't you noticed it? Whenever Fashion, which is Art, demands short skirts for women, the legs of growing girls stop growing; then, the very moment that long skirts become fashionable again, all the legs grow longer."

A strong argument, it seems to the Post-Impressionist, might be constructed to show that Mr. Leavitt's example is unfortunately chosen and supports the reverse of his interesting principle. Nevertheless, the principle itself has long appealed to our philosophic sense as a general hypothesis.

You yourself have probably remarked that no sooner were artificial eyelashes perfected in Hollywood than all infants began to be born with luxuriant and curving lashes.

T. Du Bois Mills, on the other hand, turns to even darker subjects:

"You ought," says he to us, "to write an article on the inherent malevolence of inanimate things. . . . I am sure every one of your readers has suffered from the sabotage of bedsheets, for instance. Why is it that a normally well-behaved sheet will, when it gets loose in the night, always change its shape from a four-cornered article to a triangle the minute you try to rearrange it without snapping on the light?"

But we shall postpone our answer to this inquiry until Mr. Mills has explained the Slipper Mystery:

How is it that the unassuming slippers which you place on the floor directly under the side of your bed, in the morning, have, by evening, invariably walked to a spot far enough beneath the bed to necessitate your crawling after them?

The Whipping Post.

According to careful Westbrook Pegler, in this newspaper, the father of the late Austro-Hungarian Emperor was "the Grand Duke Otto." Ourselves, we always understood that he was an Archduke, and that Grand Dukes were commoner in Old Russia. Isn't Commissar Westbrook flowing with a slight Drang nach Osten?

Britons And Americans.

Paris, March 16.

NO DOUBT I will miss my swing and fall flat on my face in my first attempt to deal with this idea, for it's a very elusive subject. It is my notion that the United States and Great Britain will presently, if they do not already, find themselves drawn together in a great bond of mutual feeling of superiority over the other nations and races of the world.

The sameness of language is a factor in the ripening crush, but the democratic feelings of the peoples and their common instincts to resent tyranny, even when the tyranny is none of their particular business, as in Germany, Italy and Russia are important, too.

We also share a strong mistrust for the whiskered tribes of the earth, feeling that any man who is a man should face the world without a disguise, and we regard our bathtub and toothbrush civilization as something pretty close to perfection, with the natural result that we look down upon those who merely chafe their shoulder blades against a brick wall instead of lathering.

True, we both like the French, but only as people, and the real sentiments of the famous Amis de France among the British and American nations, if they could be put to scientific analysis, would prove to be 99 99-100 per cent pure condescension. That explains why our feelings were so badly ruffled when we found ourselves out of money and the French began to deal with our tourists on terms.

* * * *

THE French, moreover, are the most self-centered people on earth and, despite their gift of extravagant flattery, which has buttered so many parsnips at so little cost, are devoted to themselves and France and like friends only for what they can get out of them.

The British were their friends, for example, until it came time for France to help the British suppress the windy and rather sad ambitions of the Italians under Mussolini where they conflicted with British interests. But when Sir Samuel Hoare, the noted rythmic skater who was serving as His Late Majesty's foreign secretary, invited France to help out with a little military pressure on the Italians, French public opinion simply would not make good.

Italy was not attacking France and the French therefore saw no reason to help their friends the British, whose interests were, in effect, under attack. But when the Germans moved into the Rhine, France yelled to Great Britain for help in parallel circumstances and there has been no small indignation here against the British for their hesitancy, although it does not yet amount to a refusal.

* * * *

THE most ardent defenders of personal, intellectual and religious freedom among the British and American races are among the most passionate and bigoted meddlers in Germany's internal affairs, refusing to accord to this nation that privacy and independence of conduct which they bespeak for individual persons. Because we believe in freedom, there are those who denounce, despise and would like to fight the Germans for their violent disbelief in our beliefs and impose on them a freedom which the majority of their people would regard as a national calamity.

We have these thoughts and principles in common with the British, and we also share their love of gaudy uniforms, parades, titles and ceremonies, but much more important than everything else, we are strong, rich nations with a feeling that if we don't like one another we will be friendless against the whole world because, obviously, nobody else does.

They have been looking over our inventory books and are much impressed by the quantity of stock on our shelves and cash in the vault and, though we haven't done any really important fighting since 1865, the American Navy is highly regarded by the heads of theirs.

It must be said, also, that the British are great pals in a fight and much more reliable than any other nation with whom we might hook up in the matter of going to the floor at the cry of "Hey, rube." To be sure, they had their own interests at stake in 1914 but the peril was not very apparent to the so-called man in the street and they might very easily have found excuses for refusing to help Belgium.

* * * *

THE Italians, for example, had a similar agreement with the Germans but held back until they got a better price from the Allies and then double-crossed their pals. The fact that they didn't collect their price in the end is quite another matter. The reason for that was that the Italians didn't hold up their end. They were paid for what they did and some of the British and French claim they were overpaid, at that.

I hope I do not seem to be negotiating an Anglo-American Treaty of mutual defense on my own responsibility. I am just trying to put on paper something which is blowing in the wind over here and wondering whether the same faint odor has been noticed on our side of the water since we found ourselves suddenly haywire with emotion over the death of George the Fifth and the grandeur of the British nation and the crown.

Roscoe Turner Admits Fear of Speed Flying

New York, March 16 (AP).—Col. Roscoe Turner, who flies around the country setting new air speed records with lions and such as pets, told an interviewer today:

"Am I afraid? Everytime I get into a plane to start a new race I'm scared of everything in it. When I shove it to the limit I know anything can happen. I lose 10 or 12 pounds every time I try for a record across the country.

Lobbyists Scored at Hearing

Harris & Ewing.

Robert E. Smith, chairman of National Conference of Investors, told Senate Lobby Committee yesterday about sharing a house with six Democratic members of Congress during a "hot spell" last summer. Senator Schwellenbach, committee chairman, denounced "lobbyists who come here and monkey with Congressmen."

6 Shared Home of Lobbyist

that when they object to some piece of legislation before the Congress a marshal may walk into the Senate and serve a subpena on the Vice President."

The grilling went on swiftly after this interlude.

Schwellenbach, pursuing Smith closely through the financial set-up of the organizations represented by the latter, the National Conference of Investors, and the National Security Owners Association, developed that Western power companies contributed most of $25,177 to Smith's organizations during the period from January 1 to September 30, 1935. Of this Smith said $23,798 went for his salary and expenses.

Smith, who appeared uncomfortable throughout the two hours' pounding under the Washington Senator's questions, admitted that while much of the money he had spent in Washington had been advances from his own funds, he had been reimbursed by "subscriptions" from the interests represented.

Activities Described.

He contended stoutly throughout the testimony that there was a sharp division in the set-up of the organization in regard to his activities. By this he explained that the large sums received by the associations he represented went for "organization work" in the West, and that "reclamation" in the West formed his particular interest back here. He said that much of the conversation at the parties and dinners he had described centered about reclamation, and that this also explained his wide acquaintance with Western Congressmen.

He added that he had "very studiously refrained" from working for, or from associating himself in any way with the Wheeler-Rayburn bill which later became the much-assailed public utilities holding company act of 1935.

He readily admitted that he had worked consistently for the Pettengill bill, which would repeal the fourth section of the interstate commerce act. This section is the long-and-short-haul provision. Railroads seek this section's repeal in order to reduce rates on through freight traffic. The bill is to be voted on by the House this week.

Records Offered.

Opening a massive yellow cowhide suitcase, crammed with letter files and documents, Smith offered freely to the committee whatever material they needed, to bear out his contention that he had not lobbied for utilities last year, and that he had contributed to his associations more than he had received.

He confirmed, however, a lengthy list of contributions made to the associations, as read by acting Chairman Schwellenbach. When Schwellenbach asked him how much money he had at the beginning of last year he objected on the grounds that this was prying into his "personal and private financial affairs." Schwellenbach countered with the remark that this was pertinent since Smith had testified he had used personal funds as advances to be repaid, while lobbying.

FCC Report Revised.

The Federal Communications Commission, meanwhile, worked throughout yesterday in drafting a revised report to the Senate on its work in connection with procuring for the Senate lobby committee copies of telegraph messages. A special committee report was being rewritten, it was understood, with submission today likely. It was ordered in a resolution by Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho.

After questioning Smith closely on the contents of telegrams sent last year, of which Smith had retained no copies, Schwellenbach made the point that "the only way the committee could secure such information would be from the telegraph companies."

When asked for the names of the 50 Congressmen whom he repeatedly called "the boys," Smith reeled off a long series of names and then as memory grew dim, called for a Congressional directory. He added a few more and then observed, "This isn't a new directory." He was given a new volume, and from it he completed the list.

Senators named by Smith as visitors at his Washington house included Senators Chavez (Democrat), New Mexico; Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, and Murray (Democrat), Montana, and the following members of the House:

Knute Hill (Democrat), Washington; Zioncheck (Democrat), Washington; the late Wesley Lloyd (Democrat), Washington; Smith (Democrat), Washington; Mott (Republican), Oregon; Ford (Democrat), California; Dockweiler (Democrat, California; Englebright (Republican), California; Scrugham (Democrat), Nevada; Clark (Democrat), Idaho; White (Democrat), Idaho; Murdock (Democrat), Utah; Robinson (Democrat), Utah.

Puppet Doggling

New Deal in Marionettes.

TONY SARG, the Mussolini of marionettes, went on a boondoggling expedition yesterday. Accompanied by a henchman of Harry Hopkins, a circus clown, and your intrepid correspondent, he invaded the puppet workshop of the Works Progress Administration on Constitution avenue, and watched one of the most amazing of governmental experiments in action.

Under the auspices of Mr. Hopkins, several unemployed painters, electricians and others not unacquainted with the theater, are engaged in the basement of an old building at Nineteenth street and Constitution avenue in the happy industry of making Punch and Judy shows. Mr. Hopkins hopes to have 100 of these projects going all over the country before he is through.

Your correspondent is not one who looks with disfavor upon boondoggling, probably because of a guilty conscience. Were the fates so unkind as to throw him on the relief rolls, he would much rather boondoggle than go to work. Therefore, it was with a sympathetic heart that he delved into the boondoggling dungeon to watch Mr. Sarg wander among the Federal marionette-makers at their work.

* * * *

THE marionette-makers occupy two large rooms. One is a workshop. Mr. Sarg didn't think so much of this, but your correspondent was enamored of it, because it is a beautifully dirty and disarranged workshop, the kind you can mess around in, and get paint on your clothes, and dust in your eyes, and splinters in your fingers. Here a few men were modelling marionettes out of clay or plastic wood, painting scenery, drawing pictures, and incidentally, working very hard.

Robert Warfield, the director of this particular doggle—or boon, as the workers would think it—is a youngster with pink cheeks, who has been playing with puppets for several years. He looked upon Tony Sarg with the awe of youth, and listened to his every word as the famous marionette-maker and actor examined the place. Mr. Sarg was kindness itself, and talked frankly to these professed amateurs in the ranks in which he is past master.

Some of them took notes, others just listened, but all were aware that a celebrity was in their midst When something was shown to Der Meister of which he disapproved, with unassuming patience he would pull forth his pencil and a scratch pad, and sketch out the ways and means of improvement.

* * * *

YOUNG WARFIELD is an accomplished marionette-maker. He has 18 people under his, and Mrs. J. Giles's, direction. All are from relief roles. Among them are at least two who, in more happy days, worked with the puppets. They gave puppet shows for school children, and one of them, I think, worked for a circus. Francesco Portello, Ringling clown, and a puppet enthusiast, was along yesterday. They are using some of his marionettes, which were made in Mr. Sarg's famous workshop, as models.

The second room of the boondoggling establishment is given over to a costume room, and to the stage. Here several women were messing around with a typewriter, while a gentleman was sewing away in an accomplished manner at what looked like baby clothes, but which, of course, were the ballet skirts of a marionette. They make all their dolls here, string them up, clothe them, and write plays for them. Then they learn how to handle the funny things from the behind-stage bridge. Later they will put on marionette shows all over the city, for the benefit of school children at playgrounds.

The marionettes have social standing, of course. The Junior League, I understand, is crazy about them; and there are several people about town who have made and operate their own marionette companies. These particular ones officially come under the Federal Theater Project, and in order to work in this shop you have to have had some experience in the past which proves your adaptation for the work. There is much more to it than modeling. There are, for instance, lights to be worried about, and scenes to be painted, and practically everything—in miniature—which has to be done for the life-size stage.

* * * *

THESE Federal puppeteers are staging a puppet festival next month. The Federal puppet theater will be in action then, and so will the Junior League's, and all the puppet companies that go around to the playgrounds of the District. It will last for two days. More than 20 marionette groups will be on display, proving that even though this may be boondoggling, it occupies a large space in the civic affairs of the District.

Mr. Sarg was asked to leave a memento after his hour's inspection of the project. I am sure I have no idea what was in his mind, but he drew with a fountain pen a silly looking elephant-puppet, strings and all. Seems to me he was injecting a little political bias, however.

Disbarred Lawyer Is Denied Appeal

Edmond C. Fletcher, Washington attorney, who was disbarred from District Supreme Court in 1931, yesterday was denied Supreme Court consideration of his plea for removal of the disbarment order. He charged the disbarment proceedings were irregular.

The original disbarment was in connection with the assignment of $3,030 from a fee in a $30,000 case Fletcher won for the city of Cape May, N. J., against the United States in the Court of Claims. The District Supreme Court found Fletcher had repudiated this assignment in favor of the Herman W. Van Senden estate here and collected his entire fee so that Cape May officials were forced to pay the $3,030.

Farm Checks Will Be Mailed Near Elections

want to say that that has not been the case."

When the farm chieftain said that details of payments—amounts, terms, conditions and methods—had not been finally determined, Bolton observed:

"I will be perfectly frank and say that as a member of this committee I am rather averse to supporting an appropriation of money for an indefinite purpose."

Meanwhile, Agriculture Department officials, who can not put the new farm program into execution until the $440,000,000 appropriation carried in the independent offices bill is finally approved, chafed at the delay. The bill now is in conference, conferees have not met, and final House and Senate approval still is needed. AAA officials were said to be seeking a lawful way to start field operations Thursday before the money actually is appropriated.

Other developments:

A Department of Agriculture "intentions to plant" report showed substantial increases in the acreage of crops over last year. As of March 1, farmers indicated they would plant 22,440,000 acres of all spring wheat, or 119.2 per cent of last year, and 98,775,000 acres of corn, 106.5 per cent of last year. These, it was said, would have been considered normal acreages three years ago.

The hite House announced that the President had signed the Congressional resolution making money available for winding up operations under the cotton, tobacco and potato control laws, which Congress repealed after the AAA was invalidated by the Supreme Court.

Farm Administrator Davis told the House Appropriations sub-committee that 95 per cent of the farm benefit payments made would run under $500, but said it was physically impossible for the Agriculture Department to compile a list of those receiving greater amounts, allegedly running up to $200,000, in less than six months.

He was asked to supply the names of those receiving over $10,000 in benefit checks.

"There are 435 members of the House and 96 Senators, and we have had a great many inquiries," said Davis. "We have had a lot of inquiries also from organizations outside, and in order to conserve our working force we have taken the position that we are not going to do that."

Asked by Bolton if he intended to "direct" the farm program on his return from abroad, Davis replied laughingly:

"They may find that they have the thing working better without me, and I would be glad to return to private life if that is so."

Representative Thurston questioned the administrator on the apparent "inconsistency" of taking land out of cultivation through the soil conservation program on one hand, and bringing new land into cultivation on the other by allocations of some $750,000,000 for irrigation and reclamation projects. Davis conceded there had been a "paradox" on that point, but said an attempt was being made to "bring production into balance with the policy of reclamation."

Davis estimated that 4,000 employes would be needed to administer the new farm program, about two-thirds of those estimated for in the budget, with some 1,000 workers stationed in Washington.

Davis said officials are considering calculating benefit payments on two bases; one, based on the acreage of a farmer that is now in soil building crops, the second, on a diversion basis, varying according to the value of production from a particular crop or particular land.

National Political Interest Centers on Illinois Primary

Horner-Kelly Breach Causes Bitter Party Quarrel; Vote April 14 to Be First Test of Roosevelt Strength in Midwest.

(Editor's note: This is the second of a series of Associated Press dispatches presenting a grassroots view of State political situations as they affect the national pre-convention scene.)

Springfield, Ill., March 16.—The focus of national political interest will swing on April 14 to Illinois' primary for a first reading of the Midwestern barometer of Republican sentiment for a Presidential candidate, and an answer to the question of how strong President Roosevelt is in Chicago and downState Illinois.

A bitter intraparty squabble among Democrats has hoisted storm warnings all along the political waters, intensifying interest to such an extent that a record vote is expected to define sharply the existing opinion of the national issues.

The Democratic fuss centers around the candidacy of Gov. Henry Horner for a second term. He is opposed by Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, Chicago health commissioner, placed in the field by the powerful Cook County organization, dominated by Mayor Edward J. Kelly and Patrick Nash, national committeeman.

Horner Charges Bossism.

Horner was dropped, said the mayor in a political speech, because his name on the ticket in November "would be a tin can tied to President Roosevelt."

Rally around the President, he urged voters, adding that they should make his total bigger than the combined vote of the Republican aspirants for Illinois preferment.

"Bossism," replied Gov. Horner.

"I am opposed because one man in Chicago (Mayor Kelly) does not like me."

Col. Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, and Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, will be on the ballots as G. O. P. Presidential aspirants.

President Roosevelt's name will be the only Democratic one. The Illinois Presidential preference vote is not binding, merely advisory as regards the convention delegates. Nevertheless, the test between Knox and Borah is being watched with keenest interest.

Borah a Native Son.

Col. Knox is the Republican "favorite son" for President. Senator Borah, whose birthplace and home during boyhood was in southern Illinois, is entered as a "native son."

President Roosevelt set an Illinois precedent by filing in the preferential primary instead of depending entirely upon the support of the State's delegation.

Eight Republicans seek the nomination for Governor. Len Small of Kankakee, former chief executive of the State, and one of the most colorful political figures in the Nation a decade ago, is one. Others are representatives of various factions in the Republican Party, and there is little question but what scars will be left after the primary, whoever is nominated.

Thompson in Campaign.

Even William Hale Thompson, former mayor of Chicago, who as "Big Bill the Builder," promised to "punch England's King in the snout" during one of his mayoral campaigns, has tilted his 10-gallon hat at the fighting angle and come out of retirement to have a part in the fun.

Big Bill is backing Thomas V. Sullivan, Republican candidate for the nomination for attorney general, and aside from that he has said little. He asserts that several of the Republican gubernatorial aspirants have sought his support.

James Hamilton Lewis, veteran Democratic Senator, professes to show little concern about primary opposition from two politically unknown opponents.

Five Republicans are seeking the Senatorial nomination, including former Senator Otis F. Glenn, defeated in 1932, and former Representative William E. Hull, of Peoria.

Supreme Court Asked to Rule On Utilities Act

Baltimore Concern Appeals Registration Opinion; Tribunal Adjourns.

The Supreme Court was asked yesterday to rule on constitutionality of another major New Deal law, the utilities holding company act.

The court met briefly, handing down three minor decisions, and then adjourned for two weeks. When it reconvenes, it may rule on the Guffey coal act and the securities act of 1933.

The holding company appeal was filed by Burco, Inc., of Baltimore, in a suit against the Electric Bond & Share Co. The Circuit Court of Appeals at Charlotte, N. C., has held in ruling on the case that utility companies doing an intrastate business could not be compelled to register under the law. The Baltimore District Court had held the law unconstitutional, but the Appellate Court did not rule on the act as a whole.

Burco, Inc., is asking that the Electric Bond & Share Co. be compelled to register. As a creditor holding $150,000 of bonds of the holding company, Burco contended that registration would facilitate reorganization or liquidation of the company's affairs.

The Supreme Court again failed to rule in the Sugar Institute case, in which that organization is charged with violation of the anti-trust laws.

Commissioners In Montgomery Facing Inquiry

Grand Jury Is Expected to Look Into System of Handling Accounts.

Investigation of the method of handling cash and accounts in the office of the Montgomery County commissioners is expected to be made by the county grand jury as a result of the arrest Friday of Edward Peter, counsel to the county commissioners, on charges of embezzlement of county funds.

In charging the grand jury, which convened at the Circuit Court in Rockville, Md., Judge Charles W. Woodward drew speical attention to the law covering defalcation in public office.

"Every grand jury that ever has met in this county since the law was passed has had that law brought to its attention," Judge Woodward advised the jurors. "We mean by public officials any man who handles public funds—the sheriff, the clerk of the court, the treasurer, even notaries public—any one who handles public funds comes under that section and it is the duty of the court to bring it to your attention. It is your duty to investigate and see if any public officials have defalcated their accounts."

Commissioners Act.

In the meantime, the county commissioners have moved to set their house in order. They are expected to order today at their meeting that in the future the accounts due taxpayers shall be paid directly by the county commissioners and not through the attorney to the board as in the past.

The board also is expected to adopt an order authorizing a complete audit of the money expended for the widening of Wisconsin avenue. Commisisoner Paul M. Coughlan said this probably would extend back into the previous administration when first payments were made on the rights of way.

The county commissioners expect to be subpenaed today to appear before the grand jury as do other officials of the office. They are expected to explain the financial set-up of their office. Other county officials handling money also are expected to be summoned before the grand jury, which may make recommendations regarding possible changes of the set-up for the entire county.

Peter Out on Bond.

Peter, who is at liberty on bond of $10,000 following his arrest Friday, had submitted his resignation and returned $15,941.05 to the county.

He specifically was charged with embezzlement of $2,000, which he drew December 18 to pay a claim for tax refunds to the Washington Railway & Electric Co., now the Capital Transit Co., which it alleged had not been authorized by the board and had not been paid to the traction company.

The grand jury yesterday considered evidence against Mrs. Lillian Maddock, charged with the slaying of Eddie Killeen, one of the overlords of Washington's gambling fraternity. She had told police that she shot Killeen in self-defense while the pair was at a drinking party at Killeen's Brookmont summer home. Mrs. Maddock is at liberty on $5,000 bond.

Members of Jury.

Members of the grand jury are: Bernard R. Gannon, Silver Spring businessman, foreman; Eugene Harriss, Robert C. Green, William M. Burrows, John P. Horine, Bernard T. Brosius, Lawrence V. Lampson, Benjamin A. Ellin, Joseph B. Pyles, Charles A. Hobbs, William W. Moore, Aaron Sell, Robert W. Farmer, Adolph E. Gude, Garrett W. Watkins, John N. Bentley, John Henry Heiser, Lewis Duvall, Alvie A. Moxley, Joseph R. Lechlider, Rowan F. Erb, James D. Barron and Walter K. Matthews.

The petit jury for the March term of the Circuit Court includes: Nathan C. Stiles, John J. Lambert, Henry W. White, G. Rowland Mullinix, John P. Caulfield, William K. Carlin, Monroe S. Shipley, Joseph S. Brake, Jones F. Hoyle, John J. Dolan, Henry L. Benson, Melvin S. Penn, Clifton N. Burroughs, George W. Athey, Charles B. Hawley, Greenberry G. Griffith, F. Anson Ball, Charles E. Kohlhoss, Benjamin O. Woodward, Clifton C. Link, Charles A. Roberts, C. Clyde Harriss, John William Beall, Richard H. Gray and Guy F. Allnutt.

John Huiess, of Takoma Park, was appointed stenographer to the grand jury, and Walter M. Bogley, of Rockville, bailiff, by Judge Woodward.

On The Air Today

THERE'S a bit of the shamrock in the air today. St. Patrick's Day is too colorful for the broadcasting industry to pass by lightly.

One of the day's numerous highlights will be Ray Dooley's portrayal of a "child prodigy to end all child prodigies." She appears with her husband on his opening show, "Eddie Dowling's Revue," WRC, at 10. Miss Dooley is credited with the husband-heckling technique of the stage—and she'll show how it's done tonight.

Kate Smith pays her respects to the day with "A Little Dash of Dublin" and "Macushla," WJSV, at 7:30. Walter O'Keefe converts every member of his cast into Irishmen in the "Caravan," at 9, WJSV. There'll be Paddy O'Hunt, Shamus O'Husing and, of course, McGillicuddy as is.

• • • •

Other programs honoring the day:

3—"Romance of Ireland," with Stephen Fox, WJSV.

3:15—Eamon de Valera, by short wave, from Dublin, WJSV.

• • • •

Lawrence Tibbett is heard tonight (WJSV at 8:30) in the final concert of his current series. He features his "personal theme song," "De Glory Road," by Jacques Wolfe. Tibbett will remain in New York throughout the Metropolitan season and then begin a concert tour. He'll be in Hollywood during the summer to make "The Mark of Zorro," the Douglas Fairbanks silent picture of years ago, in sound.

Admirers of Gladys Swarthout will be doubly interested in her appearance tonight (WJSV at 10) in the Mary Pickford "party"—again from New York. Miss Swarthout will appear with her husband, Frank Chapman, barytone of concert stage and opera. After the show tonight, Miss Pickford returns to the West Coast and future programs of the series will, in truth, be from Pickfair.

• • • •

Other features today:

Dorothy Thompson: Author and wife of Sinclair Lewis, becomes a regular news commentator on Claudine McDonald's "Woman's Radio Review," WRC, at 4.

Tom Terriss: Traveler and explorer, tells of his experience with an ancient Egyptian curse (he was present when King Tut's tomb was opened), WRC, at 8, with Leo Reisman Orchestra.

Willard Robison: And his Deep River Orchestra, in a late evening "Nocturne" program with David Ross, poet-announcer, WJSV, at 11.

"Thine Alone:" Northern Dramatic Company production, WOL, at 10. Starring Meredith Smith.

Grover Cleveland Memorial: Mayor LaGuardia and Representative Celler, WJSV, at 10:45.

Mrs. Roosevelt: Annual St. Patrick's Fair, WMAL, at 4:30.

Radio Joe: In broadcast from Press Club Auditorium, for Newspaper Women's Annual Fair, benefit of Children's Hospital, WMAL, at 7:30.

Political 'Pink Pills' Necessary, Says Richberg

Defends New Deal in Talk at First Town Hall in Montgomery.

Donald R. Richberg, former NRA administrator, praised the Roosevelt Administration last night, saying that future generations "will pay any honor that the present generation may withhold," as he spoke at Montgomery County's first Town Hall meeting held at the Leland Junior High School by the Women's Democratic Club of Montgomery County.

His subject was "Constitutional Remedies and Pink Pills." Richberg defined political pink pills as laws aimed at accomplishing the humanitarian aims of socialism, and added:

"Most lawyers will agree that the political program of state socialism cannot be put into effect under our Constitutions. But it is not a fact that the humanitarian aims of socialism cannot be achieved under our Constitution.

"And it should not be possible for every selfish interest which is in opposition to a law for the protection or promotion of the common interest to entrench itself behind the Constitution and to hold itself free from the obligations that rest upon us all to make sure that the great resources of this favored land are employed for the greatest possible benefit of all.

"That may be one of the objectives of socialism, but it must also be one of the objectives of any political program which is to command the support of a free people enjoying the power of self-government."

Richberg sought to show that New Deal laws were designed to guard and rehabilitate private enterprise rather than to regiment business and agriculture in a scheme of state socialism.

Of the Tennessee Valley act, he said:

"The Supreme Court disregarded the expensive advice of the American Luxury League and held almost unanimously that the United States has the authority to protect, to improve and to manage public properties in a business-like manner."

Saying that the Federal budget should now be balanced, Richberg added: "We could not afford to balance the Federal budget until we had used the power of the national credit effectively to increase the earning power of private enterprises, of wage earners and of farmers, so that we could balance the budget of the American people."

Members of the panel which interrogated Richberg were Dr. James Hart, professor of political science at Johns Hopkins University; Franklyn Waltman, jr., political columnist of The Post; John L Lambert, head of the Washington Bureau of Universal News Service, and David L. Cohn, traveler and author.

Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, former vice president of the Democratic National Committee, presided. A group of young Democrats from the county acted as ushers.

Judges Would Compel Student Court Visit

Chicago, March 16 (AP).—The judges of the superior court voted today to ask the board of education to make a visit to the criminal court a prerequisite to the graduation of high school students.

$100,000 Will Keep 4 Stradivari in Use

Mrs. Matthew John Whittall, who last December presented to the Library of Congress a quartet of Stradivari stringed instruments—two violins, a viola and a cello—has assured that these instruments be kept in active use by providing a $100,000 trust fund for their maintenance, the music division of the library announced yesterday.

The fund will enable the library to present occasional concerts by skilled musicians, thus keeping the instruments in the service for which they were intended. Library officials could not predict yesterday when these concerts would be held.

Mrs. Whittall's original gift gave many music lovers cause to fear that the warm-toned voices of the instruments would be stilled behind glass cases.

Anti-Submarine Device Revealed

London, March 16 (AP).—Somerset de Chair, 24, son of Admiral Sir Dudley de Chair, told the House of Commons today during debate on naval estimates that Great Britain has an almost foolproof anti-submarine device operated on the principle of the reflector ray.

If a submarine came within torpedo range of a ship it would be in danger of instant destruction, he said.

De Chair added the admiralty had constructed an entirely new type of ship capable of developing terrific volume of fire for defense of harbors by converting old cruisers into anti-aircraft batteries.

4 Bank Presidents Named for Board

By the Associated Press.

At least four presidents of the Federal Reserve banks will be among the banks' five representatives on the new open market committee which will determine the extent of the Federal Reserve system's buying and selling of Government bonds.

Meeting here yesterday, the presidents notified the Reserve board that George L. Harrison, New York; M. J. Fleming, Cleveland; G. H. Hamilton, Kansas City, and B. A. McKinney, Dallas, had been selected for committee membership.

The fifth member, who will represent the Reserve district of St. Louis and Chicago, remains to be chosen.

The banks' representatives will serve with the seven governors of the Reserve system as the open market committee.

Formerly this committee consisted of the 12 heads of the Reserve banks. The board in Washington had no jurisdiction over its actions. The banking act of 1935, however, gave the board of governors the dominant voice on the committee.

Husband of 16 Sighs Relief Upon Arrest

Vienna, March 16 (U.P.).—Alois Stephen, young Austrian arrested on charges of marrying 16 girls for dowries, breathed a sigh of relief when jailed today.

"This is the first quiet moment I have had for years," he said. "I hope my brides can't get me here."

He said it had been a tremendous job keeping his various wives from meeting.

Council Urges Aid For Small Business

By the Associated Press.

George L. Berry's industrial council recommended yesterday that Reconstruction Corporation meet an "increasingly urgent" need among small business enterprises for long-term loans.

Interest should be not more than 4 per cent and the means of obtaining loans should be simplified, the council said in a report to President Roosevelt.

"It is apparent that the Government loan policies now in effect have not promoted sufficient financial relief for small enterprise," the council said.

"Since small enterprise plays an important part in the economic life of the Nation, no appreciable trend in widespread recovery can be expected unless immediate provision is made for long term credit to small industries."

Shift of Princess Anne School Property Started

Princess Anne, Md., March 16 (AP). The transfer of the property of the former Princess Anne Academy to Morgan College, Negro institute of Baltimore, was started today under the direction of Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor.

A contract of sale, providing for the first payment of $25,000 by the State, was drawn up by O'Conor and Gordon Tull, local attorney. The State Legislature provided for the purchase of the property for $100,000.

15 New Oyster Leases Protested in Maryland

Baltimore, March 16 (AP).—The contesting of 15 applications for new leases on oyster areas, off the mouth of the Manokin River, in Somerset County, was disclosed today by Robert F. Duer, chairman of the State conservaton commission.

The commission had reclassified the area between Piney Island and Little Deals Island, depleted of oysters in 1928. Many of the leases expired, and the property reverted to the State, although the bars again had become full of oysters. Duer said the leases, covering a total of 435 acres, were pending before the commission. Residents of Deals Island and nearby sections, he said, were demanding that the area involved be returned to the status of free-use oyster bars.

Pay less if you like... but Expect less

Cadillac craftsmen—sc d for thirty years in fine-car manufacture—can produce high quality at the lowest cost in America. But they are not miracle men. They cannot produce a La Salle to sell in the low-price field. There are numerous good cars that sell in the lower ranges—but they are built, necessarily, to sell at a price. La Salle cannot compete with these cars in cost—any more than they can compete with La Salle in quality. It is the privilege of any buyer to pay less for his car than La Salle's modest price—but when he pays less, he should expect less.

Harvard's Head Called Impolite By Hanfstaengl

Nazi Press Chief Revives Feud With President of His Alma Mater.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 16.—Dr. Ernst Hanfstaengl, Harvard graduate, who is Adolf Hitler's foreign press chief, again entered the lists today against Dr. James Bryan Conant, president of Harvard, and attempted to read him a lesson in politeness.

Responding to a complaint from Hanfstaengl, former Harvard crew man, that Dr. Conant had invited him to contribute to the anniversary fund yet turned down an offer of a scholarship to the university, Dr. Conant had written Hanfstaengl February 18:

"The inclusion of your name among those receiving the letter (asking for an anniversary fund contribution) was an oversight."

Hanfstaengl disclosed today he had replied: "It would seem your letter might as well have contained at least one word of apology or regret. This, I believe, would have been in keeping with common, not to mention academic, courtesy."

At the same time the Nazi press chief seized upon an editorial in the Harvard Crimson, undergraduate publication, February 13. He wrote the Crimson that the editorial "obliges me to refer to the matter of my contributions to the class fund."

"Delving into an old chest filled with Harvardians, I discovered papers showing that in 1934 my class received two personal donations of $500 and $1,000, respectively. The university officially thanked me.

"If you consider that Dr. Conant and the Harvard fellows on one hand accepted $1,500 in June, 1934, and on the other hand refused a $1,000 scholarship three months later, do you wonder that I still find myself in some sort of dilemma?"

Dr. Hanfstaengl, who was graduated from Harvard in 1909, offered $1,000 in 1934 to enable an outstanding Harvard student to study in Germany for one year. The offer was refused by the Harvard Corporation and Dr. Conant.

In a letter to Hanfstaengl they said Harvard was "unwilling to accept a gift from one who is so closely associated with the leadership of a political party which has inflicted damage on the universities of Germany."

Unidentified Man Dies of Auto Hurts

An unidentified white man, about 50 years old, died in the Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park, Md., yesterday of a skull fracture suffered when he was struck by an automobile on the Colesville pike near Tall House Tavern Sunday night.

The man failed to regain consciousness before death. There were no marks of identification in his clothing.

Joseph N. Yearwood, colored, 637 T street northwest, the driver of the car, told Montgomery County police the man walked in front of his machine. Yearwood was released under a $500 bond on a technical charge of reckless driving.

The body was taken to the Warner E. Pumphrey funeral home in Rockville, Md., where photographs and fingerprints are to be taken today by Sergt. Theodore Voliten, head of the county police identification bureau, to aid in establishing the man's identity.

League Withdrawal Is Backed in Paris

Paris, March 16 (AP).—The newspaper Le Matin said tonight there is "perfect accord in the cabinet over the possibility of leaving the League of Nations."

"It may be added in such a case France would take it upon herself to demand respect for her signature," the newspaper added in its comment on the French stand of strong condemnation for Germany as a protest against reoccupation of the Rhineland.

This was interpreted to mean that the government is determined to use force to oust the German troops.

"The government judges if the League is not capable of making itself respected but of simply acknowledging the violation of such an agreement, it is completely useless for a loyal nation to continue to be represented in such an assembly."

Court Throws Out Suit Against Thaw

Harrisonburg, Va., March 17 (AP).—The civil suit for $50,000 damages for alleged personal injuries, brought by the Baroness Lador against Harry K. Thaw, was stricken from the docket in United States Court today.

The suit, alleging injuries, was brought sometime ago, but has not been brought to trial. Judge John Paul ordered it removed from the docket after Thaw's attorneys had appeared today. It could be reinstated by attorneys for the plaintiff within a year.

Attorneys for Thaw pleaded the statute of limitations.

Phone Firm Allowed To Use Air-Line Rates

Richmond, Va., March 16 (AP).—The East Coast Telephones, Inc., operating in the Northern Neck, was authorized by the State Corporation Commission today to establish within its territory, effective March 22, the present airline basis for toll rates in effect generally throughout the State.

The commission set for hearing Friday a petition of the Farmers Rural Utilities, Inc., for permission to issue ten shares of no par value stock, at $25 a share, for purposes of organization. The corporation is being organized to co-operate with the Federal Rural Electrical Administration in the construction of power lines in Middle Virginia. It was planned to borrow $366,800 from the REA in extending electric service to farm areas.

Radiophoto: London League Meeting Adjourns Abruptly

reportedly were satisfied with the decisions, because they felt they avoided a trap Hitler laid for them. They believed Der Fuehrer's second condition was designed to provoke a flat rejection which would have given the impression they had made the Council slam its door in Germany's face.

The decision that Germany cannot vote was based on the Locarno Treaty clause providing that the guaranteed powers—France, Belgium and Germany—cannot vote, while the guarantor powers—Britain and Italy—can.

Flandin's statement that the Council should recognize Germany's treaty violations, reportedly drew support of Litvinoff and Foreign Ministers Nicholas Titulesco, of Rumania; Tewfik Rusti Aras, of Turkey; Josef Beck, of Poland, and A. Barcia, of Spain.

Thus the Council was ready to proceed without having to await Germany's reply to today's decisions. Many believed meanwhile that Hitler cannot agree to sit on the Council's terms because they would necessitate his backing down on his previous conditions.

Six neutrals, the representatives of Spain, Portugal, Denmark, Argentina, Chile and Ecuador, met secretly and agreed that Hitler had violated the Locarno Treaty. But they did not attempt a decision regarding measures to give France and Belgium redress.

At the Council's first secret session, Flandin said:

"Germany was invited to the Council simply as a Locarno signatory. Therefore, Hitler's conditions are unacceptable."

After the session the League secretariat issued this communique:

"The President recalled that at the last meeting the Council authorized the secretary general to send a telegram to the German government inviting it to participate in the Council's discussion of communications from the French and Belgian governments. He read the secretary general's telegram and the reply received yesterday from the German government.

"The president suggested that the Council, before holding a public meeting, should consider the German reply which raises two questions, firstly, that of Germany enjoying the same rights as other council members and secondly, the question to the Locarno powers: Are the proposals made in Chancellor Hitler's speech to be discussed immediately or in the near future? The Council decided to consider the German reply immediately at its secret meeting."

At the private session Beck proposed the meeting be transformed into a secret one in the adjoining room for the purpose of discussing Germany's reply. Titulescue said he would agree provided the next room was warmer. The secret meeting, therefore, opened in a warmer room.

The first secret council, by rejecting Hitler's second condition, left Germany with the choice of backing down or assuming responsibility for a break between Germany and the League.

However, Sir Eric Phipps, British Ambassador to Berlin, was instructed again to appeal anew to Hitler to send a representative without the stipulations opposed by the French.

Instructions to Phipps were based on a noon decision by the British cabinet.

Clear Way for Decision.

During the secret session France and Belgium drafted the resolution condemning Germany. They believed the decision to send a curt reply to Germany's conditional acceptance of the Council's invitation cleared the way for an early decision regarding treaty violations, on which France's demand for sanctions is staked.

The Franco-Belgian resolution, presented to the public Council meeting, was designed to put in motion article 4, paragraph 2, of the Locarno Pact, stipulating that:

"As soon as the Council of the League of Nations is satisfied that such a violation or breach has been committed, it shall notify its finding without delay to the powers signatory to the present treaty, who severally agree that in such case they will, each of them, come immediately to the assistance of the power against whom the act complained of is directed."

If the Council votes the resolution, Aveno] will be obliged to notify Great Britain and Italy, who automatically would be bound to aid France and Belgium.

It is expected that France then would submit to the Locarno powers a plan for economic and financial sanctions against Germany. The French plan probably would include a boycott of German goods and refusal of loans and credits to Germany.

Reich May Accept Parley Bid

tack upon France that was more bitter than either of the addresses delivered at Karlsruhe and Munich in which he defended his course in sending troops into the Rhineland.

He attacked France for signing the treaty with Russia guaranteeing mutual assistance in event of attack, and declared "we won't accept that others make treaties which concern our eternal life. Neither Locarno nor the League is as important as the right of 68,000,000 people to live."

Moving into his familiar theme of "equal rights" he demanded, "equality for all, also for us, nothing less than that."

"Reason some day will triumph over politicians," he declared.

At the outset he asserted, "the world must know that there are not two or three different opinions in Germany, but only one."

"The spokesman for Germany represents this unity," he added, referring to himself.

Foreigners Must Know.

"I don't need this election for myself," he said, "for I can stand on my own feet. I want this for the benefit of foreigners. They must know that Germany is united."

The unity for which Hitler appealed was for indorsement of his actions at the election March 29 when a new Reichstag is chosen.

Except for the massed cheering, the Rhineland's celebration of "army day" was without military pomp. Big-scale military reviews were canceled because of the tenseness of the international situation, and Gen. Hermann Goering, minister of aviation, held only a brief inspection of the air force. The public was discouraged from entering the field.

The mildness of the military display was meant to emphasize the "symbolic" character of the remilitarization of the Rhineland.

Hitler swept his great audience to a frenzy of acclamation of his blunt action in repudiating the Locarno Pact, as he now passionately appealed for peace, now defied the world.

"German people, I ask you, do you want to bury the hatchet with France?" he exclaimed, and the 15,000 packed in the "Festhalle" roared approval and stamped the floor until the building shook.

"Do you want to oppress the people?" he demanded, and his hearers shouted "no."

"I am sure a similar question asked the French people would evoke the same answer," Hitler continued.

"We want nothing from France," he shouted, "but of Germany we want all there is. We want sovereignty over Germany, nothing more—but also nothing less. No might in the world can drive us back from this decision."

Fire Ruins Store Stock.

Berlin, Md., March 16 (AP).—Fire resulting from an oil-stove explosion caused damage estimated at $2,000 to the stock of a chain grocery store here late today. Slight water damage was done to a beauty shop on the floor above the store. No one was injured.

Prosecution Begins Hauptmann Steps

Trenton, N. J., March 16 (AP).—The battle to save Bruno Richard Hauptmann from execution two weeks hence and the imminent return of one of his chief accusers, Dr. John F. Condon, Lindbergh ransom intermediary, stirred the prosecution to action today.

Attorney General David T. Wilentz, who headed the prosecution at Hauptmann's trial at Flemington, summoned Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck, jr., of Hunterdon County, and Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the State police, to his office in the State House.

What they talked about was not disclosed, but it was understood they discussed the possibility a second stay of execution would be asked for Hauptmann. Another subject of the conference, it was reported, was Condon's arrival in New York tomorrow after two months in Panama, and the request of Hauptmann's counsel, C. Lloyd Fisher, that the intermediary be examined.

completely destroyed instead of the two at first reported.

A heavy guard surrounded Parliament when the session began and, although a number of persons fought for admission to the proceedings, there were no immediate disorders.

When the Chamber of Deputies was called to order, 393 of its 473 seats were filled.

The deputies elected former Premier Diego Martinez Barrio as their president by the heaviest vote ever cast for one man for that post. He received 386 votes, while the remaining 7 ballots were blank.

As first vice president of the Chamber, the deputies elected Prof. Luis Jiminez Asua, the Socialist who narrowly escaped assassination by alleged monarchists last week.

Nation's Armed Forces Halted 1920 Florida Cable Landing

State Department Reveals British Planned Miami, Barbadoes Link.

By the Associated Press.

An official account of a bizarre moment in 1920 when the United States dispatched warships to prevent the landing in Florida by a telegraph company of an ocean cable was published yesterday by the State Department.

Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State, on July 17, 1920, informed President Wilson that Western Union, which he described as "a British cable company," planned to land a cable at Miami to connect the Barbados "in defiance of law" and despite the fact they had no permit from this Government. He requested assistance from the Army, Navy and Department of Justice.

The company already had "a monopoly of cable facilities to Brazil, to the rigorous exclusion of American lines," Colby declared.

President Wilson authorized any action deemed necessary and on July 31—after receiving information the British cable ship Colonia was en route from Plymouth to land the cable at Miami—a council was held by Secretary of War Baker, Admiral Coontz, Acting Secretary of the Navy, and other high officials.

An official memorandum reveals that at the council:

Secretary Baker stated he was prepared "to take necessary steps" to prevent laying the cable from the sand bar at Miami into the ocean, and had issued the necessary orders to the commanding officer of the Southeastern Department of the Army.

Admiral Coontz said he "had already dispatched two destroyers and a sub-chaser to prevent the landing from the high seas" (inside the 3-mile limit), and Admiral Decker, commandant at Key West, had been ordered to the scene.

A decision also was reached "that if a cable was landed it woud be cut at once and hauled beyond the 3-mile limit."

Thruogh August, September, October and November the American Army, Navy and Marine corps patrolled the beach near Miami. An American destroyer trailed the cable ship, but made no effort to interfere outside the 3-mile limit.

The State Department, during those same months, engaged in note writing and diplomatic discussions with the British authorities. Just before the 3-mile limit was reached the British government ordered the Colonia to refrain from dropping any cable in American waters.

Divorce for Desertion Granted Mrs. Ingraham

Mrs. Olga T. Ingraham, 8511 Georgia avenue, Silver Spring, Md., was granted a final decree of absolute divorce from Bertram P. Ingraham in the Circuit Court at Rockville, Md., yesterday.

The decree was signed by Judge Charles W. Woodward after an examination of the testimony which stated the couple was married in Washington on June 21, 1930. Mrs. Ingraham charged she was deserted on November 1, 1932. She was represented by Attorney Stedman Prescott, of Rockville, Md.

It's the 17th of BOCK

St. Patrick did a great job this day! Let's duplicate it. Let's chase those wriggling varmints of winter's chill, of depression's blue, of general staleness with a beady, tangy brew the good Saint himself would approve—rest his soul.

'Tis a cozy drink, the deep amber of it,—the dancing bubbles of it,—the sheer goodness of it. The top of the foam to you, and the rest of the glass to yourself!

READY FOR YOU TODAY

Rich, dark, thick-bodied American Bock. Those who had it last year won't need an introduction. To those who didn't we recommend its mellowness (from long aging), its richness in calories and foody carbohydrates. On the 17th give yourself a chance to taste how good real Bock is!

How Should a Newspaper MEASURE ITS PROGRESS?

HOW SHOULD a newspaper measure its progress?

By what it has taken out of its community—the advertising dollars and the circulation pennies it has collected?

Or by the things the newspaper has itself contributed to that community, to make itself more truly a part of the life of the city?

The Washington Post believes in the latter plan. In measuring our progress we think, not of the 84% circulation gain and the 111% advertising linage gain in two years, but of the achievements which The Post has been able to accomplish for Washington.

For example:

The Post strove mightily for alley clearance, and that work is at last under way. We count that as progress.

Recently The Post has attempted to help the traffic situation, thru a series of articles calling attention to the reasons behind traffic violations. These articles have stirred some hornets' nests—but seem definitely to have helped cut the accident rate. We count that as progress.

In two and a half years, The Post has built a national news bureau, added Wirephoto, created a women's department second to none, added comics, offered more sports news, improved its typographical appearance, developed an editorial page which has been quoted and commented on throughout the Nation, given a wider news coverage in all fields. We count these things as progress.

And The Washington Post looks forward to continuing this type of progress every year, every month, every day.

J. H. Silcox Dead; Cotton Market Expert

Rites for AAA Specialist Will Be Conducted in Charleston.

James H. Silcox, 47, AAA cotton marketing specialist, died suddenly Sunday evening at the Alexandria (Va.) home of his brother, F. A. Silcox, chief of the Forestry Service. His death was caused by a heart attack.

Silcox, born in Charleston, S. C., had been a cotton trader there most of his life. He came to the AAA in 1934 to serve as contact man with the cotton trade.

He was a graduate of the University of South Carolina and of Clemson Agricultural College. He was a prominent Mason, a member of the Charleston Cotton Exchange, the Carolina Yacht Club, of Charleston, and of Alpha Tau Omega Fraternity.

Besides his brother, Silcox leaves his wife, the former Helen Heyward, of Charleston, and four children, James, 22; Helen, 20; Margaret, 18, and Sarah, 16. Burial will take place in Charleston.

Services Today For J. J. Hayes

Requiem mass will be said in St. Peter's Catholic Church at 10 this morning for James J. Hayes, owner of a dry goods store at 319 Pennsylvania avenue southeast and for many years prominent in local business and financial institutions. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Hayes, who was 60, died Saturday at his home, 114 Third street southeast, after a short illness. He had been for 46 years connected with the dry goods store which he owned. A native Washingtonian, he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lottie Barnes Hayes.

He was a director of the Eastern Building and Loan Association and of the National Capital Bank. He belonged to the Holy Name Society, the St. Vicent de Paul Society and the Southeast Business Men's Association. He was a fourth-degree member of the Knights of Columbus.

House Votes $2,500 For Memorial Day

The House yesterday, on recommendation of the Military Affairs Committee, adopted a bill authorizing an appropriation of $2,500 from the Federal Treasury for the current and succeeding years to aid in the observance of Memorial Day in the Capital.

The fund, if finally approved, would be payable to the treasurer of the Veterans' Memorial Day Corporation, which has charge of the observance. It would be expended in decorating graves of all soldiers, sailors, and marines, whether they be in the District or in Arlington National Cemetery.

The committee in its report pointed out that the fund at one time was raised by soliciting contributions from Government employes. President Harding put a stop to this practice.

The bill specifies that none of the $2,500 is to be spent on salaries or administrative expenses. Officers of the Veterans' Memorial Day Corporation do not receive salaries.

Tennyson Rites Set for Tomorrow

Funeral services for Albert T. Tennyson, 58, of 1838 Biltmore street northwest, who died in the Washington Sanitarium Sunday, will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock in Epiphany Church.

Mr. Tennyson, a native of St. Marys County, Md., was the dean of paper salesmen in Washington.

Entering the employ of the R. P. Andrews Paper Co. February 28, 1896, as a messenger boy, he rose to be manager of the publications paper division.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Sarah C. Tennyson; a daughter, Mrs. Ruth Tennyson Darneille; a son, J. Burch Tennyson. His mother and a sister also survive. He was a member of Acacia Lodge, No. 18, F. & A. M., and the Washington Board of Trade.

"They're Off."

Why waste the time and to a race track go;
Be it Laurel, Bowie or Pimlico?

Why spend two bucks to see the "bang-tails" run;
When here in our streets there's much greater fun?

For just before nine, when the bugle blows
There're clerks on each corner ten deep, in rows.

When the barrier's lifted and all lights change,
The race is thrilling, exciting and strange!

If racing's fostered to improve the breed
Of mankind's great friend, the four-legged steed;

This practice of out-racing autos here
Will no doubt help us—but kill me, I fear!

Daniel H. Day Funeral Rites Set Thursday

Resident of Takoma Park Succumbs to Attack of Pneumonia.

Daniel Harrison Day, 75, of 318 Garland avenue, Takoma Park, Md., who was reared in Texas, died yesterday in the Washington Sanitarium. Death was caused by pneumonia.

Mr. Day, who was born in Naples, Tex., came to Takoma Park to work at the sanitarium eight years ago. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Cora Day, 8 children, 12 grandchildren and 1 great-grandchild.

The sons are William C., of Takoma Park; Preston, of Naples; David M., of Los Angeles; Ray, of Glendale, Calif., and James R., of Phoenix. The daughters are Miss Leila Day, Mrs. Mary Patterson and Mrs. Wilmer Jenkins.

In November, 1934, Mr. and Mrs. Day celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. Last summer they had a reunion in the Day home with children, grandchildren and the great-grandchild present.

Funeral services will be held Thursday at 2 p. m. in Columbian Hall. Burial will be in Washington Memorial Park.

Funeral Rites Held for Widow Of Admr. Hall

Burial in Arlington; Was Colonial Dames Member and Navy Sponsor.

Funeral services for Mrs. Annie Martin Hall, widow of Rear Admiral Reynold Thomas Hall, U. S. N., were held yesterday morning in Arlington National Cemetery.

Services were conducted at the grave by the Rev. A. A. McCallum, of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. The honorary pallbearers included Rear Admiral Mark Bristol, retired; Capt. Dudley Knox, retired; Capt. Arthur Huntington, Capt. C. A. Jones, Commander Paul Bastedo and Commander H. A. Seiller.

Mrs. Hall died Friday at the home of her brother, J. W. Martin, of Norfolk, Va. She was the daughter of Joel and Catherine Martin and is survived by two brothers, Joel Martin and J. Watters Martin.

Mrs. Hall was a Colonial Dame and a prominent member of the Society of Sponsors of the United States Navy. She served as president of the latter organization for ten years, starting in 1912. Together with Miss Edith Wallace Benham, she compiled and edited "Ships of the United States Navy and Their Sponsors."

After the death of Admiral Hall, in 1934, she made her home in Norfolk.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief Of Pain

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are one of Nature's chief ways of taking the acids and waste out of the blood. If they don't pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing.

If you have trouble with frequent bladder passages with scanty amount which often smart and burn, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.

Don't wait for serious trouble. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS—which have been used successfully for over 40 years by millions of people. They give happy relief and will help flush out the 15 miles of kidney tubes. Get DOAN'S PILLS. —Advt.

Kindler's Gift Of $500 Aids Music Drive

Seven Promises of Like Sums Follow at Formal Closing.

Sporting Chance Group 'Passes Hat,' Collecting More Than $100.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Music of a new kind came forth under the magic touch of Dr. Hans Kindler yesterday at the luncheon at the Carlton, marking the formal close of the fund campaign of the National Symphony Orchestra, of which he is conductor. The down beat was Dr. Kindler's announcement of his own contribution of $500. A chorus of seven promises of other sums to match it was the response.

The promises were either for individual contributions or for the collection of the amount. Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, chairman of the women's committee for the campaign, was the first to speak; next was Mrs. Tracy Dows, a member of the board; then Dr. William McClellan, who was one of the honored guests at the luncheon; Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, who spoke for an anonymous donor; Mrs. George Hewett Myers, Miss Mary B. Adams and the sporting chance committee, whose members are never known.

The sporting chance group started collecting its pledge at once, "passing the hat" from table to table, gathering in more than $100 from the 128 guests at the luncheon.

Most Difficult "Prospects."

The members of this group are necessarily anonymous as they are assigned "prospects" considered the most difficult in Washington to approach for contributions to civic projects.

Harold Marsh, chairman of the men's committee, presided during the program, which was broadcast. Representative Ralph O. Brewster, one of the guests of honor and speakers, was a schoolmate of Mr. Marsh's at Bowdoin College and it was Mr. Marsh who introduced him to Miss Dorothy Foss, of Portland, Me., who later became his wife.

Representative Brewster, decrying "the savage beat of tom toms heard with increasing frequency over the radio," urged the support of the National Symphony Orchestra as a means of maintaining the standards of American culture.

"Coming of Age."

"America is beginning to come of age," he said. "The success or failure of this drive will not make or mar American culture but by it we shall score our own rating in the distance we have progressed. We have laid a marvelous material foundation and it is now time we built upon it the culture we desire."

Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the Mint, spoke particularly of the value of Dr. Kindler's morning concerts for children and called attention to the fact there is not a large capital in the world where such an organization as the National Symphony Orchestra is not already established.

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, likened the orchestra to a great engineering project which could not be figured in terms of the expense of building, but rather the cost of leaving it undone. Other speakers were Mr. Corcoran Thom and Dr. McClellan, both of whom represented the interest of the business and professional men of Washington in the symphony project.

Reports of Chairmen.

Reports of chairmen of various committees which have been working on the drive included that of Mrs. Malin Craig, wife of the chief of staff, who announced a generous amount contributed to the Army committee. Mrs. Eugene Byrnes, president of the Friday Morning Music Club, was another who reported a large contribution. Among others were Mrs. Emery Land, wife of Admiral Land, reporting for the Navy group; Dean Henry Grattan Doyle, of George Washington University, reporting for the schools; Mrs. Reeve Lewis, for the Twentieth Century Club, the Music Teachers Club and the Arts Club, designated as the music lovers' group; and Mrs. Oliver Strunk.

Prominent among the supporters of the orchestra who were present were Miss Alice Clapp, Mrs. Harold Marsh, Admiral Adolphus Andrews, Mr. Olin Dows, Mr. H. L. Rust, Mrs. Edwin Watson (in private life Frances Nash, the pianist), Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, Mrs. John Roland Hill, Mrs. Miriam Hilton, Mrs. Katherine Dunlop, Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mrs. Milton King, Mrs. Carl Droop, Mrs. Royal McKenna, Miss Anne Carter Greene, president of the Junior League, and Miss Caroline Huston Thompson.

Ft. Myer Riding Show To Have 2 Girls' Classes

Two riding classes, exclusively for undergraduate riders of girls' schools in and near-by Washington, will be a feature of the indoor horse show, to be held this evening at 8 o'clock, at Fort Myer.

Col. Kenyon Joyce, commanding officer at Fort Myer, has announced points scored by the various winners in tonight's show will be added to those already won by the same horses in the last show. The horse with the high total points, at the end of the series of the three shows, will be declared the winner, in either the jumper or the combined hunter and hack divisions.

Support Orchestra Campaign

Underwood & Underwood.

Notables Attend Porgy and Bess

Swiss Minister and Mme. Peters and Herr Struve at Premiere Here.

The melodic tribulations of the two principal characters drew a large house to the opening last night of George Gershwin's opera "Porgy and Bess" at the National Theater. Mr. Gershwin, who has made two trips to Washington in the last six weeks, once to conduct the National Symphony and once to attend the musicians' copyright hearings on Capitol Hill, was unable to attend the premiere here.

The Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter, the latter wearing a new spring print, were in the audience. Also from the diplomatic set came the Third Secretary of the German Embassy, Herr Gustave Struve. Frau Struve, who has been in Europe this winter, is expected to return some time next month.

Among those seen in the lobby during the entr'acte were Mrs. Frank Letts, Dr. and Mrs. George Tribble, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, Mrs. John Arthur Hinckley, escorted by Mr. Griffith Warfield, Mr. Horace Peters, Mrs. Lee Warren with her daughter, Mrs. Floyd Blair; Mrs. Clifton Phillips (the former Natalie Keeney, with her husband and Mr. Stewart McDonold, Federal housing administrator; Mrs. Campbell Pritchett, Miss Eleanor Fahey, daughter of the chairman of the Home Owners Loan Corporation; Mr. and Mrs. James Dennison, of Boston; Mr. Wallace Russell, Miss Caroline Thompson, Mrs. Ernest G. Walker, with her son, Mr. Mannix Walker, and Mr. Simon Whitney.

Hundreds Hear Musicale Given At White House

Trio, Joseph Schuster and Peter Joray Entertain Mrs. Roosevelt's Guests.

Mrs. Roosevelt was hostess yesterday afternoon at a musicale at the White House.

Several hundred guests were entertained by the Nightingale Trio, Miss Louise Sandor, Miss Ivonne Ravel and Miss Nellie Winger; Mr. Joseph Schuster, violon cellist, and Mr. Peter Joray, who presented a program of "Intimate Moments With Royalties in the Past."

The first part of the program, presented by Mr. Schuster, consisted of Bach's Ariosa; Lied ohne Worte, by Mendelssohn, and "Bumblebee," by Rimsky-Korsakoff. Following several selections by the Nightingale Trio, Mr. Joray gave two monologues from the life of Napoleon III of France.

Two Faure compositions, "Apres un Reve" and "Sicilienne," were played by Mr. Schuster in his second group, which also included the "Chanson Villageoise" by Popper.

A second group of songs by the Trio preceded the last offering of Mr. Joray, which centered around Queen Victoria. Mr. Joray's selections told of the queen at breakfast in the Scottish Highlands, with a favorite horse, posing for her portrait, and taking a drive in Hyde Park.

On Shakespeare Hunt

COUNTESS ADELBERT DE CHAMBRUN, sister of the late Nicholas Longworth, has lived in this country, France and Africa, but says that Washington society is different from all. She came here to search for Shakespearean manuscripts in the Folger Library.

Voteless French Women Wield Political Power, Says Countess

By Dudley Harmon.

French women, although without the vote, are more powerful politically than American women, Countess Clara Longworth de Chambrun, sister of the late Nicholas Longworth, said yesterday.

The countess, who spent the week-end with Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, widow of the former Speaker of the House, declared that the subtle methods of French women get results at the ballot box. She said:

"Women in France don't vote, and they don't make speeches, hence no man is suspicious when a French woman starts talking politics."

There is a great difference between Washington society and that of the French capital, the countess said.

"Washington society centers about politics," she said. "But in a French salon one finds a mixture of all circles, political, artistic and intellectual.

"Parisian society is more stationary than that in Washington. Ministers go in and out of office in rapid succession, it is true, but they are usually the same ministers, cabinet in and cabinet out. Here a large proportion of those who make up Capital society change with each administration."

The countess, who began reading Shakespeare when she was 5 years old "because she didn't like anything else, came to Washington chiefly to search for the great Elizabethan's work among unidentified plays at the Folger Library.

In her possession is a volume of the "Chronicle of Britain," by Raphael Holinshead, in which she found that marginal notes had been made by Shakespeare. Yesterday she compared these notes with the handwriting of the play at the Folger Library.

"It seemed promising," she said, "but I won't make a statement until I am sure."

Countess de Chambrun deposited her Holinshead folio at the Folger Library with a sigh of relief. She will leave it there until she returns from a visit to her sister at Cincinnati.

"I've carried that folio all over Europe and across the Atlantic with me," she said. "And it's a load off my shoulders not to have to worry about it for a while."

The countess left last night for Cincinnati. Count de Chambrun will join her there in a few days. After a visit there, they will return to Washington.

They will meet their son and daughter-in-law when they arrive in New York. Their son, Count de Chambrun, married Mlle. Jose Laval, daughter of former Premier Pierre Laval, last summer in Paris. They are planning a trip to America in the spring.

Arts Club Dance.

Mr. Hugo Inden and Miss Alice Addison will be host and hostess for the St. Patrick's Day supper dance which is being held this evening at the Arts Club, sponsored by the auxiliary committee.

English Firm Offers Fluffy, Silky Cream

Rouge Blends Perfectly on This Foundation; Powder Stays.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

LIGHT AS thistledown and with the texture of silk is the new foundation cream made by an English concern—a concern, say many, that has made the tradition of English skin beauty a widely known reality.

This new product already has been a phenomenal success in England, and even the dullest prophet could foretell its happy future here.

It's a flesh-colored cream which blends naturally into the shades of the cosmetics used. You apply it any time of day or evening when fresh make-up is applied. And what a grand job it does! Face powder acquires real stay-a-bility. Rouge blends perfectly into the skin with an oh-so-natural-bloom effect.

Just as lovely jewels should have lovely settings, so should fine creams have fine containers. This one does! Its jar is a soft, flesh pink, rounded in shape, with a honey bee design on the lid.

And modest is the price; 85 cents.

Violet Revival.

THERE SEEMS to be little doubt that violets have staged a revival. Years ago they held their heads high when they were the favorites of the Gibson Girl. Now almost a decade has passed and violets are here again. With the Gibson Girl hats and suits and dresses comes her flower—the violet.

Catering to this trend is a perfume concern sponsoring a bargain package of toilet water and sachet with the dainty violet fragrance. Ordinarily the two together would cost 75 cents. For the time being they are yours for $1.

Manicure Sets.

WITH AN AIR of oo-la-la about them are the so-called "Top Hat" manicure sets. The box itself is round like the crown of a tall silk hat. It's made of black glass and studded with tiny silver stars. A little black glass plaque on which it rests corresponds to the brim of that Top Hat.

Inside you'll find all the requirements for nail grooming. If you wish to match your manicure set with a box for cleansing tissues or bath powder container (filled with powder) you can easily do so. They come in black, blue and green—all of them with the silver stars.

Bath Helmet.

MANY a marcel has literally withered away when it was subjected to the random splashes of a shower. Many a charming coiffure that is "just so" for the evening ahead has been wrecked in the same manner.

The surest way to guard against such dire catastrophes is to provide yourself with an oilskin shower helmet. There's something rather startling about its appearance. You might think it the head of a Martian body.

It fits over your head like a flower sack. Right across the eyes there's an oblong window of isinglass.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

She's not much of a gadabout, but she loves to entertain her friends at home. But you can tell that by the looks of the place . . . such a lot of affectionate care has gone into the planning of it.

The walls of the living room are in apple green and the rug is an Oriental with a creamy beige ground . . . the effect is almost that of a plain beige rug. The draperies and sofa are in chintz, with a maroon ground and a glowing pattern. Two armchairs are in green, just a shade deeper than the walls, and another chair is in old dull gold. On the walls there are some beautiful pictures—reproductions of paintings—one Innes landscape, a Botticelli madonna and a Reynolds portrait; they contribute rich colors and interest to the room. The frames add glints of gold that are pleasing. A teapot and little ps in cream and gold, accessories in gold and beige and maroon, and lamps in gold and ivory tones finish off the room delightfully.

And since she's the type of blonde who wears ivory, very pale flesh color or maroon quite perfectly, you can imagine what a becoming room this one is to her. Pale pink roses are the flowers she likes to have in this room . . . she puts them in an ivory china bowl.

TWO ON SAFARI

By GEORGE AGNEW CHAMBERLAIN

Ballard Mallory, American explorer in search of young Hon. Laurence Morland, lost in the African jungle, is accompanied by an enigmatic English girl, Josephine Cascoden. At a hotel in Lourence Marques, she receives a cable that distresses her, and in the shop of Ibn-ben-Dur, she momentarily loses her calm when the name "Morland" is mentioned. Back in camp, Mallory hears important news from the jungle beyond.

"You're Lovely."

"NOT YET," he answered promptly, then qualified the statement. "Nobody of importance to you."

She sank back on her hands. "Then it doesn't matter what's happened."

"Oh, yes, it does; it matters a lot."

"Not to me."

It was his turn to study her curiously. "That remains to be seen," he said finally, in a tone that made the words sound ominous.

"Why? What are you talking about?"

"Myself—and you. I'm somebody else. You said it a minute ago. You still feel it, don't you?"

"I felt it last night as soon as I came back."

He shook his head impatiently. "No, you couldn't have; I mean it hadn't had time to get in its work. I was born again during the night, after you went to bed. I woke up to an idea and a goal. That's what makes me different. Anybody who is headed for a fixed mark is always different—just as you were when we started out."

Her heart skipped a beat, and then went on. She wondered if he had caught the startled gleam in her eyes. "And still am," she asserted belligerently.

"You're sure? That's what I'm here for—to find out."

"Quite sure. Whatever I do or seem can't possibly affect why and where I'm going."

He leaned forward and fixed her eyes intently. "Then I give you fair warning."

"Warning—about what?"

"You'll find out. I'll begin by telling you you're lovely—so lovely my blood burns whenever I let my eyes see you."

She stared at him. "Am I supposed to laugh?"

"Laugh or cry, scratch and bite," he continued, his expression unchanged, "do anything you like and it can't change the thing you've become to me. Perhaps you're just ordinary, but I can't see it and no amount of proof could make me believe it."

"I haven't the vaguest idea what you're talking about," said Josephine, bewildered. "Have you?"

Mallory Is Complimentary.

"About your being the loveliest thing that walks," explained Ballard.

"That's silly," she said with a shake of her head. "The loveliest thing that walks is an inyala buck."

No other statement could so radically have deflected his thoughts; his eyes lit abruptly with a totally different fire. "You've seen one!"

"Yesterday. In the forest. We stood face to face."

The tensity went out of his body and he sat with his hands lax between his knees and his eyes far away.

"Yes," he admitted, "there's no finer sight than that, no sharper concentration of beauty inside a glorious hide. But the beauty of women stands apart from the beauty of the world. The beauty of the world heals, the beauty of women leaves a great wound."

Her eyes fastened on his face, studied it curiously, then withdrew as if they had surprised an unconscious and defenseless sleeper. She pushed down the covers cautiously, released one foot and started to creep from the cot. Her movement awakened him.

With a quick and sure gesture he seized both her wrists. Though strong they were slender—so slender his fingers and thumbs overlapped around them. She was imprisoned and the sense of imprisonment made her struggle with the desperation of any trapped animal. For a terrifying instant he held on, his strength making a joke of hers, then he released her so abruptly she almost rolled over backward.

He had risen and stood looking down at her. "Are you awake?" he asked casually. Some unnamable emotion, either anger or merely the plunging of the blood in her veins, choked her throat so she could answer him only with blazing eyes. He nodded understandingly. "Better get up; we're moving on today."

While they breakfasted the camp was dismantled. The instant they were mounted her spirits, released from gloom, faced to the fore. Ballard, touching up his horse, showed the way at a sharp canter.

The trail led through the self-same forest in which she had wandered on the previous afternoon. Presently appeared a long line of black dots like a snake threading its way through the diminishing arches. As the cantering horses approached, each dot stepped aside and Josephine caught the flash of upturned eyes, the gleam of shining teeth and heard occasionally a shouted phrase which started a wave of laughter rolling down the whole line. Already she knew better than to ask the joke.

Ahead of everybody else strode three figures, the local guide, a water-boy and finally the most magnificent specimen in the way of a physical mechanism Josephine had ever seen; black as ebony, broad of shoulder, narrow of hip and straight as an arrow, he carried no burden except Ballard's spare gun. Clothed only with a gee-string he had the appearance of a magnificent bronze miraculously endowed with the breath of life. He stopped short and faced Ballard as man to man. A twin smile came to life on their lips and grew quickly to a twin grin.

"Eh, Malungo!"

Josephine Meets Tugo.

"Eh, Tugotug!" answered Ballard and turned to Josephine. "Here you are, Jo; this is Tugotug, Tugo for short, master of all master trackers."

The black never took his eyes from Ballard's face. Now, balancing it by stock and barrel, he raised the gun high in a strange salute and lowered it again. It was as though he said, "This is our beloved child, behold how carefully I tend it."

"See the other chap," continued Ballard to Josephine, "the one up front?"

"Yes."

"You stay behind him. He's the local guide and knows where we're going to camp."

"Why? Where are you off to?"

"Never mind; you'll see me when you see me."

He nodded to Tugo and the water-boy, and the three started off at a brisk pace. The sight of Shilling, Ballard's syce, appearing from nowhere and darting in his wake, nose to the ground like a hound, gave her an idea. She looked around in search of Bongo and her eyes collided with his, close to Swayback's rump. She smiled and he answered with a broad grin. For once Ballard had slipped; he had given his order to her only in English, a language Bongo certainly could not understand. She turned her head quickly in time to glimpse Shilling's hurrying figure. With a dig of her heels she started Swayback in pursuit.

Keeping Shilling just in sight she followed for an hour before he emerged from the rim of the forest into an open glade. She held back, not wishing him ot see her, but the pause was fatal. Having failed to mark the exact spot where he had plunged again into cover she missed his trail completely and started riding up and down the edge of the thicket, completely at a loss. Bongo came to her aid. Never dreaming she would dare to follow her lord and master except by express command, he summoned her with a low whistle, took up Shilling's spoor and showed the way.

The nature of the terrain had changed completely. Gone was the interminable izonzo forest. In its place were towering clumps of trees interspersed with sudden vistas that led the eye to right or left along channels of waving grass. Upon crossing one of these openings Bongo came to a halt so suddenly that the horse bumped its nose and Josephine almost went over his head.

She recovered and followed the direction of the syce's fixed gaze. Only after concentrated effort could she discern what he was staring at—the big gray, Pepper, dappled with shadows, and Shelling seated at his feet. Reaching back, Bongo tugged at Swayback's reins. She let them go. Leading the horse, the boy advanced so cautiously his tensity became infectious; instinctively she knew that silence had become of paramount importance.

Says All Girls Should Study Homemaking

Underwood & Underwood.
MISS FLORENCE FALLGATTER.

Home Making Held Factor In Success of All Women

Miss Fallgatter, Newly Appointed U. S. Aid, Says Thorough Training Prepares Way for Better Home or Prosperous Career.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

EVERY GIRL—NO MATTER whether she wants a career or a home—should study home economics.

If she expects to marry, the value of such training is obvious. If she has to make her own living, she will be prepared for countless positions—ranging from teaching to managing a tea room.

These are observations of Miss Florence Fallgatter, newly appointed chief of the Federal Home Economics Service in the Vocational Home Economics Division of the U. S. Office of Education.

Basing her conclusions on a wide background of training and experience, Miss Fallgatter yesterday told why every woman's welfare is largely dependent on her preparation for homemaking.

"In the first place a girl in high school or college can never be sure just what her future will be. She may have decided she wants to be a doctor, a lawyer or a writer. She may think she will never have to cook or sew. But whether she achieves her aims or meets with financial reverses and has to shift into some other type of work, she will have some kind of home, whether it is a mansion or a hall bedroom. She may never have to cook, but she at least will have to decide what she will eat every day and should know how to choose what is best for her health. She may never make her own clothes, but she will have to select them. She may never have full charge of a household, but she will be responsible for some part of one."

In view of this, Miss Fallgatter is convinced training in the art of home making (not, necessarily, in the skills of housekeeping) should be part of every girl's education. "Since the field of home economics has broadened to include courses along so many different lines, it should appeal to all girls. Whatever their interests are, they will find such training will come in handy, will not be hidden away in college notebooks.

"Many persons still have the erroneous idea that this work still largely pertains to cooking and sewing. But while these subjects are still important, the field has widened its scope to include family relationships and child development as well as the arts and sciences, even more closely related to it."

An expansion of the home economics curriculum can be measured according to the different titles it has carried since it came into existence, she said. "First, when courses had to do with only cooking and sewing, they were called, respectively, 'Domestic Science' and 'Domestic Art.' Later, as each of these increased their scope, they came to be considered together and were classed under the title 'Household Arts.' This, in turn, expanded to include a wider range of subjects, took on a more scientific and practical aspect and became known as 'Home Economics.' Now, however, as the field pertains to every feminine phase of the art of living, it is changing its name once more, and is now widely known as 'Home Making Education.'"

Many opportunities in public life are open to a girl, according to Miss Fallgatter. She may become a teacher, dietitian, welfare worker, food chemist, textile chemist, home economics editor of a newspaper or magazine, stylist, interior decorator, hostess or manager of a hotel or tea room, or a food demonstrator and lecturer.

"Few girls with initiative, energy and a background of home economics training have difficulty in finding jobs," she said. "The demand in professional and commercial fields (in the latter, particularly) is much greater than the supply."

She stressed the fact that home economics knowledge is rightly considered as preparation for marriage. She believes fewer homes would be broken up if wives in general had more scientific training in the art of homemaking. "It isn't the wife's cooking competence that makes so much difference (though good meals are certainly important); it is her ability to make her home as attractive, as comfortable as it can possibly be," said Miss Fallgatter.

This fact, she said, was beginning to impress even the educators in liberal arts colleges for women where home economics courses have never been part of the curriculum. "In one way or another, they are allowing homemaking courses to creep into the course of study," she said. "Two things have helped home economics hurdle the barrier of the exclusively liberal arts college. One is the fact intelligent home making itself has become an art; the other is that the depression pointed up the practical aspect of home economics training for every girl—whether her career lies within or without the home."

A Child's I. Q. Unimportant In Many Cases

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MANY PARENTS are puzzled by the initials I. Q. which the schools seem to consider so important, but which so often have no apparent connection with the actual ability of a child.

The I. Q. is not a test of what a child does. It is only a test of what he might do. The letters stand for "intelligence quotient," but a child with a very high I. Q. might still get marks that a moron would be ashamed of.

One may measure the capacity of a container or the maximum speed of a car, but the container may never be filled or the car pushed to its limit. The potentiality is there, but is not necessarily put into service.

It is the same way with an I. Q. The child who has a high one could probably get good marks in school, and go far in life, given the right stimulation and training. But there is always a chance that because he learns easily and is ahead of his class, he will do careless work and neglect opportunities.

A high I. Q. is nothing to be proud of. It is natural ability and means that the child was born with a good brain. What he does with it is measured by achievement tests. If in these he is poor, he is worse off than the child with an average I. Q., who must work to keep up. Often it is not the high I. Q.'s, but those farther down the scale, who succeed best in life.

It is sometimes necessary to ungrade the high I. Q. and put him in a class where he must work harder. If possible, however, he should be inspired early with the idea that for him only the best that he can do is good enough to permit him to get by.

MARY HAWORTH Says:

Many Correspondents Have Helpful Suggestions to Offer, Based on Satisfactory Personal Solution of Vexatious Predicaments; Others Voice Warnings.

COLUMNIST'S NOTE: Not every letter received by this department poses a problem. On the contrary, many correspondents are sincerely concerned with solving problems submitted by other correspondents. As the following letters indicate, many have helpful suggestions to offer—suggestions based on satisfactory personal solutions of vexatious predicaments. Others have warnings to convey. Such warnings oftentimes come from those who speak out of bitter experience. In other instances, they present wise counsel from those who have observed intelligently what happens when the wrong road is taken. M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I read with interest the letter from "Mrs. E. L. T." in your column of March 10. It occurs to me she may be able to profit from a similar experience I had with my husband, whom I found to belong to the class of men who jolly, kid and flirt with waitresses and counter girls.

Since my marriage about five years ago, I have continued working, for which reason my husband and I dine out very frequently. Before our marriage, I never had any fault to find with my husband's conduct in public places. But I dare say that was because he was courting me at the time, and found my smiles sufficient. Well, I soon found out he was different.

* * * *

I agree with "Mrs. E. L. T." that it is cheap and common of one's husband to flirt with waitresses, and I tried to make my husband see this. But you see, Miss Haworth, there is a certain type of waitress who enjoys flirting with men patrons; who revels in the attention of other women's husbands. My husband is liberal with his tips and perhaps that is another inducement for them to attempt to ingratiate themselves.

* * * *

Well, when I found I could accomplish nothing by talking with him, I decided I would try another way. So I played the game, too, much as I detested the idea. I have too much Irish in my make-up to sit down and howl defeat. The first thing I did was to select places to eat where there are no waitresses—only men waiters. Then I started in on them with the same line of kidding my husband used on the waitresses. You can't imagine his reaction to my little scheme! He stood it for a time and then we had it out. This all happened some time ago, but it cured him—for all time, I hope. It would be hard to find a more dignified man than he is now and I am very happy. Your advice is always so full of common sense. I don't see how you do it. Much success to your column. Sincerely,

Mary Haworth.

KATHLEEN.

Man Whom "Puzzled" Loves Called "Wholly Selfish."

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The letter signed "Puzzled" in your column of March 9 has stirred my interest to the extent that I feel I must make an effort to show that innocent, trusting young woman the danger she is facing. The man in the case would rob her of her innocence, which, once lost, can never be retrieved. He would place her in the class of blase women who can never bring to their husbands the precious gift of innocence. This shows him to be a wholly selfish man. Harsh words? Yes, but true.

* * * *

She says she does not wish to "hurt his feelings." Why should she so carefully respect the feelings of a man who cares so little for her good name, her happiness and her future? . . . I am not a young woman. I have had wide experience, have lived in many different communities and have always felt the most sympathetic interest in the problems of young girls. You show unusual wisdom in dealing with problems submitted to you for solution. Best wishes to you.

OLD LADY.

Girl Tells of Misplaced Trust and Subsequent Heartbreak.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: After reading the letter from "Puzzled" in your column of March 9, I am prompted to give your correspondent the benefit of my experience. I, too, was tempted by a so-called "great love" at the age of 18. Wanting to live my own life, I refused to listen to my dear mother's advice. Flying in the face of family love and family advice, I found myself eventually with a broken heart and a soiled reputation.

* * * *

Dear "Puzzled," please take Mary Haworth's advice and give up this young man until he is in a position to marry you. I know such a course of action will require the courage I didn't have, but if I had shown courage then I would have been spared the bitter regret I have known ever since—regret for what I have done to myself as well as regret for the pain I brought on my mother. "Broken hearts will heal but soiled reputations can never be cleaned." I hope this confession of mine will give you the courage to put temptation behind you. Sincerely, L. T.

True Marriage Called 'Beautiful, Understanding Friendship.'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Will you please give me the name of the book from which you quoted in your column of March 7, when making answer to "Undecided," who asked if it is ever advisable to marry a man one doesn't love in order to have a home, children and companionship as insurance against loneliness in later years?

* * * *

Life has taught me that kindliness, sympathetic understanding, mutual acceptance of responsibility, community of interests, unfailing good temper and a sense of humor make a better foundation for marriage than romantic love. Arnold Bennett, in "How to Make the Best of Life," says passion is uppermost in the early years of marriage, but if there are no other resources upon which to draw after three years, the marriage fails.

* * * *

In the final analysis, successful marriage is just a beautiful, understanding friendship, and if the essentials of such understanding don't exist in the first place, it isn't really marriage. Cordially yours,

H. M. S.

* * * *

DEAR H. M. S.: The book from which I quoted in the column cited is Dr. W. Beran Wolfe's "How to Be Happy Though Human," Farrar & Rinehart, Inc., Murray Hill, New York City. No doubt it can be found in any bookstore, and possibly in the local libraries. Your appraisal of the qualities essential to happy marriage is sound and sensible and in accord with enlightened scientific thought on the subject.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Mere Day Off By Women Can Stop Business

Effect of Their Absence in Industry Is Cited by Miss Williams.

A NATION-WIDE feminine day of rest was advocated by Miss Charl Ormond Williams, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, in a radio address yesterday afternoon in a program inaugurating the National Business Women's week.

A "day off" by all women, Miss Williams declared, would prove to the men of the country that without the services of the 10,000,000 women in the professions, in industry the wheels of business would stop.

"Suppose," she said, "that the women of the United States should all stay home next Monday for a sort of feminine day of rest; I would not dream, of course, of suggesting that women go on strike. What would happen?

Phones Closed Down.

"The telephone exchanges in every town would be obliged to close. Nearly 500,000 women are employed by one national telephone company alone.

"One million, eight hundred thousand women are engaged in the manufacturing business.

"Nearly 2,000,000 are employed as clerks.

"Over 3,000,000 are employed in domestic or personal service.

Carrying on business today, without the telephone is almost impossible so we can see how the withdrawal of women from the telephone business would cripple business.

"Many men would have difficulty in securing a comfortable breakfast if they awoke to a maidless household. The majority of restaurants would have a difficult time serving their patrons without the help of waitresses. Many women operate elevators, others "man" the stores and shops. Pity the struggles of a man executive without his faithful secretary. The banks and stock exchanges would find it hard work to 'carry on' without women. In 5,969 communities in this country where there are women postmistresses the mail service would suffer. Fancy the plight of airplane passengers without the comforting ministrations of the stewardesses.

No Schools For Day.

"The public schools would be forced to close for lack of teachers. And so the picture grows as we imagine what a terrific social and economic upheaval would come about by the complete withdrawal of women from the workaday world.

"Just another argument to impress our men friends. Isn't it time that men realize not only that women must work to help in carrying on the world's activities but that no person or group of persons can jeopardize the positions of others in the long run unless the people holding these positions are unfitted for them? Men of well balanced judgment, trained to meet the problems of the world, know they do not need to be afraid of women in the business world. The time will come when the business woman need have no fear either, if she is trained and competent."

4 Working to Save Pony Held in Mine

Crooksville, Ohio, March 16 (AP).—A farmer and his three sons burrowed deep into their family mine today in an attempt to rescue Fannie, a 5-year-old pony.

A cave-in from which Guy Brown and his sons escaped trapped the animal 18 days ago.

Fannie had been kept alive with food and water shoved through a narrow slit near the mine entry, but a new cave-in occurred as the Browns worked to release the pet.

"A little danger isn't going to keep me and my boys from digging Fannie out," Brown declared. "Even if we have to shut down the mine and devote all our time to the job. Why, our kids think more of that pony than anything else we possess."

As they toiled with pick and shovel to open a new 30-foot-long passage into the mine room, where Fannie was trapped, the Browns estimated that the animal had food and water enough to last three days.

Rain and Colder Forecast for Today

The balmy, spring-like weather Washington enjoyed yesterday will come to an end today. The temperature is scheduled to drop to 44 degrees with rain and continued cold forecast for today and tomorrow.

The thermometer climbed to its highest point for the year—76—at 3 p. m. yesterday, despite overhanging clouds and a sprinkling of rain.

The drop is expected to begin this afternoon or early at night.

Workers Defy Law To Drill for Oil

Oklahoma City, March 16 (AP).—Undaunted by police court charges against them, oil field workers cleared a foundation tonight for an oil derrick that will cast its long shadow within three city blocks of Oklahoma's State Capitol Building.

The well site—far inside the city's restricted zone—is staked on private property. Officials of the K. & L. Oil Co. said they would drill there to protect a lease.

Five workmen and three officers of the company were arrested today on charges of violating a city ordinance. Three hours later, freed on their own recognizance, they were back at the location, constructing a "cellar" for the well they plan. They will be tried tomorrow.

City zoning laws have prevented development of the tract for the "black gold" the owner believes is beneath it.

Club Favors Plan to Seek D.C. New Deal

Monday Evening Broup Backs Board to Deal With Congress.

Resolution Specifies Unit Should Seek Fiscal Peace.

The suggestion of Dr. Prentiss Willson that a representative committee of Washingtonians be appointed to negotiate with Congress and seek a square deal for the city was indorsed last night in a resolution adopted by the Monday Evening Club.

The committee, as conceived by Dr. Willson and explained by him recently in The Post, would try to generate a better understanding between Congress and its ward, the District, to the end that there would be a fuller realization of the city's needs in the way of funds for health, education, public welfare, fire and police protection, and penal institutions.

Program Indorsed.

The Monday Evening Club last night also adopted a resolution agreeing with Representative Ramspeck that such a committee should try and find a solution of the "controversial subject of fiscal relations between Congress and the District."

The club indorsed the following program submitted by its executive and legislative committee:

Full appropriations for health and welfare as recommended to Congress by the Federal Budget Bureau.

Support for the emergency appropriation of $608,000 for relief as requested by the Board of Public Welfare.

Appropriations for personnel in the Public Assistance Division of the Board of Public Welfare as recommended by the Federal Budget Bureau.

Restoration in the District of the two probation officers held necessary to maintain the existing staff of the Police Court.

being in favor of the Juvenile Court

The club also went on record as bill.

Guest speakers were Charles H. Alspach, director of the Camp Division, Works Prograss Administration, and Maj. George Marshall, Divisional Cammander Salvation Army. The subject for both was: "Homeless Men, Women and Young People. How Are They Being Dealt With Today?"

Gains Stressed.

Alspach, after reviewing the history of transient relief since the inception of the Federal program in 1933, cited gains made both in the rehabilitation of the migrant and in creating better standards by contrast for the local homeless.

Declaring that the Public Works program has employed 65,000 migratory workers, Alspach concluded concluded with the statement that it is the "first time in Public Welfare Administration that transients have become respected."

Maj. Marshall, however, minimized the effects of the Federal program in correcting the transient problem.

Charging that despite "billions of Government funds poured in to prime the pump January, 1936, gave us the heaviest drop in employment since 1932," Marshall said that the standards set by the Federal Government made of the local homeless potential transients.

Voice in Conventio Is Urged for D. C.

Senator Capper, of Kansas, yesterday announced himself "heartily in favor' of a proposed Presidential primary bill which would give residents of the District a voice in national political conventions.

The bill, written by John P. Mullen, a local lawyer, has been introduced in the last two sessions of Congress by Senator Copeland and Representative Mary T. Norton. Neither house has taken action on the bill.

In a letter to Mullen, Senator Capper suggested that citizens' associations and other civic bodies send representatives to the Senate Committee to urge the legislation.

Garfinckel Elected.

Julius Garfinckel has been elected a member of the advisory board of the Y. W. C. A., it was announced yesterday by Mrs. Albert A. Atwood, president of the Y. W. C. A., at a meeting of the executive committee.

Ruth Chatterton Pays Full Tax on Clothing

By the Associated Press.

The Government and Ruth Chatterton agreed yesterday her $10,156 expenditures on a wardrobe in 1931 were not deductible from income taxes as "ordinary and necessary expenses" of her profession as a movie actress.

Miss Chatterton and her husband, Ralph M. Forbes, deducted half of the actress' expenses for clothes as necessary, but yesterday they entered into a stipulation by which they paid a deficiency of $1,309 charged by the Internal Revenue Bureau.

The principal items of expenditures sought as deductible included $2,262 for underwear, $574 for pajamas, $331 for handkerchiefs, $4,200 for a mink coat and $2,719 for a fitted case.

Labor Official Says Outsiders Thwart District

Coleman Cites Cummings' Opposition to Race Track Bill.

Andrew "Cy" Cummings, Laurel race track operator and "certain" members of Congress were berated by Frank J. Coleman, secretary of the Central Labor Union at its meeting last night.

"Unspeakable gall and pure selfishness brought Cummings before the committee hearing on the race track bill," he said.

"We can't get anything in Washington we want because outsiders and representatives of other States fail to permit it. They object to anything Washington wants," Coleman continued, his face flushed.

"I dare newspapers to campaign against these meddlers, then the people "back home" would see if we meant business or not."

At this point he was interrupted by Joseph A. Rinis, secretary of the carpenters strike committee, who said "Representative Thomas Blanton is the man who should be made to back down. His slashing of the District of Columbia budget is the worst thing that happened here in years.'

"This race track bill is a minor thing in the face of the budget cut," Rinis said.

"That is what I meants when I said certain States," was Coleman's brief reply.

Coleman represented the Central Labor Union in its fight for racing in the District at the hearings last wek.

Mrs. Mary E. Lyons Dies Here at 63

Mrs. Mary E. Lyons, 63, of 1369 Meridian place northwest, died at her home yesterday after a lengthy illness. She was a lifelong resident of the District.

Her parents, Alexander Marcellus Shreve and Sarah Shreve, lived in this city for many years. She was a member of the Women's Auxiliary ofDewey Camp of the Spanish American War Veterans, of which camp her husband, Charles A. Lyons, is past commander.

Cab Driver Returns Diamonds and Cash

A clim, dark-eyed Spanish senorita, Estelle Quionez, 23-year-old secretary at the Spanish Embassy, is today praising the honesty of a Washington cab driver who returned her purse containing $50 in cash and diamonds valued at $600.

The cab driver, Carl S. Long, of 48 H street northeast, took the purse to Miss Quionez's residence at 1313 Quincy street northwest yesterday afternoon. Miss Quionez, returning early yesterday from a week-end trip to New York, had left it in the rear seat.

Haled to Jail

Policeman Candidate for President Posts $40.

Howard M. Overstreet, the Third Precinct policeman who left the force to start his campaign for the Presidency, was back in a police station last night—the charge, driving a taxicab without the proper license.

Overstreet, who only a few days ago gave up pounding the pavements for a political career which he opened with a radio address, was arrested by J. S. Mavars, a hack inspector.

While he was being held at the traffic bureau office before he had deposited collateral of $40. Overstreet explained his arrest thus:

When he was a policeman he had his car painted like a taxicab and rented it to a driver. After his resignation he made application for a permit to drive the cab himself, but had not received the permit.

Last night, he said, he was driving to bring his wife home from a friend's house when he was stopped by Mavars, and arrested.

Smoke Cloud Complaint of Neighbors, Brings Officers to Scene.

Several persons alleged to be operating a still in the 2100 block of Eleventh street northwest landed in jail yesterday despite their efforts to camouflage the odor of whisky distilling.

They burned oiled rags and old automobile tires in the rear of the house, according to police, and, while they succeeded in submerging the odor of the distillery, neighbors called headquarters to complain about the smudge.

Sergt. George C. Deyoe led a squad of police raiders to the place. Two men and a woman were arrested and two stills and 650 gallons of rye mash destroyed.

The officers said they found the stills, one of 50 gallons and the other of 75, in full operation. About 25 gallons of liquor were seized, which Deyoe said had been run through an automobile radiator in the process of distillation.

Randolph Dobbins, 35, of the 2100 block of Eleventh street northwest; James Langsford, 18, no fixed address, and Daisy Brooks, 41, of the 1600 block of Twelfth street northwest, all colored, were charged with violating the liquor tax act.

Irish of District Join Today In St. Patrick Celebrations

"Oh, Paddy dear, and did you hear The news that's going around . . ."

The memory of an almost legendary patron saint and of the misty wind-swept country where he lived and labored, will draw Washington's many thousands of Irish and citizens of Irish descent together today in spirit and in one common bond with their kinsmen in the Emerald Isle and with blood brothers wandering in far-flung distant lands.

At the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University, the great organ will peal forth gay and sad melodies of the old homeland at 9:30 a. m., to be followed at 10 a. m. by a solemn high mass, celebrated by the Right Rev. Mgr. David T. O'Dwyer, director of the Shrine. An appropriate sermon for the occasion will be preached by the Right Rev. Mgr. Patrick J. McCormick.

Other impressive meetings will be held by lay delegations, representative of their nationality in the city.

At Fourteenth and I streets at 9:45 a. m. Irish War Veterans of Post No. 17, of the District, will join more than 250 soldier-brothers of the World War beneath the shadow of the Barry statue, to pay fitting homage to that heroic figure, Commodore John Barry, "Father of the American Navy."

Following the ceremony a squad of motorcycle policemen of Irish ancestry will escort the veterans to Arlington, there to place a floral tribute on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, at 11 a. m.

At both ceremonies Representative Michael Stack, of Pennsylvania, will deliver orations.

An honor guard of local Irish War Veterans will include a 95-year-old campaigner, Sergt. Hugh K. McGrath, eyes a little dimmed perhaps, with the memory of old conflicts fought when America was Father Hugh J. Phillips, of Mount St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, Md., will deliver a sermon, preceded by solemn high mass celebrated by the rector, the Right Rev. Cornelius F. Thomas, at 10 a. m.

young, and William E. McGrath disabled hero of the World War.

Catholic and Protestant clergy will be represented respectively by the Rev. Patrick J. Ryan, chaplain of Walter Reed Hospital, and the Rev. John J. Queally, rector of the Church of the Transfiguration and a native of County Clare.

Another morning service will be held at St. Patrick's Church, where But today's celebration will not be confined to sacred ritual and impressive ceremony, for luncheons and dinners have been planned.

The Washington Civitan Club will hear a luncheon address by John Walsh, former chief counsel of the Federal Trade Commission, on "Ireland and America" at the Lafayette Hotel. Prof. Louis A. Potter, club member, will direct a special program of Irish music.

Other events marking celebration of Ireland's patron saint include a card party at the Nativity School, 6000 Georgia avenue, sponsored by the Parent-Teacher Association, and the "St. Patrick's Day" indoor horse show at Fort Myer, scheduled for 8 p. m.

The gayety will continue tonight. At the Mayflower Hotel at 7:30 p. m. a banquet attended by the Ancient Order of Hibernians will be complemented by colorful Irish vocal and instrumental music.

A similar gathering in the main ballroom of the Wardman Park Hotel will greet the "Old Sod" with merriment and dance.

Civic Group Plans Health Funds Drive

Local Body Prepares for Hearings of Senate Sub-committee.

Ruffin to Ask Bureau Why Plea to Review Cuts Is Unanswered.

Plans for a dual offensive—upon the Senate and the Bureau of the Budget—were drafted last night by the united civic committee campaigning for adequate public health appropriations in the District.

The committee, headed by Dr. Sterling Ruffin, president of the District Medical Society, authorized its chairman to communicate immediately with the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations and request a hearing on Health Department and hospital items in the pending 1937 supply bill.

Dr. Ruffin also was empowered to contact the Budget Bureau to learn why there has been no response to the District Commissioners' application for a hearing to review the bureau's slashes of public health appropriations in the bill.

Acting Budget Director Daniel Bell received on February 27 the Commissioners' written request for an interview. The letter followed upon a conference between the Commissioners and the emergency committee, at which the former pledged their support to the drive.

Bureau Has Not Acted.

The Budget Bureau has not acted upon the request or acklowledged receipt of the letter, so far as he knows, Dr. Ruffin declared last night.

He and other committee members made no attempt to conceal their disappointment at the delay, in view of the statement made by an official spokesman for the Budget Bureau at the time the letter was received.

"The bureau has never refused a hearing," he said, "to District citizens interested in appropriations affecting their own welfare. It won't begin now."

A total of $199,000 in Health Department and municipal hospital estimates was eliminated by the bureau from the 1937 District supply bill. Funds for the same items were further reduced by the House sub-committee on District appropriations, of which Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, is chairman.

The objective of the hoped-for hearing by the Budget Bureau is to convince it of the grave necessity of restoring allotments affecting disease control and hospitalization.

Outlines Plans.

Confident of receiving fair treatment by the Senate sub-committee, which opens hearings on the supply bill this week, the Ruffin group outlined plans to testify on the Capital's health needs from the standpoints of the physician, dentist, nurse, clergy, union worker, clubwoman, parent, school teacher, merchant, industrialist and private citizen.

Present at last night's meeting, which was held in the Medical Society Building, were the Rev. Dr. W. L. Darby, executive secretary, the Washington Federation of Churches; Mrs. Ernest H. Grant, executive secretary, the District Tuberculosis Association, and Dr. Stephen Hopkins, president, District Dental Society.

Dwight T. Scott, District Life Underwriters Association; Dr. Prentiss Willson, Dr. William E. Hough and Dr. Ruffin, District Medical Society; Miss Inez Cadel, president, Graduate Nurses Association, and Dr. J. J. Greeves, Federation of Businessmen's Associations.

4,518 in Last Day's Jam To Pay Income Levies

Giles E. McClerry paying his tax last night.

Washingtonians to the number of 4,518 yesterday and last night joined the rush to pay Uucle Sam their income tax, the national total of which is expected to be the fattest since the boom years.

They flowed in a steady stream through the south door of the big Internal Revenue Bureau Building at Twelfth street and Constitution avenue.

The last taxpayer to beat the midnight "deadline" was William Kline, 1707 Capjitol avenue northeast, a clerk in the Federal Reserve Board. He was just behind his wife.

"Whew!" puffed Kline as he came in. "I had been to law school tonight, and had just returned home when I heard a radio announcer warn that the deadline was here. So I hurried down."

After he squeezed through, the doors were locked.

Despite the size of the taxpayers' army that crowded the office yesterday, nobody had to wait an unreasonable time. The regular force of 20 deputy collectors under Clarence C. Keiser had been reinforced by 12 employes from the audit review division of the Internal Revenue Bureau and by 15 from WPA.

They all worked from 9 a. m. to midnight, and there was no time-and-a-half for overtime. The deputy who took Kline's last-minute return was T. W. Dent.

President Roosevelt was one of those who waited until the last day to make out his return. He spent his lunch hour figuring out how much he owed Uncle Sam of the $75,000 that Uncle Sam had paid him.

West End Civic Group Opposes Lump Sum Cut

Association Also Asks Retention of Present Zoning Law.

Another protest at the reduction in the Federal appropriation to the District was made last night when the West End Citizen's Association, meeting at the Third Precinct Station, voted to write to the Senate District sub-committee urging that the Federal share be increased to at least last year's figure of $5700,000.

The association recommended retaining the general form of the present zoning law with the provisos that those petitioning to buy property must certify that they have not purchased the required consents and that the minority of property owners opposed to granting the permit be allowed a hearing before the District Commissioners.

Opposed by the association were a proposed bill to legalize racing and pari-mutuel betting in the District and a bill providing for compulsory automobile inspection. A cars passing inspection, the association considered, was no assurance that it would remain mechanically perfect.

The group adopted a resolution providing that property sold for taxes should be disposed of by the public courts at auction. It further provided that all interested in the property should be duly notified and the court should set a fixed fee to be paid by those redeeming the property.

The Lincoln Park Citizens Association adopted resolutions opposing the referendum bill as "expensive and useless," favoring the proposed magistrates' court bill, requesting three phase traffic lights on Eleventh street between Massachusetts and North Carolina avenues and re-affirming its indorsement of Seventeenth and East Capitol streets as the site of the proposed stadium and armory.

A petition signed by 40 residents opposite the north and south sides of Lincoln Park requesting that heavy truck traffic be lightened, was received. The petition, which stated that vibration from heavy trucks caused plaster to fall from ceilings, will be sent to William A. Van Duzer, traffic director.

The Sixteenth Street Citizens Association indorsed the Sisson bill to repeal the "red rider."

Speakers were Dr. Paul Sperry, who explained the work of the National Library for the Blind, and Miss Betty Wright, of the American Society for the Hard of Hearing.

Chevy Chase Parlor Buses Cut Schedule

Decision, Due to Revenu Losses, Approved by D. C. Officials.

Buses on the Chevy Chase de luxe coach line, which have been hauling passengers to and from the city at a special high rate for the last ten years, will be in operation only during the rush hours of week days after April 1, the Public Utilities Commission decided yesterday after a conference with officials of the Capital Transit Co.

The decision was agreed upon mutually after a lengthy conference, which was participated in by People's Counsel W. A. Roberts, P. U. C. Engineer Fred S. Sager, Engineering Commissioner Dan I. Sultan and Public Utilities Commissioner R. B. Keech and James Stephens and W. B. Bennett, vice president of the transit company.

At the conference it was shown that during the past month the de luxe carrier has lost approximately $2,500, and that the average yearly loss was $10,000 to the transit company. The average number of passengers hauled per bus during the rush hours was estimated at 16.

The line came into existence with a fleet of "parlor car" carriers about ten years ago and the fare at that time was 25 cents. The line made money until the depression, and then the rate was dropped to 15 cents. Later is was again boosted, this time to 20 cents, the present rate.

Rush hours, as they were defined at the conference yesterday, would be between 7:30 and 9 o'clock in the morning on weekdays, and between 4:30 and 6 in the evenings. A Saturday schedule also will be adopted.

At the time of its inception, the line was a sort of hybrid—a cross between cab service and the buses that then operated on the streets.

But with the coming of the ultra-modern bus, with its nominal 10-cent fare and its many conveniences, the big "parlor car" buses were almost supernumerary. They were, in fact, built for an era of transportation before the bus was as completely perfected as it is today.

Throughout the past decade they have been a symbol of luxury travel, making few stops in their long, runs.

The chairs were like those in a railroad car, and they were never crowded.

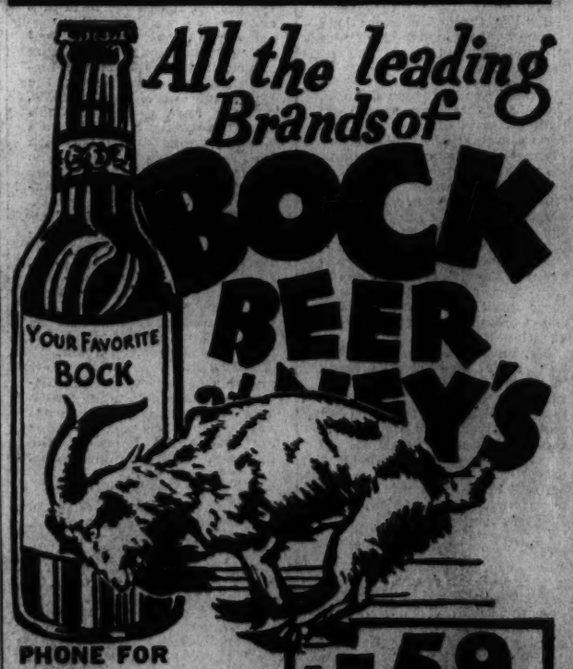
Bandit Gets $100 At Store in City

An armed colored man, brandishing a revolver, held up Mrs. Alma Woodson, manager of High's ice cream store at 320 Cedar street northwest, yesterday morning and escaped with more than $100.

Mrs. Woodson told police the man entered shortly after she opened the store. There was only a small amount in the cash register. The other money was in an envelope waiting to be taken to the bank.

The man asked for a quart of milk and handed Mrs. Woodson a quarter. When she handed him the change, he threatened her with the gun, brushed her aside, grabbed the money and ran out the door, Mrs. Woodson said.



This Is the Open Season for Squabbling Between the Stars and Their Studios

Six Big 'Names' Are Implicated In the Revolt

Court Actions Are Taken; 'Pasteur' Wins Award; Theater Notes.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Perhaps Al Smith in his speech at the Mayflower Hotel a few weeks ago never should have made that "or we can take a walk" remark. It seems to have filtered all the way through to the West Coast and made a profound impression upon several of the foremost stars devoting their talents to the uplift—or otherwise—of the cinema.

I mean to say that at the moment six of the foremost artists in the film colony are engaged in squabbles of one sort or another with their studios. They are James Cagney, the pugnacious young man from Hell's Kitchen, New York, with whom this sort of thing is more or less of a habit; Marlene Dietrich, who lost both her equanimity and her equilibrium when Ernst Lubitsch was deposed as chief of production at Paramount; George Raft, on the same lot; Mae West, who threw over Paramount at almost the identical instant that Paramount threw over Mae West; Pat O'Brien, on the Warner lot, and Ann Dvorak, of the same establishment.

Mr. Cagney, this time, seems to be fighting for "art" rather than "dough." It appears that Jack Warner, in charge of Warner Brothers-First National productional activities, suggested that Jimmy make five pictures a year, instead of four. This irked the young man who made a hit as Bottom in Max Reinhardt's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," even with a weekly salary check of $4,500. So he took the matter into court, where it is still awaiting the judge's decision, supposed to have been rendered either yesterday or today.

Walked Off to Europe.

Miss Dietrich, on view this week on the screen at the Earle Theater, as co-star with Gary Cooper in "Desire," just upped and walked off the set when she became dissatisfied with the story treatment that was being accorded "I Loved a Soldier," the picture on which she was working. Intent on a vacation trip to Europe, she told the studio she would be back in September, probably, to make another picture for them. In the meantime, Paramount decided that perhaps, after all, "I Loved a Soldier" was not ideally suited to the Dietrich type and temperament. It has been temporarily shelved, although Merle Oberon, Margaret Sullavan and Bette Davis, in turn, have been mentioned as the original star's successor.

George Raft's tantrum is attributed by those supposedly "in the know" to a blazing attack of professional jealousy. He walked off the set of "Concertina" because he felt that the cameraman was giving Carole Lombard all of the breaks. His place was taken by Fred MacMurray. To placate the fiery young New Yorker whose temperament and temper are an inheritance of Italian-French ancestors, Paramount assigned him to another picture after a fortnight's suspension.

West Fight a Draw.

Mae West and Paramount came to the parting of the way—and means—by what appears to have been a belligerent sort of mutual consent. I dare say that neither one will be the loser.

Pat O'Brien, the young Irishman with a mind of his own, is said to have taken one look at what the Warner Brothers handed him in the script of "Stage Struck," a hitch in his belt and the air. He was promptly suspended by the studio and, so far as I know, still is. "Stage Struck," a new musical, was supposed to have gone into work a week ago yesterday, but didn't.

Ann Dvorak took her bosses, the Warners, into court to secure a judicial clarification of her contractual obligations to her studio and theirs to her. This seems to have been a drawn battle, with Mrs. Dvorak—in private life Mrs Leslie Fenton—having been awarded some $7,000 in back salary and the Warners retaining her services for another two years.

Easy life these film stars lead—just one continuous round of pleasure! And that goes for the producers, too.

With Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner interests; Sam Galanty, division manager for Columbia; M.-G.-M. Branch Manager Rudolph Berger and Mrs. Berger, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Morgan just back from Miami Beach, Fla., sunsinged to a nice saddle color, the migratory fever seems to have become contagious.

Late yesterday, Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc., Mrs. "Chic" Barron and their small son, "Cracker," left the Capital for a three-week vacation in Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. Hardie Meakin and their two sons already have shaken off the responsibility of KRO-Keith's and the established run of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in "Follow the Fleet" and are enjoying an early spring outing in Atlantic City.

I still hope to be able to make my annual pilgrimage to Hains Point in August!

"Pasteur" Wins Award.

"The Story of Louis Pasteur," the biographical drama of an obscure chemist and humanitarian who rose to lasting fame, was given the Blue Ribbon Award for February by the National Screen Council. Judged for its merit and suitability as entertainment for the entire family, the Warner Brothers release won the council's approval by an overwhelming majority.

The National Screen Council, sponsored by Boxoffice, a national film trade journal, has a membership of more than 200 individuals, who select from among each month's releases the picture to be designated as the recipient of the Blue Ribbon. This membership is made up of the Nation's leading newspaper film editors and social and educational figures interested in the improvement of motion pictures.

Washington will have no quarrel with the February selection.

Representative William L. Nelson, representing the Second Missouri District, where a major portion of "She Voice of Bugle Ann," on the screen at Loew's Fox, was "shot," played host to a gathering of distinguished Missouri notables to view the picture last week-end. After the film had been run off, Representative Nelson made this comment: "Every Missourian is especially interested in this story. The love of the chase is in the heart of every true Missourian to whom the mouthings of the pack is music." Needless to say, he and his Missouri colleagues voted "The Voice of Bugle Ann" a grand entertainment.

I was sure somebody would.

Second Pasadena Festival.

The Greco-Roman cycle of the plays of William Shakespeare will be the feature of the second annual Midsummer Drama Festival at the Pasadena Community Playhouse, according to an announcement just received from the California city.

Scheduled to open on June 15 and continue through August 1, the second Festival bids fair to match the first in public interest. Last summer the chronicle plays of Shakespeare were presented, as a group, for the first time on any stage at Pasadena's internationally known "art" theater.

Listed for production in the Greco-Roman series are "Troilus and Cressida," "Timon of Athens," "Pericles, Prince of Tyre," "Coriolanus," "Julius Caesar," "Antony and Cleopatra" and "Cymbeline." For the seven weeks' schedule of the Drama Festival, each play has been allotted one week's playing time.

With two exceptions, "Julius Caesar" and "Antony and Cleopatra," the Greco-Roman cycle has been generally overlooked by the commercial theater in favor of the more easily produced works of the Bard.

The Pasadena Playhouse's Midsummer Drama Festival is attended by students and theatergoers from all parts of the country.

Yesterday's St. Patrick's Day luncheon of the Variety Club, under the sponsorship of the Warner Brothers' local organization and the executive direction of Harry E. Lohmeyer, was one of the most generously attended of the season. The St. Patrick's Day motif was carried out in green hats, clay pipes, green boutonnieres and a bisque dessert molded in the form of a shamrock.

Entertainment was furnished by acts from the Earle and Fox stages, including from the former Bert Granoff, tenor; the Balabanow Five, accordionists, dancers and gymnasts; John Tio, "the wonder parrot," which worked under difficulties with the Willard's inefficient public address system, and June Knight, the charming and vivacious headliner of this week's Earle bill. The Weir Brothers were present, but unable to perform for want of proper facilities in an overcrowded room. Georges Metaxa, from the Jack Benny revue at the Fox, sang and John Mealey won a hand with whistling solos that so aroused John Tio's interest that he joined in now and again.

The dedication of the new quarters of Variety in the Willard last Saturday night was a gala event that lasted into what have been aptly described as the wee small hours of the morning. Variety is flourishing.

Sons of Their Fathers.

David O. Selznick, president and executive producer of Selznick International, is assembling a second-generation staff of notables.

Harry Leon Wilson, jr., son of the famous novelist, has joined the Selznick organizaton as one of the assistants to Val Lewton, story head of the comparatively new company.

Young Wilson joined two other sons of distinguished fathers on the staff—Ring Lardner, jr., a member of the publicity department, and Feodor Chaliapin, jr., son of the celebrated Russian barytone, assistant to Lillian Deighton, head of the research department.

If ability is hereditary, Selznick ought to have something!

Sigma Nu Alumni Dinner.

Alumni from colleges throughout the country will attend a Sigma Nu dinner at Sholl's Cafe, 1932 Connecticut avenue, tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

The Top o' the Marnin' to Yez!

It would seem that nothing could be more fitting on this emerald tinted Seventeenth of March than to have a "Colleen" pose in front of the traditional symbol of St. Patrick's Day. So here we have Ruby Keeler as a fair colleen in an appropriate shamrock costume doing precisely that. Incidentally, Ruby's next picture bears the title of "Colleen," which may account for this particular camera study.

Cappella Choir Offers Lenten Song Program

Mrs. Stahl is Soloist at Spring Concert of Group at Mayflower.

The A Cappella Choir of First Congregational Church gave another of its annual concerts last night. It was heard by a receptive audience that filled the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel.

As in the case of the choir's five previous spring appearances, the program was in keeping with the Lenten season. Ruby Smith Stahl, the director, chose selections that tell in song the story of the precrucifixion days of Christ.

However, the program was an entity. The contrasting choral effects, which Mrs. Stahl's singers produce, had a place, and the concert gathered momentum in a series of climaxes.

In the first of the three groups into which the songs were divided, Mrs. Stahl achieved interesting choral heights in Bach's "If by His Spirit," in Palestrina's "Gloria Patri," and in the "Grant Unto Me the Joy of Thy Salvation," by Brahms.

The closely knit vocal fabric that this choir is so capable of weaving was revealed strikingly in the Latin "Nunc Dimittis and Gloria," by Gretchaninoff-Aschenbrenner, and in the Christiansen arrangement of Bach's "In dulci Jubilo." These were features of the second group. Thirdly, the choir sang a sextet of more popular anthems, which included Samuel Richards Gaines' "The Lord's Prayer," Gustav Holst's "Lullay My Liking," and "My Lord, What a Mornin'," by Burleigh.

Mrs. Stahl, in addition to her directing, appeared as soprano soloist in some of the numbers. Other solo parts were taken by Dorothy Halbach, contralto; Don Walter, tenor, and Dale Hamilton, bass. At the piano was Paul Delong Gable.

2 Deputies Shot In Making Arrest

Olinger, Va., March 16 (AP).—A deputy sheriff today lay critically wounded in a Lee County hospital, as a result of a gun battle in which a fellow officer and the man they sought to arrest on statutory charges were also injured.

Clarence Bailey was seated at a table at his home yesterday, when Sam McLain and Ray Lipps, Lee County deputies, arrived. He is said to have fired twice at both officers, wounding Lipps above the heart. Hospital attendants gave him little chance to recover. A metal belt buckle saved McLain from serious injury. It was split by a bullet, which failed to penetrate the man's abdomen. A shot fired by Lipps struck Bailey in the right hip. He was expected to recover. Three deputies have been shot to death in Lee County in the last 15 months.

Harris, Ratner To Give Recital

Two American artists, Dave Harris, violinist, and Benjamin Ratner, pianist, will give a recital of sonatas on Friday night in the "Hall of Nations," Washington Hotel. They have been associated in ensemble work for several seasons, and have toured extensively through the Eastern States and as far west as Milwaukee.

Mr. Harris is a talented violinist who has attained distinction for his excellent artistry. Mr. Ratner is a native Washingtonian, and received his early musical education in this city. He has been very successful both in his teaching at the Morganthal Institute in New York, and in concert work.

The program to be presented Friday night consist of Mozart's sonata in F major, K 547; Grieg's sonata in C minor, op. 45; Schubert's sonata in A major, Op. 162, and Beethoven's sonata in A major ("Kreutzer"), Op. 47.

New Gershwin Folk Opera Given First Local Hearing at National

Adapted From Stage Play 'Porgy and Bess' Is True to Original.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"PORGY AND BESS." The Theater Guild presents an American folk opera, founded on the play, "Porgy," by DuBose and Dorothy Heyward, with music by George Gershwin; libretto by DuBose Heyward, with lyrics by Mr. Heyward and Ira Gershwin. Directed by Rouben Mamolian; settings designed by Serge Soudeikine.

In the variety of its mood and incident; the meticulous outline of its genre and the emotional intensity of its climaxes, "Porgy," Dubose and Dorothy Heyward's drama of Catfish Row in Charleston, S. C., lends itself with greater facility to utilization as a foundation of opera than any American play of recent years. In diversity of content, it gretaly excels the late David Belasco's "The Girl of the Golden West," which served as the story basis of Puccini's grand opera of the same name; it provides greater potentialities for effective musical expression than Eugene O'Neill's "The Emperor Jones" and, in its fidelity to the inherent instincts of the race with which it de als, serves a far more valuable purpose than the Indian legends that were woven into the dramatic structure of the late Victor Herbert's "Natoma."

Little of the vital drama of "Porgy" has been sacrificed in the conversion o fthe famous play into George Gershwin's new folk opera of "Porgy and Bess," which was revealed for the first time to a Washington audience in the National Theater last night—an audience, incidentally, that was one of the largest, most fashionable and most enthusiastic of the season.

Instinct With Drama.

The opening scene of Catfish Row is instinct with drama even before a line has been spoken or a note sung. This rickety row of waterfront houses, swarming with fishermen, stevedores, women, children and roustabouts, boils with the pett yactivities of a people who live in happy penury. Evary window, every doorway, ever "front stoop," every tumbledown stairway and every shady balcony is alive with its own minor concerns.

Into this scene drives the cripple, Porgy, drawn by his goat and riding in his little express wagon. Into this scene, later, comes the drunken and violent Crown with his Bess, a vibrant, slender wench, not above a swig of liquor and a sniff of "happy dust" on her own account. The famous craps game is organized and in the excitement of "rolling the bones" a fight is precipitated between the ponderous Crown and the inoffensive Robbins, husband of a meek and solicitous wife. To evade the law, Crown dashes to the palmetto swamps and Bess, refused refuge by everybody else in the row is taken into his squalid home by Porgy, the hopelessly crippled beggar.

Adheres to Play.

From this point on, the story of the opera follows the narrative of the play witha close adherence to its salient dramatic situations and climaxes. There have been retained that amazingly effective "saucer burial" scene in which funds are raised for Robbins' decent interment and a comparative paucity of physical action is offset by an overpowering emotional fervor that is enhanced by adroit lighting that conveys an immediate sense of eerie portent. The picnic in the palmetto jungle is made an almost aboriginal orgy of sensuous songs and dances and Porgy's murder of Crown, when he returns to entice Bess away from her protector, marks the final climax of the play's development.

The operatic form of the work is presented in three acts and nine scenes, which move with such celerity that only two hours and a half are consumed in the enactment of the work, with two ten-minute intermissions.

Seldom has any stage offering, whether dramatic of operatic, been interpreted with such zest, such whole-hearted enthusiasm and such gusto as last night's performance of "Porgy and Bess." The most exacting roles in their emotional demands are those forming the title of the opera, acted and sung, respectively, by Todd Duncan, a member of the faculty of Howard University, and Anne Brown, a native of the neighboring city of Baltimore. An analysis of their treatment of the Gershwin arias, as well as his simpler melodies, will be found in the adjoining column presided over by my scholarly associate, Mr. Ray C. B. Brown.

Roles Flawlessly Acted.

As for their acting, I doubt if the two roles ever will be better played, whether "Porgy and Bess" finds its way into the Metropolitan Grand Opera House or not. As a matter of fact, this flat declaration may be extende deven to the smallest "bit" parts in the cast. The present roster of principals and chorus portray the exciting reactions of their race to stirring situations with a vigor that no white cas, I dare say, ever will equal.

Nex to those of the titular players the performances of Edward Matthews, as Jake; John W. Bubbles, as that astonishing young rake, Sportin' Life; Warren Coleman, as Crown; Abbie Mitchell, as Clara; Ruby Elzy, as Serena; J. Rosamond Johnson, as Frazier, and Georgette Harvey, as Maria, are of greatest moment to the opera's success.

Rouben Mamoulian has given the work marvellous direction, distinguished by varieyt of action, mood and tempo, thus repeating the triumph he enjoyed as director of the original play.

Roosevelt Files Tax Paper at Zero Hour

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt joined hundreds of others yesterday in the last-hour rush to file income-tax returns.

He set aside the luncheon hour for making out the return on his 1935 income.

As usual, Mr. Roosevelt compiled his own return without expert assistance.

The President receives a salary of $75,000 upon which he pays an income tax, as do all officials of the Government.

5-Year-Old Appeal Again Up in Court

Frederick, Md., March 16 (AP).—The 5-year-old appeal case of Earl A. Kolb for return of his license after his automobile had fatally injured a Hagerstown fireman, was heard in circuit court today. Judge Arthur D. Willard took the case under advisement after hearing the evidence.

Seeking to clear the dockets of pending cases, States Attorney Sherman P. Bowers asked for a hearing on the appeal, which had been pending since E. Austin Baughman, then State commissioner of motor vehicles, revoked the license.

Kolb was the driver of the automobile which struck William Negley, of Hagerstown, as the latter was walking across the intersection of Potomac and Franklin streets on the night of September 18, 1930. Negley died three days later.

Held in $500 Bond.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., March 16.—J. Edward Sullivan, 25, Hagerstown, is being held in $500 bond for the action of the grand jury as an accomplice in the robbery of Harry G. Byrum, local taxicab driver, last December 18. Byrum identified Sullivan as one of his assailants. Lester Shipley was convicted last month in connection with the holdup and is now serving 3½ years in prison.

Sutton to Ask Change of Venue In Montgomery Slaying Trial

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Shepherd 2363.

Change of venue for Albert Stavely Sutton, one of four Washington gangsters indicted on charges of murder, in connection with the "mistaken identity" murder of Allen B. Wilson, newspaper route agent, will be asked this week by his counsel, Secretary of State Thomas L. Dawson, it was announced yesterday.

Secretary Dawson informed Judge Charles W. Woodward, at the opening of the March team of the Montgomery County Circuit Court, at Rockville, Md., yesterday that he would ask for the change. The formal request for removal of the trial is expected to be filed later this week.

It is expected that at least two of the others will make a similar request. They are Albert McDermott, alias John "Slim" Dunn, who was brought back from Alcatraz for the murder trial, and Ernest Myers. The trio is being held in the District Jail, under special guard. The trials are scheduled for March 30. William McCleary, the other prisoner, is being held at Rockville Jail. It is expected that he will be a State witness.

Dunn has notified Judge Woodward that he will be represented by Attorney Dorsey Offutt, of Washington, who has entered his appearance. Myers is represented by Attorney Samuel S. Levin, of Baltimore.

Consolidation of the various Montgomery County relief agencies into one group, to save administration expenses, was urged in a resolution adopted at a meeting of the Enterprise Farmers Club of Sandy Spring.

The farmers club voted to ask the Community Council of Sandy Spring to ask action by county commissioners, providing for this change in the relief set-up.

At present there are two public agencies, the Montgomery County Welfare Board, which handles State and Federal money, and the Montgomery County Department of Public Welfare, which expends county relief funds. A third agency, which handles some of the public work involving care of children, is the Montgomery County Social Service League, a private organization.

Montgomery County newsmen will lead the county celebration of St. Patrick's Day with a dance tonight at the Indian Spring Country Club from 10 to 1.

County civic leaders and officials will attend the affair, the second annual dance of the Montgomery County Press Association.

Services will be held in county Catholic Churches this morning, and Forest Glen Council, Knights of Columbus, will celebrate Irish night tonight with a social meeting in Rosensteel Hall, Forest Glen, Md. Members of the Holy Name Society of St. Michael's Parish, Silver Spring, will be guests.

The directors of the Montgomery County Farm Bureau, and the Farm Bureau Supply Co., will meet today in joint session at the courthouse in Rockville, it was announced yesterday by J. W. Jones, president of both organizations.

The 4-H Senior Council of Montgomery County will meet tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the Farm Bureau office, in the courthouse in Rockville, it was announced yesterday by Miss Florence Howes, corresponding secretary.

Court Frees Cagney Of Film Contract

Los Angeles, March 16 (AP).—James Cagney, red-haired rebel of the movie colony, freed himself of a $4,500-a-week screen contract today—then turned his eyes toward European films.

Cagney won a lawsuit against Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., charging violation of contract.

"By gosh, that ends a long headache for me," Cagney commented. "This has been going on for years.

"I'm going to take a vacation, probably in Europe.

"There have been some nice offers from English companies, and I wouldn't be surprised if I made some pictures over there."

Cagney twice before forced concessions from his employers.

In the latest controversy, he claimed Jack L. Warner, vice president of the company, had broken an oral agreement not to star him in more than four pictures a year.

Superior Judge Charles Bogue's decision, however, was not on the oral agreement, but that the studio had voided Cagney's contract by failing to live up to a clause stipulating "star billing" in every picture he made.

How many readers are regular martyrs to pain, month after month, envious of those women who go serenely through their time? You probably know at least one woman who is never at a disadvantage, never breaks engagements, never declines dances (unless she wants to!) and whose spirits never seem to droop.

She is likely that eighth woman who relies on Midol. Eight million women once suffered regularly every month. Had difficult days when they must save themselves, and favor themselves, or pay the penalty. But a million have accepted the relief of Midol.

Are you compelled to favor yourself and save yourself, certain days of every month? Midol could change this. Might have you out dancing. And even if it didn't keep you absolutely free from all pain for the entire period, you would receive a measure of relief well worth while!

Midol is effective even when the pain has caught you unaware and has reached its height. It's effective for hours, so two tablets should see you through your worst day. They do not contain any narcotic.

Nordell Outruns Cunningham and Mangan in Brilliant Race

N. Y. A. C. Ace Is Victor by 2 Yards

Kansan Uncorks Sprint Too Late, But Finishes in Second Place.

Time for 1,500-Meter Event Is 4:6.8, Far Short of Mark.

By the Associated Press.

NEWARK, N. J., March 16.—Frank Nordell, of the New York Athletic Club, outran the great Glenn Cunningham and Joe Mangan in a brilliant 1,500-meter race in the 113th Regiment Armory tonight. The time was 4 minutes 6.8 seconds.

The former New York University Star, always at his best on flat armory boards, breezed past his more famous rivals at the start of the fourth lap of the nine-lap run, and stretched his lead to 30 yards at the seventh lap.

Cunningham, the world's fastest miler, uncorked his sprint too late but crossed the finish line 2 yards back of the winner. Mangan, who has beaten the Kansan in two mile tests this season, was a yard farther back.

The time of 4:6.8 was far short of the 3:50.5 indoor record set by Cunningham last year.

Runs Heady Race.

Nordell, who pushed Cunningham to a track record in the half mile here two years ago, ran a heady race tonight and outfoxed the Kansas speedster, who beat Gene Venzke and Mangan in the now famous 4:46.8 mile in Madison Square Garden Saturday night.

Cunningham, who refused to take the lead in that race, pushed out in front at the start tonight, with Nordell second and Mangan third. They retained these positions through the first quarter.

Then Nordell passed Cunningham and increased his pace. At the fourth lap he was 15 yards ahead. At the half mile he was timed in 2:18.4, with Cunningham and Mangan far behind. At the sixth lap, Nordell led by 25 yards, and 30 yards ahead as they went into the eighth.

Both his rivals made their bid in the final lap but neither was able to make up the wide gap. Nordell faltered as he came down the home stretch but held out to the end.

60-Yard World Record.

Eulace Peacock, of Temple University, battered the world's record in the 60-yard sprint, one of a series of dashes which featured the program. His time was 6 1-10 seconds, battering the former mark of 6 1-5 seconds. Because the runners used starting blocks it is expected that the mark will not be accepted as a new standard.

Mary Ryan Wins Badminton Upset

Maary Ryan won in the only upset match of the eighth annual open tournament of the Washington Badminton Club being staged at the Y. W. C. A. Miss Ryan triumphed over Mrs. W. R. Willoughby, 15-4, in a second round match. In the men's singles, both Faulkner and Beattie, the No. 1 and No. 2 players locally, won their matches. All matches in the men's singles and women's doubles will be played tonight as well as unplayed matches in the preliminary rounds.

Men's Singles: First round—Faulkner defeated Callan, 15-3, 15-4; Farrington defeated Carroll, 15-1, 15-6; Beattie defeated Kaufman by default; Roe defeated Thomson, 15-4, 15-4; Yurowitz defeated Little by default; Eynon defeated Rockwood, 15-6, 15-4. Second round—Beattie defeated Roe, 15-13, 15-12; Eynon defeated Yurowitz, 15-7, 15-6.

Ladies singles—Margaret Graham drew bye; Mrs. E. Eynon defeated Eleanor Finckel, 15-3; Hester Brooks and Mrs. Willoughby drew byes; Mary Ryan defeated Mrs. Wilmerding, 15-12; Mrs. Wilson drew bye. Second round—Mrs. Graham defeated Alice Babcock, 15-13; Mrs. Eynon defeated Miss Brooks, 15-0; Miss Ryan defeated Mrs. Willoughby, 15-4.

Mixed doubles—Miss Babcock and Thomson won, 8-15, 15-9, 15-3; Mr. and Mrs. Eynon won, 15-1, 15-11.

Court Title Won By Carnegie Tech

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, March 16.—Carnegie Tech vanquished the Pitt Panthers, 32 to 27, tonight to win the basketball championship of the Eastern Intercollegiate Conference in a play-off game.

At the half Pitt was ahead, 20 to 19. Earlier the Panthers, holders of the conference crown since the circuit was formed four years ago, were ahead, 17 to 7.

Lou Pagnow, substitute forward, led the victory drive for Carnegie, scoring 9 of his team's points.

Fouls increased in the closing minutes and it was on the margin of the charity throws the game was decided.

The Panthers and Tartans ended their regular conference season tied for the leadership, each with seven victories and three defeats.

John D. Took Up Golf To Surprise His Wife

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., March 16.—If John D. Rockefeller lives to be 100 or more, I will feel that I played a part in helping him reach his goal. For it was I who taught him to play golf, back near the turn of the century, and he often told me the game made him feel better than any he had ever played.

Mr. Rockefeller didn't take up golf as a health measure, however, but because he wanted to surprise his wife. I had been giving her lessons a year or more before he called me up.

I was just a youngster in my late twenties when Mr. Rockefeller called me up at the Cleveland Country Club where I was professional, and asked if I would come to his place, Forest Hill, and teach him the game.

Guards Were Posted.

To be sure that Mrs. Rockefeller didn't find out he was taking lessons, Mr. Rockefeller would send a carriage for me early in the morning so that we could be on the course before 8 o'clock, while his wife was still sleeping. Before we started out we would post guards all over the course to signal us if Mrs. Rockefeller came to the course. Sometimes they would shout that she was coming, and Mr. Rockefeller would drop his clubs and hide until she was out of sight.

I never had a pupil in all my 50 years of golf who worked as hard

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Orlando, Fla., March 16.

PERSEVERANCE and an excellent misunderstanding of the English language is rewarding Roberto Estallella in the Washington training camp.

As a third baseman he was tagged as a hopeless case by Bucky Harris two weeks ago. The little underslung Cuban had all the grace and finesse of a baby hippo and fought ground balls as if they were armed to the teeth, but a great transformation has taken place.

POVICH.

Estallella has been sticking to it so everlastingly that Harris now is arching an enlightened eyebrow. The little guy with the big bat who wouldn't take no for an answer is now solidly in the fight for the third base job.

Harris was only letting the Cuban play at third in practice under sufferance, anyway. Twice he had attempted to convey to Estallella, by gestures, that he wished him to take up outfielding as a profession. Either Harris is a poor gesticulator or the Cuban is more ignorant of "Onglees" than even Harris had suspected, because Estallella would nod vigorously, jabber "Ho-kay, ho-kay" and then trot back to third base.

So Harris gave up on the theory that there was plenty of time to advise the Cuban that he was no infielder, but an outfielder. And Estallella has been a daily figure around third base, blissfully ignorant of the fact that the job is supposed to belong to young Buddy Lewis, and, on occasion, commanding Lewis to move over and make make way for his eminence.

That kind of insubordination would net any other ball player in camp a costly fine and definite instructions as to where to get off, but Harris smilingly tolerated the conduct of the little Cuban powerhouse. But today, it was with more than toleration as Harris viewed Estallella's performance in practice.

The Cuban Keed was, indeed, improving as an infielder. He was scurrying after ground balls with a new-found grace and in something approximating big league style. Somehow, somewhere, he had seemingly found the knack of getting a quick break on hard-hit grounders and playing the slower-hit balls on the proper hop. Harris took time out to saunter over to the bag and watch him closely.

A vicious smack tore through Estallella's glove for a hit, and Harris beckoned the Cuban. "Let me look at that mitt," he asked, and then, realizing his error, grabbed the glove off Estallella's hand and inspected it.

"Ye gods," Harris exclaimed to newspapermen. "No wonder he can't hold anything. Look at this glove. He must have got it out of a drug store or with 20 cigar coupons. No wonder he's losing those balls."

It was, indeed, a cheap, skimpy drug store glove that Estallella had been using. But Harris was at a loss to explain the situation to the Cuban who was standing by in wide-eyed wonder. Finally a thought struck Harris. He took the glove, slammed it to the ground, stomped all over it, and then, showing it to Estallella, heaved it out of the park.

The Cuban nodded in understanding. "Ho-kay, no good, assaboy," he said. "Ver'bad, ver'bad."

Harris gave Estallella his own glove and sent him back to third base. Then he watched the little Cuban snare everything that came his way, and with his amazing arm turn the ball loose to first base with a speed that no other guy on the club can approximate. No longer is Estallella the stiff-backed, bungling, overeager kid that Washington saw last fall. He's a distinct threat to Buddy Lewis' third-base ambitions.

There is nothing altruistic in Harris' new attitude toward the Cuban. Bucky would like to have the power of Estallella's big bat in the Nats' line-up every day. Esty has done nothing to disturb the belief that he is a terrific socker, probably the best hitter on the team. Three times he has gone to bat in the exhibition games here, once he tripled and on a second occasion he drove a pinch hit through the infield that scorched everything it touched.

Esty is beginning to loom like excellent protection for Harris in the event young Buddy Lewis fails to justify his promise. Lewis is still the superior fielder and has presented strong evidence that he can hit. But any lapse after the season starts and Estallella will be within ready call. Hopeless Case No. 1 is now an undiluted sensation down here.

Dr. Naismith Is Honored By Fans

Rinaldi Tailors Oppose Noblitt Sparks in Feature Tonight.

By Dave Herman.

A Staff Correspondent.

DENVER, Colo., March 16.—A throng of 6,000 Denver basketball fans gathered at the city auditorium tonight to pay homage to Dr. James A. Naismith, of the University of Kansas, father of the court game, at a huge demonstration, featured by the parade of 54 teams that are engaged in a gigantic battle royal for the National A. A. U. championship.

The crowd almost shook the building loose from its foundation with a wild salvo of applause when the white-haired old gentleman who invented one of the Nation's most popular games with an old, discarded peach basket and volley ball was introduced. Nine of the "youngsters" whom Dr. Naismith coached back in 1897 were introduced in turn, after which he briefly reviewed the game's progress.

Parade a Revelation.

The parade was a revelation to your reporter of the stony path that leads to the national title. They've got 'em here, every team a prospective championship combination of 6-foot giants who make the average team back home seem like pigmies by comparison.

The Rinaldi's, too, appeared to be somewhat astonished at the size of their contemporaries. The Santa Fe Trails, defending champions; Globe Refiners, 1935 runners-up; San Diego Marines, Kansas City Philcos, Universal Pictures, of Hollywood, and a host of others too numerous to mention, proved to be eye-openers for the District tossers.

Tailors Play Today.

Tomorrow the Tailors clash with Chuck Taylor's Noblitt Sparks team, of Columbus, Ind., champion of its native State and one of the tourney's darkest dark horses. The teams accidentally had a premature meeting when Coach Dave Keppel brought his men to the Denver College of Commerce gym for the workout today. The Sparks already were going through their paces when the Rinaldis appeared on the scene and were obliged to curtail their session.

The game will be one of tomorrow's features. It has been assigned the 10 p. m. (E. S. T.) spot, and probably will be played before a capacity house.

The Rinaldis' eastern style of play, featuring the short pass and equally short dribble, has captured the fancy of Denver's fans who are accustomed to the long Western passing and dribbling. One scribe referred to them as the "best ball-handling outfit in the show,' and from what your reporter has seen thus far, he is correct.

Quarles Loses Verdict To Scott in Baltimore

Baltimore, Md., March 16.—Norment Quarles, former Southern Conference lightweight champion, lost a unanimous decision to Howard Scott, of Washington, D. C., in the 10-round feature of a card witnessed by 2,500 here tonight.

Quarles recently defeated Lew Feldman, ranking featherweight from New York, in Richmond, and in Scott's last previous fight he lost a disputed decision to Eddie Cool, of Philadelphia in Washington.

Leroy Haynes Stops Primo In Third

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, March 16.—The heavyweight comeback hopes of Primo Carnera were flattened in three hours of a blood-and-thunder slugging duel tonight as the former world's champion went down to defeat before the battering fists of slugging Leroy Haynes, of Los Angeles.

Forced to give away almost 70 pounds in weight and long inches in height and reach, the Negro husky from the Coast dazed Carnera in the first round with a jarring right hand, dropped him twice for short counts in the second, and then forced him to quit in his own corner under a terrific pounding at the 53-second mark of the third.

Carnera weighed 265; Haynes, 197½. A crowd of 10,000, largest of the local indoor season, turned out for the show.

Haynes, on the other hand, opened fire with all his guns right from the go. He landed the first blows, a hard left and right to the face, in the first minute and thereafter held the upper hand.

Carnera was obviously nettled by the surprise attack, and was no match for the even-punching Negro in the short third. He took two smashing rights to the face, backpedaled to his own corner, and turned his back on his foe. Referee Matt Adgie ended the fight there.

Rockingham Park Race Track Purchased by New York Group

By the United Press.

BOSTON, March 16.—Ownership of Rockingham Park Horse Race Track at Salem, N. H., passed today to a group of prominent New York sportsmen headed by James I. Bush, director of Madison Square Garden.

The new owners have incorporated under the name of the New Hampshire Jockey Club.

Previously, control of Rockingham Park was held by the New Hampshire Breeders Association, Inc., with William H. Gallagher, well known turfman, as majority stockholder.

Announcement of the transaction was made through Hammons & Co., Inc., Boston investment house.

Bush was named president of the new group. Other officers were named as follows: Vice president, Thomas H. McKoy, jr., of Philadelphia; managing director, Louis Smith, of Houston, Tex., who had held that position at Rockingham since the track was built; treasurer, Cedric E. Fauntleroy, of New York, ace World War aviator and well known Mississippi horse and hound breeder; secretary, Holt W. Page, of New York; clerk, Ralph H. Davis, of Manchester, N. H.

Davis Cupmen Ordered To Report on March 30

New York, March 16 (AP).—With the first-round Davis Cup tennis tie between Mexico and the United States awarded to the Rivers Oak Club of Houston, Tex., April 10-12, the United States Lawn Tennis Association today ordered a squad of five players to report there on March 30.

Seven Rookies Excluded as Harris Gives Out New Signals.

Lanahan Will Get First Test of Year Today Against Albany.

By Shirley Povich.

Sports Editor of The Post.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 16.—A virtual admission that he had discovered no diamonds in the rough among his crop of second-flight rookie pitchers was made by Manager Bucky Harris today.

Harris this morning imparted to his Washington squad the new signals the team will use during the 1936 season and excluded from the locker-room conference were all of the young pitchers who didn't see service with the Nats last year.

Unwilling to divulge the signals to any players who would not be with the team and who might, conceivably, betray them, Harris did not call into the meeting such as Ken Raffenberger, the right-hander from Oneonta, N. Y.; Harry Oates, Buck Newsom's South Carolina protege; Joe Bokina, the Albany hopeful; Joe Krakauskas, the Canadian recruit; Kendall Chase, Chattanooga graduate; Frank Peticolas, former Chicago sandlotter, and Joe Hutchinson, a Harrisburg rookie.

New Set of Signals.

In an effort to give his team a new and original set of signals that would defy the ferrets on opposition clubs, Manager Harris visited Manager Jimmy Wilson of the Phillies at Winter Haven a few days ago and received from him a system of signals that he believes is new to the American League.

These signals, in the main, concern the pitchers, with a different set for base runners. Catchers will ask for one of three pitches, namely, the fast ball, the curve or the change of pace. As all manner of hooks come under the heading of curve, the catcher knows from constant working with each pitcher what kind of a pitch it will be when the curve is called for.

Harris will take his team to Winter Garden, 20 miles away, to play the Washington farmhands on the Albany club tomorrow. Three of his rookie pitchers, Dick Lanahan, Henry Coppola and Joe Bokina, will get their first test of the season under fire in an exhibition game.

At the Albany camp tomorrow, Harris will inspect closely the play of two of the eight Cubans Owner Joe Cambria has imported for his Albany team which gives the Nats first call on the services of its players. Harris is interested particularly in a pitcher named De La Cruz, who beat the Chattanooga club, 11 to 2, over the week-end, and a catcher named Guera.

De La Cruz came to Albany with something of a reputation, having beaten the Cardinals, 3 to 1, in a exhibition game in Havana. Guera is described by Clark Griffith, who saw him in practice, as the fastest rookie catcher he ever scouted and with a throwing arm better than any possessed by a Washington catcher.

Wynne Is Tendered Contract, Joins Chattanooga This Week

Young Catcher Is Thrilled, Lauds Post Sandlot Association.

By Huck Wynne.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 16.—I feel now that I have accomplished something down here in the Washington training camp, and what I want chiefly to say is "Thanks."

To the Washington Post, which financed my tryout with the Nats here, and to the various presidents of the Washington Post Sandlot Association leagues who chose me for the tryout, I want to say that I feel deeply grateful. Without them I may never have had my chance in organized baseball.

Mr. Griffith told me today that I would be sent to the Chattanooga Club, at Daytona Beach, this week, and, needless to say, that was quite a thrill. It was particularly a thrill when he told me that there were few sandlotters who ever earned a contract in a class A league in their first tryout, like I did.

But best of all is the pleasure I have gotten in making good for the people who had the faith in me to send me down here. My biggest desire was to reflect credit upon the folks back home and the Washington Post Sandlot Association and I feel now that I am in a fair way toward doing so.

I know Mr. Griffith would never give me a contract with the Chattanooga Club unless he thought I deserved one and that, of course, makes me feel pretty good. I'm trying to be modest about it, but I do think that I did make a good showing down here, particularly when they didn't expect much of me.

Baseball is certainly my chosen profession and it would have come pretty hard to me if they had shipped me back home. But with the encouragement they've given me now, I'm in the game to stay, I'm sure.

Clark Griffith Forecasts He Will Make Good in Baseball.

By a Special Correspondent.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 16.—Climaxing a sensational showing in the Washington training camp, Huck Wynne, rookie catcher from the Washington sandlots, today was tendered a contract by the Chattanooga club of the Southern Association.

Owner Clark Griffith, of the Nats, announced officially that Wynne would be transferred to the Washington farm club at Daytona Beach this week, and paid high compliment to the lad who was voted the outstanding sandlotter in Washington during 1935.

"Even the best of the sandlotters are a 100 to 1 shot to get a contract with a small minor league club in their first tryout. But young Wynne definitely has promise—promise that that has convinced me that he will go far in organized baseball," Griffith said.

"I know the Chattanooga club is in a league just under class AA, but I think Wynne ought to make good there despite his lack of great experience. I might have sent him to Harrisburg or one of our smaller farm teams, but I think he is fitted for something better than that."

"If he is typical of the kind of baseball they play in The Washington Post Sandlot Association then I think we have the greatest sandlot teams in the country in Washington. Down here he looked like anything but a sandlotter and The Washington Post and The Washington Post Sandlot Association should be complimented not only on their choice of him for a tryout but on the caliber of baseball they provide."

Wynne, indeed, made a remarkable showing in training with the Nats. At first relegated to the bench because of his meager experience, he saw other young catchers given the bulk of the work, but gradually asserted his own talents.

Hoyas to Be Ready for Bigger Foes in Two Years, Is Belief.

GEORGETOWN'S football renaissance, which was undertaken by youthful Jack Hagerty and an equally youthful staff of assistants two years ago, assumed a more definite form yesterday when H. Gabriel Murphy, graduate manager of athletics, announced that the Hoyas would meet the University of Pennsylvania on October 23, 1937 in Philadelphia.

The agreement between the schools calls for only one game, Murphy said, but he indicated that the door is open for future grid battles between the two schools. Next year's game will be the first between the two since 1924 when Penn drop-kicked its way to a 3-to-0 victory over the Hilltoppers before a throng of 45,000 at Franklin Field.

Murphy said negotiations virtually have been completed for games with opponents of similar caliber in 1937 but that he is unable to announce them until dates have been definitely decided. There will be four games with major opponents and four with smaller teams which are being scheduled for breathers between important contests.

Big Games in Capital.

Murphy said several of the bigger games would be played in Washington, inasmuch as he felt that the Hoyas will have regained enough of their lost power, prestige and color by '37 to win the support of District fans.

That the Hilltoppers will place a team of big league ability on the field this autumn is being freely predicted by Georgetown supporters, although all speak without consulting Hagerty, who is not as confident that his efforts will result in grade A eleven.

Hagerty feels that the team is still one year away from the heights occupied by the elevens developed during Lou Little's regime. The complexion of this autumn's schedule—and the vigorous plans being made for 1937—conclusively demonstrate that Georgetown officials are in accord with Hagerty's views and are co-operating with him to the fullest.

Fla. Golf Medal To Marion Miley

Jungle Country Club, St. Petersburg, Fla., March 16 (AP).—Marion Miley, trans-Mississippi woman's champion, of Lexington, Ky., won medalist honors in the first annual St. Petersburg women's invitation golf tournament here with a 76, 7 over men's par.

Three strokes behind Miss Miley and the only other entrant in the field of 48 women to better 80 was Mrs. Mark McGarry, New York and St. Petersburg, with a 79.

Mrs. Marion Turpie Lake, New York, former Southern champion, drew up in third place with an 81, and Jean Bauer, Providence, R. I., medalist in the women's national tournament last year, had an 82.

Galiano, Dean Battle Way To Draw

By Bill McCormick.

PETE GALIANO, Italian-American featherweight from Baltimore, and Johnny Dean, of Charlotte, N. C., battled to a savage draw in the best of three eight-round cofeatures that headed the "Anniversary" bill of boxing at Turner's Arena last night. The card, which marked the first anniversary of the ring alliance of Promoter Joe Turner and Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, was witnessed by a goodly turnout of 1,600.

Galiano and Dean, who had worked to a six-round preliminary draw exactly one week before, went through almost identical motions last night. Johnny swung wildly and willingly from bell to bell as Pete rammed home straight and more effective, if less numerous, punches continually.

Neither boxer was seriously injured during the course of the contest, despite the high, wide and handsome action that marked the engagement. At the finish, this writer would have taken oath that Galiano had earned the official award, but a careful check of this paper's scoresheet showed that on the numerical method of reckoning in vogue in the District, the bout could be declared nothing but a stalemate.

Both Judges Bob Eller and Denny Hughes and Referee Muggsy Morris voted the affair a draw, making the first unanimous draw decision ever rendered in the Capital.

Cary Wright, rejuvenated Washington heavyweight, won a six-round technical knockout from Leroy Zinkham, of Baltimore, in the first of the cofeatures scheduled for eight rounds.

Bobby Dean, flashy Philadelphia southpaw, administered a neat and scientific spanking to Eddie Burl, veteran Florida featherweight, in a lop-sided six-round preliminary. Dean dropped Eddie at the bell, ending the second but was unable to sweep the venerable little gamecock off his feet thereafter, despite the terrific beating he gave Burl to win a unanimous decision.

Joe Doty, of Washingthon, won a unanimous decision from Lou De Mario, of Baltimore, in a four-round lightweight curtain-raiser.

Johnny Anderson, rugged New York light-heavyweight, scored a sixth-round technical knockout over Bob Turner, of Norfolk, in the eight-rounder that was supposed to be the feature but wasn't.

Golf Pro Tells Of John D's Lessons

at the game as did Mr. Rockefeller those first few weeks. I would get there promptly at 8 o'clock, and not many mornings did I get away before 10 or 11. He took it just as seriously as he did his work, and worked at it just as studiously.

And he believed in getting his money's worth. I charged him the regular fee of $5 an hour—which was pretty steep in those days—and he saw to it that he got his full $5 worth. For example, when he was on the practice tee he didn't like to stand idle while one caddy returned the balls he had hit. So he would always bring six, seven and eight caddies to the tee, and have them returning the balls in relays. And he always had a caddy kneeling down forming the little sand tees we used in those days. As a result, there was always a ball there ready for him to hit.

I'll never forget the morning he decided to play with Mrs. Rockefeller and surprise her. When she came to the first tee with her sister, Miss Spellman, he was there and said casually:

"I think I'll play with you this morning. It looks as if it might be a nice game."

Didn't Need Lessons.

Mrs. Rockefeller laughed and said: "Why, John, golf isn't a game you can just start playing. You have to have lessons. You'll have to have Mr. Mitchell here teach you."

"I don't think I need any lessons," he answered. "You drive, and then I'll show you."

Mrs. Rockefeller hit her drive and then Mr. Rockefeller stepped up and hit a nice drive down the middle. Mrs. Rockefeller's amazement was genuine. And then I remember her turning to him and saying:

"John, I might have known it. You always do things better and more easily than anyone else."

As she said this, Mr. Rockefeller turned his head to me and winked, and then shook his head as if to say, "Don't you ever tell her." And I never did. And I don't think she ever found out that he had had a lesson.

Shame, Shame, Shame!

Mr. Rockefeller always played played quietly, and when he would make a bad shot always said the same thing. I can see him now, head bowed, saying:

"Shame, shame, shame!"

He always said it three times. He had one little peculiarity I remember. Whenever he would miss a putt he would call the caddy to bring him some balls and he would putt until he made it. Sometimes the putt would be a long one, 15 or 20 feet, and he would putt 10 or 15 minutes before making it. But he would never stop until he did, no matter if it took him three hours to play nine holes.

Mr. Rockefeller never walked around the golf course. He was in his sixties then, and in good health, but he didn't believe in walking from shot to shot. As soon as he would hit the ball a caddy would bring his bicycle. He would get on the bicycle, tuck his legs up on the frame, and the caddy would push him along. And he always insisted on an umbrella. While he stood about waiting for his companions to shoot, a caddy would hold a big umbrella over his head.

Only One Economy.

Mr. Rockefeller's only golf economy was in the matter of balls. That was in the day of the old gutta percha ball, and they cost quite a bit. And they didn't wear very well. Sometimes half the paint would fly off after one shot. He would buy lots of clubs and things, but he was thrifty about balls.

I remember one time we were playing along and he drove a brand-new ball into the rough. After we had searched for it for more than ten minutes, Mr. Rockefeller turned to his caddy and asked:

"Boy, what do Mr. Clay and Dr. Bigger (two of his golf partners) do when they knock a ball in here?"

"They look for it a minute or two," answered the caddy, "and then they drop a new one out here in the fairway and go on."

"Huh," Mr. Rockefeller said as he resumed poking in the grass for the ball, "they must have barrels of money."

At the Post . . .

Selections at Tropical Park.

Dear Al:

The mud came up yesterday at Tropical and that fact probably balked many of the Beat-Bill-Bennings contestants. However, I managed to stagger three winners out of the program and probably will have some of the folks topped for a change. I have not had a chance to get at the mail pile as yet. As the contest now stands, V. L. Brown in leading for the grand award of two badges to the Bowie meeting and M. L. Morris is the present runner-up for the one badge to Bowie, the second prize. Each has five winners to his credit but Brown is ahead, $72.80 to $67.50, on the total mutuel. Due to a mistake, the contest slip was not printed in yesterday morning's paper but many sent in their selections and they were accepted. On account of out-of-town mail, Saturday's daily prize winner of two day passes to Bowie will not be announced until tomorrow morning. In the meanwhile, if you haven't tried your luck and skill in this contest, do so. It is not a day-to-day competition. The person who picks the most winners for a single day gets the grand prize. Read the rules and get them in early, folks.

BILL.

First race—Dixie Princess is always a bridesmaid, but seldom a bride as far as winning races is concerned. She picks up a feather today and runs over a track she likes. If she fails she should start pulling a wagon. St. Nick and Guilder to take care of the others.

Second race—Scotch Queen is assigned light weight and a good rider in Fallon and I'm going to string along. Dornoch will appreciate the off-going and will be dangerous. Screen is a possible surprise.

Third race—Jack Snipe and Inflame should battle it out for the chief award in this company. Both are in fit hands and can make them. Edri will carry only 104 pounds and is likely to be a factor.

Fourth race—Maestrom is a standout in this company and any price will be a good one. Litzenberger will do the saddle hustling. Lovely Day and Grey Shot for the place and show.

Fifth race—Sir Quest, with Arcaro in the saddle, seems to have a class edge on this group. Phildia and Below Zero for the other money positions.

Sixth race—Fervid, despite top weight, probably will do a lot of running on the slow track. Wright is scheduled for the riding assignment. Mixed Party and Creole Bird to fight it out if the top one makes mistakes.

Seventh race—Hogan's Fox will like conditions in this race, but must run to best form. Col. Greene and Late Date will do the chief chasing.

Best bet—Maestrom.

Sarazen and Reynolds in Golf Win

By the Associated Press.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., March 16. Victors in a thrilling 39-hole battle with Henry Picard and Jack Cummins, the daring team of Gene Sarazen and Mally Reynolds today won the second annual National Amateur-Professional Best Ball Golf tournament.

Two poor drives on the third extra hole cost Picard, Hershey, Pa., professional, and Cummins, New York amateur, the match after they had waged a sensational uphill fight.

Sarazen, former holder of both the American and British Open crowns, and Reynolds, hard-driving Jacksonville amateur, sent their tee shots straight down the fairway. A good second and two putts gave Reynolds a par 4, and Sarazen's long putt for a birdie failed.

Shots Make Poor Landings.

Picard's tee shot landed in a pond, while Cummins' was in the rough. Both recovered nicely, but missed desperate putts for the par which would have carried the match to additional extra holes.

Both sides were nine strokes under par 144 for the regular 36-hole distance.

Three down at the turn on the afternoon round, Picard and Cummins won the eleventh in par 4 figures.

Special Dispatch to the Post.

Alexandria, Va., March 16.—George Washington High School's baseball team, weather permitting, holds its first outdoor drill tomorrow afternoon at Baggett's Stadium. The Presidents have a promising squad of 20 men with four veterans, Paul Shu, catcher; Lee Fones, shortstop; Stanley Heflin, first baseman, and John Nugent, center field.

Givens has booked games with Western, Roosevelt, Eastern, Washington and Lee, Fredericksburg, Mount Rainier, and Maryland Freshmen.

The St. Mary's Celtics baseball team will practice at Baggetts Sunday afternoon at 1:30 p. m.

Eastern High School's basketball team invades the Armory Hall here Wednesday night for a game with the Columbia Firemen at 8:15 p. m.

Play in the Junior League will be resumed tomorrow night in the Armory Hall at 7 p. m., with the Flashes and Sparrows mixing. Alexandria Light Infantry meets Lee-Jackson High at Armory Hall after the juniors collide.

'Grid Twins' Hold Key To C. U.'s 1936 Hopes

By Lewis F. Atchison.

YOU'RE going to hear a lot about Catholic University's "Gold-dust Twins" next football season, and if 1935 was a criterion of their value it'll be good news for Cardinal supporters and the reverse for their opponents. The twins are "Irish" Carroll, as sweet a halfback as ever sported the Cardinal and Black, and "Spec" Foley, former Tech High School star, who is destined to be the regular quarterback for the next two seasons.

"Things aren't as rosy out here as everybody seems to believe," Coach Dutch Bergman said yesterday. "We have problems to solve just like any other team, and if we don't get the right, answers there's gonna be trouble.

"But I don't think we're going to have to worry about punting, with Foley in there, or about ball-carrying as long as Carroll is ready. Put the two together and I think we'll have a smart combination. You might call 'em the 'Gold-dust Twins,' that's how important they are to me. Believe they're real gold-dust, too. I wouldn't feel any better if an old, grizzly '49 dropped a bag of gold nuggets in my lap."

To Miss Draginnis.

Bergman realizes he is going to miss Pete Draginnis, who was just coming into full bloom as a major-league quarterback. Pete's work in the first half of the Orange Bowl game, which really decided the issue that balmy afternoon, was above reproach. If Catholic had him back next season it would be a terrific burden off Bergman's mind.

But the gray fox thinks Foley will develop rapidly this season, after breaking in last year, and that added punting ability won't hurt him any. Foley's long distance kicking was an important factor in Catholic's sensational victory over Detroit. One of his punts sailed 77 yards. Thus, Bergman figures that when some foe stops the running attack, if Carroll gets bottled up, and a pass is too dangerous, Foley can kick out of danger.

Carroll has gained only one pound since last autumn, but he probably will put on more weight during the summer months and he is expected to weigh between 170 and 175 when the curtain rolls back next October. He goes 168-pounds right now. Foley will hit about 165 pounds, which should be his maximum. He's gained 20 pounds since enrolling at Catholic, and weights 161.

Others in Backfield.

Bergman figures Carroll's added experience, his natural speed and football intuicity, plus added heft, will make him a much respected figure in the backfield next season. Then add Bob Makofske, a hard-hitting fullback, and Bill Adamaitis, forward passer par excellence to that duo and it spells dynamite.

The Cards' big problem is in the line, where Ed Karpowich, tackle; Bill Lajousky, guard, and George Mulligan, end, must be replaced. Vic Sochon, Leo Katalinas and Zeke Brown are destined to get the vacant positions unless they show a complete reversal of form when the regular season gets under way.

Brownell, Minnix Gain Squash Final

A pair of upsets marked the semi-final round of the first annual District A. A. U. squash racquet championships held last night on the Y. M. C. A. courts. E. B. (Buzz) Brownell, former Harvard star, eliminated the top-seeded James Gibson, of the Racquet Club, in five hard-fought games, 3 to 2. A capacity gallery watched the matches.

In the other battle, A. C. Minnix, representing the Y. M. C. A., as was Brownell, crushed Hugh Lynch, of the Edgemoor Club, 3 to 0. Lynch, though unseeded, had been favored to defeat the third-seeded Minnix on the basis of his upset of Chester T. Lane, No. 2 seeded entrant, in the quarter-finals.

In only one game did Lynch, former Princeton tennis captain, threaten Minnix, who won by scores of 15-5, 16-3 and 15-8.

The final will be held Saturday at 2:30 p. m., with Lynch and Gibson preceding the title tilt with a match for third place at 2 p. m.

Merrick Club Tourney Will Open Tomorrow

The parochial basketball tournament arranged by the Merrick Boys' Club will start at the club's gymnasium, 608 Massachusetts avenue northeast, at 8 p. m. tomorrow. The tournament is sponsored by George Shea, who will present a cup to the winner.

Approximately 15 unlimited teams will compete. Babe Gearty, one of the athletic directors at the club and a regularly appointed A. A. U. basketball official, will handle the games. Tom Gearty, another Catholic University athletic star, will have charge of the details of the tournament. Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, director of the budget of the District, will toss out the first ball.

Billy Houghton to Aid Al at Virginia Beach

Billy Houghton, brother of the more famous Al Houghton, former Washington golf professional, will take over the job as assistant pro at Virginia Beach, Va., on April 1, it was learned yesterday.

Attains National Honor.

Dane Wallace, ace marksman of the George Washington University rifle team, recently placed second in the national intercollegiate individual rifle championships, posting a score of 569 hits in 600 attempts. The title was won by a member of the Iowa State University team. Wallace, a former Western High rifleman, has an average of 287 in the intercollegiate team championships.

D. C. Women's Golf Series Expanded

EXPANDING the competition to include third teams, those in charge of the interclub women's golf series met yesterday at the Kennedy-Warren at 2 p. m. and named the captains who will head the forces of their particular clubs. Mrs. Noble J. Waldron, acting District team captain, presided in the absence of Mrs. B. C. Hartig. All District captains and club captains were invited.

It was voted to open the team matches April 21, continuing to June 16. The first teams will meet at Columbia, the second at Congressional and the third at Woodmont. Average handicap per team will be 53.66 for the first teams, 84.85 for the second team and 131.63 for No. 3s. The individual average will be 9 strokes for first-team players, 14 for the second-teamers, and 22 for the third-team players. Chevy Chase won the first-team award last year and Columbia the second-team title.

Those attending were President Mrs. R. W. Payne; Mrs. Theo Peyser, treasurer; Mrs. J. W. Beller, assistant intercity team captain; Mrs. J. F. Dowdall, tournament chairman; Mrs. E. A. Rule, second team captain; Mrs. E. M. Amick, assistant team captain; Mrs. Frank Kramer, third team captain; Mrs. J. L. Brown, assistant.

First Team Captains.

Army and Navy, Mrs. Frederick G. Crisp; Chevy Chase, Mrs. L. B. Platt, represented by Mrs. Bishop P. Hill; Columbia, Mrs. J. A. Marr and Mrs. Norman E. Frost; Congressional, Mrs. Roland Mackenzie; Indian Springs, Mrs. J. H. Bullock; Kenwood, Mrs. Theo. Lonnequest; Manor, Mrs. L. G. Pray, represented by Mrs. T. N. Beavers; Woodmont, Miss Bertha Israel.

Second Team Captains.

Army and Navy, Mrs. Ford; Beaver Dam, Mrs. A. W. Tucker; Chevy Chase, Mrs. Wm. Less; Congressional, Mrs. C. T. Penn; Columbia, Mrs. E. M. Amick; Kenwood, Mrs. R. P. Huff; Washington, Mrs. F. P. Nesbit.

Third Team Captains.

Army and Navy, Mrs. Buck; Beaver Dam, Mrs. Max Taylor; Chevy Chase, Mrs. Oscar Coolican; Columbia, Mrs. C. D. Bills; Congressional, Mrs. O. G. Bible; Kenwood, Mrs. R. E. Joyce; Manor, Mrs. O. E. Pugh; Woodmont, Mrs. Arthur Stephens.

New Government League.

Formation of an unlimited Government baseball league for players not quite of top-notch talent will be undertaken tonight at a meeting to be held at the Sport Center, Eighth and D streets northwest at 7:30. Players not playing with the first and second teams of their departments will comprise the teams in the circuit. The winner of the loop will be given a trophy and gold baseballs.

Teams especially urged to enter are G. P. O., G. A. O., Treasury, Procurement Division, Disbursing Division, Census Bureau, Investigation, Shipping Board, Commerce, Interior and Labor.

Plaza Players Report.

The following players are asked to report with the Plaza Wine & Liquor Store baseball team for practice, Sunday, March 22: Joe Di Nenna, Eddy, Pearson, Kramer, Tortorice, Gattematta, Baker, Boggs, Bell, Rosenberg, Rhodes, Lisensky, Miller, Newman, Liggett, Anderson, Lassisse, Phillips, Lee Kotog, Chewning, Mackie and Wilner. Those players call Phil Sykes, Potomac 0639, between 5 and 6:30 p. m.

Want Insect Games.

The Trojans are seeking games with insect teams. Call Decatur 0354, or North 4300.

T. N. T. Wins Title.

Sandlot Games Top Increase In Crowds

632,350 Saw Battles Last Year; Golf Players Rise 73,584.

By John R. Vosburgh.

AMATEUR sports in Washington shot ahead fast enough last year to make 1934 look like a Model "T" Ford traveling in low gear on three cylinders. The sudden advance, noticeable in baseball, golf and tennis, was revealed yesterday when the National Capital Parks Association released its 1935 report.

Sandlot baseball, fathered by the Washington Post Sandlot Association, set a startling pace. An increase of 382,814 spectators of sandlot games was disclosed as compared with 1934.

The number of golfers increased 73,584. Tennis showed an increase of 34,334 players. The statistics, of course, do not refer to the number of individuals in the particular sport, but to the number of times the golf courses or tennis courts were used.

The figures, fresh from C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of the National Capital Parks, who had just approved the report, showed 632,350 fans saw sandlot baseball games last year in contrast to 367,100 in 1934. Superintendent Finnan was voluble in expressing the belief that The Post Association has been a major cause in bringing about this increase of close to 100 per cent.

Population Increase.

Finnan gave as additional reasons the fact that the population here last year was greater than in 1934 and also that the shortening of working hours gave additional leisure time for the fans to see ball games.

The number of sandlot players increased from 68,049 to 68,541. Nearly half of the sandlot fans were drawn to the Ellipse diamonds, most popular of the association's 32 playing fields. A total of 304,800 fans saw games on the Ellipse where such stars as Lefty Stevens, Pepco Barry, Earl Clark, Huck Wynne and Lefty Sullivan performed. Of the 632,000 fans, 101,000 attended colored games.

The Monument Grounds were used by teams virtually as much as the Ellipse, but failed to draw anything like the battles of the Ellipse. Spectators on the Monument Grounds numbered 82,400, with West Potomac third in popularity where 34,000 fans witnessed the ball tossers and 27,000 more at Rock Creek.

The number of golfers using East Potomac, West Potomac, Rock Creek and Anacostia courses surpassed all previous records. In 1934 only 337,905 rounds were played, as compared with 411,489 last year.

Boost in Tennis.

Although tennis showed a comfortable increase—from 249,636 to 283,970—the mark set did not equal the figures of 1932 and 1933 when the courts were used 306,000 times. The result, nevertheless, was encouraging. Free courts naturally outdrew the pay courts, 184,000 to 117,000 with the Monument courts setting the pace with 50,000 players.

The baseball figures are particularly notable in view of the lengthy period a number of diamonds were used as a camp site for a Boy Scout jamboree, thereby preventing sandlot games.

Other figures of interest included the increase in the demand for softball diamonds, the association opening ten during the season. Seventeen tennis courts were cut out.

The short football season drew 4,760 players and 47,400 spectators. Horse-shoe pitching attracted 4,600 players and 7,100 fans. Ice skating drew 90,000 winter sport addicts to the Lincoln Memorial pool ice and 96,000 to the Reservoir rink. The figures, of course, do not include January and February of this year.

Heurich Flashes Win.

The Heurich Flashes gave the Maccabees a 43-25 beating last night in a Community Center game at Gordon Junior High School.

Georgetown Books Penn Eleven for 1937 Philadelphia Game

Last Battle Was Played In 1924

Hoyas to Be Ready for Bigger Foes in Two Years, Is Belief.

GEORGETOWN'S football renaissance, which was undertaken by youthful Jack Hagerty and an equally youthful staff of assistants two years ago, assumed a more definite form yesterday when H. Gabriel Murphy, graduate manager of athletics, announced that the Hoyas would meet the University of Pennsylvania on October 23, 1937 in Philadelphia.

The agreement between the schools calls for only one game, Murphy said, but he indicated that the door is open for future grid battles between the two schools. Next year's game will be the first between the two since 1924 when Penn drop-kicked its way to a 3-to-0 victory over the Hilltoppers before a throng of 45,000 at Franklin Field.

Murphy said negotiations virtually have been completed for games with opponents of similar caliber in 1937 but that he is unable to announce them until dates have been definitely decided. There will be four games with major opponents and four with smaller teams which are being scheduled for breathers between important contests.

Big Games in Capital.

Murphy said several of the bigger games would be played in Washington, inasmuch as he felt that the Hoyas will have regained enough of their lost power, prestige and color by '37 to win the support of District fans.

That the Hilltoppers will place a team of big league ability on the field this autumn is being freely predicted by Georgetown supporters, although all speak without consulting Hagerty, who is not as confident that his efforts will result in grade A eleven.

Hagerty feels that the team is still one year away from the heights occupied by the elevens developed during Lou Little's regime. The complexion of this autumn's schedule—and the vigorous plans being made for 1937—conclusively demonstrate that Georgetown officials are in accord with Hagerty's views and are co-operating with him to the fullest.

Fla. Golf Medal To Marion Miley

Jungle Country Club, St. Petersburg, Fla., March 16 (AP).—Marion Miley, trans-Mississippi woman's champion, of Lexington, Ky., won medalist honors in the first annual St. Petersburg women's invitation golf tournament here with a 76, 7 over men's par.

Three strokes behind Miss Miley and the only other entrant in the field of 48 women to better 80 was Mrs. Mark McGarry, New York and St. Petersburg, with a 79.

Mrs. Marion Turpie Lake, New York, former Southern champion, drew up in third place with an 81, and Jean Bauer, Providence, R. I., medalist in the women's national tournament last year, had an 82.

Galiano, Dean Battle Way To Draw

By Bill McCormick.

PETE GALIANO, Italian-American featherweight from Baltimore, and Johnny Dean, of Charlotte, N. C., battled to a savage draw in the best of three eight-round cofeatures that headed the "Anniversary" bill of boxing at Turner's Arena last night. The card, which marked the first anniversary of the ring alliance of Promoter Joe Turner and Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, was witnessed by a goodly turnout of 1,600.

Galiano and Dean, who had worked to a six-round preliminary draw exactly one week before, went through almost identical motions last night. Johnny swung wildly and willingly from bell to bell as Pete rammed home straight and more effective, if less numerous, punches continually.

Neither boxer was seriously injured during the course of the contest, despite the high, wide and handsome action that marked the engagement. At the finish, this writer would have taken oath that Galiano had earned the official award, but a careful check of this paper's scoresheet showed that on the numerical method of reckoning in vogue in the District, the bout could be declared nothing but a stalemate.

Both Judges Bob Eller and Denny Hughes and Referee Muggsy Morris voted the affair a draw, making the first unanimous draw decision ever rendered in the Capital.

Cary Wright, rejuvenated Washington heavyweight, won a sixth-round technical knockout from Leroy Zinkham, of Baltimore, in the first of the cofeatures scheduled for eight rounds.

Bobby Dean, flashy Philadelphia southpaw, administered a neat and scientific spanking to Eddie Burl, veteran Florida featherweight, in a lop-sided six-round preliminary. Dean dropped Eddie at the bell, ending the second but was unable to sweep the venerable little gamecock off his feet thereafter, despite the terrific beating he gave Burl to win a unanimous decision.

Joe Doty, of Washington, won a unanimous decision from Lou De Mario, of Baltimore, in a four-round lightweight curtain-raiser.

at the game as did Mr. Rockefeller those first few weeks. I would get there promptly at 8 o'clock, and not many mornings did I get away before 10 or 11. He took it just as seriously as he did his work, and worked at it just as studiously.

And he believed in getting his money's worth. I charged him the regular fee of $5 an hour—which was pretty steep in those days—and he saw to it that he got his full $5 worth. For example, when he was on the practice tee he didn't like to stand idle while one caddy returned the balls he had hit. So he would always bring six, seven and eight caddies to the tee, and have them returning the balls in relays. And he always had a caddy kneeling down forming the little sand tees we used in those days. As a result, there was always a ball there ready for him to hit.

I'll never forget the morning he decided to play with Mrs. Rockefeller and surprise her. When she came to the first tee with her sister, Miss Spellman, he was there and said casually:

"I think I'll play with you this morning. It looks as if it might be a nice game."

Didn't Need Lessons.

Mrs. Rockefeller laughed and said:

"Why, John, golf isn't a game you can just start playing. You have to have lessons. You'll have to have Mr. Mitchell here teach you."

"I don't think I need any lessons," he answered. "You drive, and then I'll show you."

Mrs. Rockefeller hit her drive and then Mr. Rockefeller stepped up and hit a nice drive down the middle. Mrs. Rockefeller's amazement was genuine. And then I remember her turning to him and saying:

"John, I might have known it. You always do things better and more easily than anyone else."

As she said this, Mr. Rockefeller turned his head to me and winked, and then shook his head as if to say, "Don't you ever tell her." And I never did. And I don't think she ever found out that he had had a lesson.

Shame, Shame, Shame!

Mr. Rockefeller always played played quietly, and when he would make a bad shot always said the same thing. I can see him now, head bowed, saying:

"Shame, shame, shame!"

He always said it three times. He had one little peculiarity I remember. Whenever he would miss a putt he would call the caddy to bring him some balls and he would putt until he made it. Sometimes the putt would be a long one, 15 or 20 feet, and he would putt 10 or 15 minutes before making it. But he would never stop until he did, no matter if it took him three hours to play nine holes.

Mr. Rockefeller never walked around the golf course. He was in his sixties then, and in good health, but he didn't believe in walking from shot to shot. As soon as he would hit the ball a caddy would bring his bicycle. He would get on the bicycle, tuck his legs up on the frame, and the caddy would push him along. And he always insisted on an umbrella. While he stood about waiting for his companions to shoot, a caddy would hold a big umbrella over his head.

Only One Economy.

Mr. Rockefeller's only golf economy was in the matter of balls. That was in the day of the old gutta percha ball, and they cost quite a bit. And they didn't wear very well. Sometimes half the paint would fly off after one shot. He would buy lots of clubs and things, but he was thrifty about balls.

I remember one time we were playing along and he drove a brand-new ball into the rough. After we had searched for it for more than ten minutes, Mr. Rockefeller turned to his caddy and asked:

"Boy, what do Mr. Clay and Dr. Bigger (two of his golf partners) do when they knock a ball in here?"

"They look for it a minute or two," answered the caddy, "and then they drop a new one out here in the fairway and go on."

"Huh," Mr. Rockefeller said as he resumed poking in the grass for the ball, "they must have barrels of money."

"Dutch" Bergman, Catholic University football coach, lectures the prospective first string linemen of his 1937 team on the evils of loafing in actual combat, but the husky gentlemen seem to regard his admonitions lightly. In the usual order are Joe Yanchulis, all-District center; Vic Sochon, guard; Joe Anthonavage, all-District guard; Leo Katalinas, tackle; Zeke Brown (No. 57), end, and Ed Clements, tackle. On Bergman's left is Capt. Hermie Schmarr, end.

Sarazen and Reynolds in Golf Win

By the Associated Press.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., March 16. Victors in a thrilling 39-hole battle with Henry Picard and Jack Cummins, the daring team of Gene Sarazen and Mally Reynolds today won the second annual National Amateur-Professional Best Ball Golf tournament.

Two poor drives on the third extra hole cost Picard. Hershey, Pa., professional, and Cummins, New York amateur, the match after they had waged a sensational uphill fight.

Sarazen, former holder of both the American and British Open crowns, and Reynolds, hard-driving Jacksonville amateur, sent their tee shots straight down the fairway. A good second and two putts gave Reynolds a par 4, and Sarazen's long putt for a birdie failed.

Shots Make Poor Landings.

Picard's tee shot landed in a pond, while Cummins was in the rough. Both recovered nicely, but missed desperate putts for the par which would have carried the match to additional extra holes.

Both sides were nine strokes under par 144 for the regular 36-hole distance.

Three down at the turn on the afternoon round, Picard and Cummins won the eleventh in par 4 figures.

G. W. High Squad In Outdoor Drill

Special Dispatch to the Post.

Alexandria, Va., March 16.—George Washington High School's baseball team, weather permitting, holds its first outdoor drill tomorrow afternoon at Baggett's Stadium. The Presidents have a promising squad of 20 men with four veterans, Paul Shu, catcher; Lee Fones, shortstop; Stanley Heflin, first baseman, and John Nugent, center field.

Givens has booked games with Western, Roosevelt, Eastern, Washington and Lee, Fredericksburg, Mount Rainier, and Maryland Freshmen.

The St. Mary's Celtics baseball team will practice at Baggetts Sunday afternoon at 1:30 p. m.

Eastern High School's basketball team invades the Armory Hall here Wednesday night for a game with the Columbia Firemen at 8:15 p. m.

Play in the Junior League will be resumed tomorrow night in the Armory Hall at 7 p. m., with the Flashes and Sparrows mixing. Alexandria Light Infantry meets Lee-Jackson High at Armory Hall after the juniors collide.

At the Post . . .

Selections at Tropical Park.

Dear Al:

The mud came up yesterday at Tropical and that fact probably balked many of the Beat-Bill-Bennings contestants. However, I managed to stagger three winners out of the program and probably will have some of the folks topped for a change. I have not had a chance to get at the mail pile as yet. As the contest now stands, V. L. Brown in leading for the grand award of two badges to the Bowie meeting and M. L. Morris is the present runner-up for the one badge to Bowie, the second prize. Each has five winners to his credit but Brown is ahead, $72.80 to $67.50, on the total mutuel. Due to a mistake, the contest slip was not printed in yesterday morning's paper but many sent in their selections and they were accepted. On account of out-of-town mail, Saturday's daily prize winner of two day passes to Bowie will not be announced until tomorrow morning. In the meanwhile, if you haven't tried your luck and skill in this contest, do so. It is not a day-to-day competition. The person who picks the most winners for a single day gets the grand prize. Read the rules and get them in early, folks.

BILL.

First race—Dixie Princess is always a bridesmaid, but seldom a bride as far as winning races is concerned. She picks up a feather today and runs over a track she likes. If she fails she should start pulling a wagon. St. Nick and Gullder to take care of the others.

Second race—Scotch Queen is assigned light weight and a good rider in Fallon and I'm going to string along. Dornoch will appreciate the off-going and will be dangerous. Screen is a possible surprise.

Third race—Jack Snipe and Inflame should battle it out for the chief award in this company. Both are in fit hands and can make them. Edri will carry only 104 pounds and is likely to be a factor.

Fourth race—Maestrom is a standout in this company and any price will be a good one. Litzenberger will do the saddle hustling. Lovely Day and Grey Shot for the place and show.

Fifth race—Sir Quest, with Arcaro in the saddle, seems to have a class edge on this group. Phildis and Below Zero for the other money positions.

Sixth race—Fervid, despite top weight, probably will do a lot of running on the slow track. Wright is scheduled for the riding assignment. Mixed Party and Creole Bird to fight it out if the top one makes mistakes.

Seventh race—Hogan's Fox will like conditions in this race, but must run to best form. Col. Greene and Late Date will do the chief chasing.

Best bet—Maestrom.

'Grid Twins' Hold Key To C. U.'s 1936 Hopes

By Lewis F. Atchison.

YOU'RE going to hear a lot about Catholic University's "Gold-dust Twins" next football season, and if 1935 was a criterion of their value it'll be good news for Cardinal supporters and the reverse for their opponents. The twins are "Irish" Carroll, as sweet a halfback as ever sported the Cardinal and Black, and "Spec" Foley, former Tech High School star, who is destined to be the regular quarterback for the next two seasons.

"Things aren't as rosy out here as everybody seems to believe," Coach Dutch Bergman said yesterday. "We have problems to solve just like any other team, and if we don't get the right answers there's gonna be trouble.

"But I don't think we're going to have to worry about punting with Foley in there, or about ball-carrying as long as Carroll is ready. Put the two together and I think we'll have a smart combination. You might call 'em the 'Gold-dust Twins,' that's how important they are to me. Believe they're real gold-dust, too. I wouldn't feel any better if an old, grizzly '49 dropped a bag of gold nuggets in my lap."

To Miss Draginnis.

Bergman realizes he is going to miss Pete Draginnis, who was just coming into full bloom as a major-league quarterback. Pete's work in the first half of the Orange Bowl game, which really decided the issue that balmy afternoon, was above reproach. If Catholic had him back next season it would be a terrific burden off Bergman's mind.

But the gray fox thinks Foley will develop rapidly this season, after breaking in last year, and that added punting ability won't hurt him any. Foley's long distance kicking was an important factor in Catholic's sensational victory over Detroit. One of his punts sailed 77 yards. Thus, Bergman figures that when some foe stops the running attack, if Carroll gets bottled up, and a pass is too dangerous, Foley can kick out of danger.

Carroll has gained only one pound since last autumn, but he probably will put on more weight during the summer months and he is expected to weigh between 170 and 175 when the curtain rolls back next October. He goes 168-pounds right now. Foley will hit about 165 pounds, which should be his maximum. He's gained 20 pounds since enrolling at Catholic, and weights 161.

Others in Backfield.

Bergman figures Carroll's added experience, his natural speed and football intuicity, plus added heft, will make him a much respected figure in the backfield next season. Then add Bob Makofske, a hard-hitting fullback, and Bill Adamaitis, forward passer par excellence to that duo and it spells dynamite.

The Cards' big problem is in the line, where Ed Karpowich, tackle; Bill Lajousky, guard, and George Mulligan, end, must be replaced. Vic Sochon, Leo Katalinas and Zeke Brown are destined to get the vacant positions unless they show a complete reversal of form when the regular season gets under way.

Brownell, Minnix Gain Squash Final

A pair of upsets marked the semi-final round of the first annual District A. A. U. squash racquet championships held last night on the Y. M. C. A. courts. E. B. (Buzz) Brownell, former Harvard star, eliminated the top-seeded James Gibson, of the Racquet Club, in five hard-fought games, 3 to 2. A capacity gallery watched the matches.

In the other battle, A. C. Minnix, representing the Y. M. C. A., as was Brownell, crushed Hugh Lynch, of the Edgemoor Club, 3 to 0. Lynch, though unseeded, had been favored to defeat the third-seeded Minnix on the basis of his upset of Chester T. Lane, No. 2 seeded entrant, in the quarter-finals.

In only one game did Lynch, former Princeton tennis captain, threaten Minnix, who won by scores of 15-5, 16-3 and 15-8.

The final will be held Saturday at 2:30 p. m., with Lynch and Gibson preceding the title tilt with a match for third place at 2 p. m.

Merrick Club Tourney Will Open Tomorrow

The parochial basketball tournament arranged by the Merrick Boys' Club will start at the club's gymnasium, 608 Massachusetts avenue northeast, at 8 p. m. tomorrow. The tournament is sponsored by George Shea, who will present a cup to the winner.

Approximately 15 unlimited teams will compete. Babe Gearty, one of the athletic directors at the club and a regularly appointed A. A. U. basketball official, will handle the games. Tom Gearty, another Catholic University athletic star, will have charge of the details of the tournament. Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, director of the budget of the District, will toss out the first ball.

Billy Houghton to Aid Al at Virginia Beach

Billy Houghton, brother of the more famous Al Houghton, former Washington golf professional, will take over the job as assistant pro at Virginia Beach, Va., on April 1, it was learned yesterday.

Attains National Honor.

Dane Wallace, ace marksman of the George Washington University rifle team, recently placed second in the national intercollegiate individual rifle championships, posting a score of 569 hits in 600 attempts. The title was won by a member of the Iowa State University team. Wallace, a former Western High rifleman, has an average of 287 in the intercollegiate team championships.

D. C. Women's Golf Series Expanded

EXPANDING the competition to include third teams, those in charge of the interclub women's golf series met yesterday at the Kennedy-Warren at 2 p. m. and named the captains who will head the forces of their particular clubs. Mrs. Noble J. Waldron, acting District team captain, presided in the absence of Mrs. B. C. Hartig. All District captains and club captains were invited.

It was voted to open the team matches April 21, continuing to June 16. The first teams will meet at Columbia, the second at Congressional and the third at Woodmont. Average handicap per team will be 53.66 for the first teams, 84.85 for the second team and 131.63 for No. 3s. The individual average will be 9 strokes for first-team players, 14 for the second-teamers, and 22 for the third-team players. Chevy Chase won the first-team award last year and Columbia the second-team title.

Those attending were President Mrs. R. W. Payne; Mrs. Theo Peyser, treasurer; Mrs. J. W. Beller, assistant intercity team captain; Mrs. J. F. Dowdall, tournament chairman; Mrs. E. A. Rule, second team captain; Mrs. E. M. Amick, assistant team captain; Mrs. Frank Kramer, third team captain; Mrs. J. L. Brown, assistant.

First Team Captains.

Army and Navy, Mrs. Frederick G. Crisp; Chevy Chase, Mrs. L. B. Platt, represented by Mrs. Bishop P. Hill; Columbia, Mrs. J. A. Marr and Mrs. Norman B. Frost; Congressional, Mrs. Roland Mackenzie; Indian Springs, Mrs. J. H. Bullock; Kenwood, Mrs. Theo. Lonnequest; Manor, Mrs. L. G. Pray, represented by Mrs. T. N. Beavers; Woodmont, Miss Bertha Israel.

Second Team Captains.

Army and Navy, Mrs. Ford; Beaver Dam, Mrs. A. W. Tucker; Chevy Chase, Mrs. Wm. Lees; Congressional, Mrs. C. T. Fenn; Columbia, Mrs. E. M. Amick; Kenwood, Mrs. R. P. Huff; Washington, Mrs. F. F. Nesbit.

Third Team Captains.

Army and Navy, Mrs. Buck; Beaver Dam, Mrs. Max Taylor; Chevy Chase, Mrs. Oscar Coolican; Columbia, Mrs. C. D. Bills; Congressional, Mrs. O. G. Eible; Kenwood, Mrs. R. E. Joyce; Manor, Mrs. G. E. Pugh; Woodmont, Mrs. Arthur Stephens.

New Government League.

Formation of an unlimited Government baseball league for players not quite of top-notch talent will be undertaken tonight at a meeting to be held at the Sport Center, Eighth and D streets northwest at 7:30. Players not playing with the first and second teams of their departments will comprise the teams in the circuit. The winner of the loop will be given a trophy and gold baseballs.

Teams especially urged to enter are G. P. O., G. A. O., Treasury, Procurement Division, Disbursing Division, Census Bureau, Investigation, Shipping Board, Commerce, Interior and Labor.

Plaza Players Report.

The following players are asked to report with the Plaza Wine & Liquor Store baseball team for practice, Sunday, March 22: Joe Di Nenna, Eddy, Pearson, Kramer, Tortorice, Gattematta, Baker, Boggs, Bell, Rosenberg, Rhodes, Lisensky, Miller, Newman, Liggett, Anderson, Lassisse, Phillips, Lee Kotog, Chewning, Mackie and Wilner. Those players call Phil Sykes, Potomac 0639, between 5 and 6:30 p. m.

Want Insect Games.

The Trojans are seeking games with insect teams. Call Decatur 0354, or North 4300.

Sandlot Games Top Increase In Crowds

632,350 Saw Battles Last Year; Golf Players Rise 73,584.

By John R. Vosburgh.

AMATEUR sports in Washington shot ahead fast enough last year to make 1934 look like a Model "T" Ford traveling in low gear on three cylinders. The sudden advance, noticeable in baseball, golf and tennis, was revealed yesterday when the National Capital Parks Association released its 1935 report.

Sandlot baseball, fathered by the Washington Post Sandlot Association, set a startling pace. An increase of 382,814 spectators of sandlot games was disclosed as compared with 1934.

The number of golfers increased 73,584. Tennis showed an increase of 34,334 players. The statistics, of course, do not refer to the number of individuals in the particular sport, but to the number of times the golf courses or tennis courts were used.

The figures, fresh from C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of the National Capital Parks, who had just approved the report, showed 632,350 fans saw sandlot baseball games last year in contrast to 367,100 in 1934. Superintendent Finnan was voluble in expressing the belief that The Post Association has been a major cause in bringing about this increase of close to 100 per cent.

Population Increase.

Finnan gave as additional reasons the fact that the population here last year was greater than in 1934 and also that the shortening of working hours gave additional leisure time for the fans to see ball games.

The number of sandlot players increased from 68,049 to 68,541. Nearly half of the sandlot fans were drawn to the Ellipse diamonds, most popular of the association's 32 playing fields. A total of 304,800 fans saw games on the Ellipse where such stars as Lefty Stevens, Pepco Barry, Earl Clark, Huck Wynne and Lefty Sullivan performed. Of the 632,000 fans, 101,000 attended colored games.

The Monument Grounds were used by teams virtually as much as the Ellipse, but failed to draw anything like the battles of the Ellipse. Spectators on the Monument Grounds numbered 82,400, with West Potomac third in popularity where 34,000 fans witnessed the ball tossers and 27,000 more at Rock Creek.

The number of golfers using East Potomac, West Potomac, Rock Creek and Anacostia courses surpassed all previous records. In 1934 only 337,905 rounds were played, as compared with 411,489 last year.

Boost in Tennis.

Although tennis showed a comfortable increase—from 249,636 to 283,970—the mark set did not equal the figures of 1932 and 1933 when the courts were used 306,000 times. The result, nevertheless, was encouraging. Free courts naturally outdrew the pay courts, 164,000 to 117,000 with the Monument courts setting the pace with 50,000 players.

The baseball figures are particularly notable in view of the lengthy period a number of diamonds were used as a camp site for a Boy Scout jamboree, thereby preventing sandlot games.

Other figures of interest included the increase in the demand for softball diamonds, the association opening ten during the season. Seventeen tennis courts were cut out.

The short football season drew 4,760 players and 47,400 spectators. Horse-shoe pitching attracted 4,600 players and 7,100 fans. Ice skating drew 90,000 winter sport addicts to the Lincoln Memorial pool ice and 96,000 to the Reservoir rink. The figures, of course, do not include January and February of this year.

Vote Boy Triumphs at Tropical

Brown Twig's Late Bid Is Futile

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., March 16.—Showers that began falling yesterday afternoon left the local racing strip sloppy for today's sport, but there was a fairly hard bottom beneath the watery surface. The going just suited Vote Boy, a 4-year-old gelding by Torchilla—Voterina, which carried the silks of T. F. Swords to a driving triumph in the featured Pahokee Handicap of 6 furlongs.

Mrs. R. H. Heighe's Brown Twig, favorite in the field of six, came within a half length of catching the winner while taking the place by eight lengths from E. R. Bradley's slow-beginning Bird Flower. Vote Boy, paying $9.20 for $2, negotiated the distance in 1:12 flat under Eddie Arcaro's strong handling.

The race became a two-horse affair a few yards after the start. Vote Boy, running to top form, sprinted to the front, with Brown Twig daylight behind. Wise Prince, making his seasonal bow, showed a flash of speed for 3 furlongs, after which he began dropping back. Bird Flower moved up fast from last place at the break and was third at the first turn.

Vote Boy increased his advantage around the bend and turned for home with apparently nothing to fear. However, Johnny Longden brought Brown Twig up on the inside of the winner in the last sixteenth and had Vote Boy "straight as a string" passing the judges. Bird Flower was an easy third.

BLAKEEN	(Kastner)	100	7	1	4ʰ	5¹	6½	7⁴		2.35
MISS ALINE	(Merritt)	105	7	3	3ʰ	7	8	8		29.20

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHYNO, $6.60, $4.20, $2.90; BLOND JESTER, $7.90, $4.90; SAY DO, $6.90.

SHYNO, favoring the footing, was rushed hard to take command in the opening furlong, drew clear when leaving the back stretch and held away for the balance of the trip. BLOND JESTER gained stoutly after the first furlong to reach a contending position, rallied to strong pressure, but could not menace the winner. SAY DO raced in the first flight from the beginning and held on with good courage in the closing drive.

SECOND RACE—Four furlongs; claiming. Purse, $700. For 2-year-old colts and geldings; maidens. Went to post at 2:52. Off at 2:54. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, Robert W. Collins' b. c. (2); by Lee O. Colner—Lady of Lynn. Trained by Robert W. Collins. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:48 3-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	Start	¼	Stretch	Finish	Straight
BARON LYNN	(Pollard)	118	1	1	2ʰ	2¹	1¹½	$12.40
DARK FRIEND	(Arcaro)	118	8	3	1¹	1ʰ	2²	1.20
LEGION	(Coucci)	115	7	2	3¹½	3¹	3²	2.55
JAY BEE JAY	(Malley)	112	2	7	4ʰ	4²	4⁷	6.70

BRUSH HANDLE	(Merritt)	112	4	8	8½	8²	8⁴	11.55
OVERTRICK	(Wholey)	111	6	5	9	9	9	33.55

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BARON LYNN, $26.80, $9.80, $4.10; DARK FRIEND, $3.10, $2.30; LEGION, $2.80.

BARON LYNN, racing stoutly while in near attendance of the pacemaker, rallied willingly when reaching the home stretch, wore DARK FRIEND down inside the closing furlong and came out slowly at the close. DARK FRIEND was hurried to the front, saved ground all the way, but finished in the deeper footing on the inside and weakened under a stout drive. LEGION followed within striking distance of the leaders, but could not menace when the real test came.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs; claiming. Purse, $700. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 3:23. Off at 3:24½. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Winner, Miss Lillian C. White's ch. g. (4); by Epinard—Beautiful Lady. Trained by J. Gorga. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $50. Time, 1:12.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight

MINTON	(Wright)	114	7	9	10	10	9¹	10		1.90

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EPIBEAU, $19.10, $11.40, $6.30; PORTDEN, $6.50, $4.70; SAGE GIRL, $9.20.

EPIBEAU, going in his best form and having more speed than usual, opened up a safe lead after taking command in the opening furlong, saved ground and was never in danger. PORTDEN came through on the inside of MISS PURRAY midway of the turn, rallied nicely, but could not menace the winner. SAGE GIRL held a forward position from the beginning, swung to the outside and finished with good courage.

FOURTH RACE—One mile; claiming. Purse, $700; 3-year-olds. Went to post at 3:52. Off at 3:52½. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, B. G. Guth's ch. g. (3); by Happy Argo—Dove. Trained by Hirsch Jacobs. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:41 1-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight
PHRIXUS	(I.Hanford)	107	8	5	2¹	2¹½	2ʰ	1²		$4.80

LOLLIES	(Merritt)	108	5	6	9	9	9	9		9.25

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PHRIXUS, $11.60, $4.70, $3.90; TRAGEDIAN, $5.10, $4.70; CHRYSEIS, $5.80.

PHRIXUS, hustled into a forward position going to the first turn, raced close to the pacemaker until reaching the final bend, took command when straightened into the home stretch and drew out under stout urging. TRAGEDIAN saved ground wherever possible and closed gamely when shaken up. CHRYSEIS showed good speed while setting the pace, but weakened when forced to a drive in the last quarter mile.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Pahokee Handicap. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 4:27. Off at 4:29½. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, Thomas F. Sword's b. g. (4); by Torchilla—Voterina. Trained by George Mayberry. Value to winner, $725; second, $175; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 1:12.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight
VOTE BOY	(Arcaro)	112	6	2	1¹½	1¹½	1²	1½		$3.60
BROWN TWIG	(Longden)	111	5	1	2ʰ	2²	2²	2¹		2.60
BIRD FLOWER	(J.Renick)	108	1	6	5¹½	3¹	3²	3⁴		11.20
WISE PRINCE	(Rainey)	116	4	3	3¹	4½	6	4¹½		4.00
SPEED	(Fallon)	95	3	4	6	6	4¹	5⁵		20.90
CHANCE RAY	(Malley)	114	2	5	4ʰ	5ʰ	5½	6		3.20

Two-dollar mutuels paid—VOTE BOY, $9.20, $4.10, $3.20; BROWN TWIG, $3.00, $2.50; BIRD FLOWER, $3.40.

VOTE BOY, at home in the going, sprinted into a clear lead midway of the back stretch, responded gamely when put to a drive and outstayed BROWN TWIG under severe urging. BROWN TWIG, forcing a fast pace from the start, was blocked badly while attempting to drive through on the inside of the winner at the stretch turn, came again after obtaining racing room and was going much the fastest at the end. BIRD FLOWER was outrun by the first two from the beginning, but was easily best of the others.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles; claiming. Purse, $700. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 5:03. Off at 5:03½. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Winner, Mrs. Kirby Ramsey's b. m. (5); by Swift and Sure—Bourse. Trained by Kirby Ramsey. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:48.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight
CELIBA	(Fallon)	105	3	3	4²	3¹	2ⁿᵏ	1¹	1²½	$1.50
POLISHER	(Malley)	115	1	1	1ʰ	1½	1½	2ᵉ	2⁴	3.65
GALLIC	(Dunbar)	110	6	4	2¹½	2ʰ	3²	3ʰ	3³	1.60
TEN LAW	(Garner)	114	2	2	3²	4ʰ	4ʰ	4ʰ	4⁶	13.20
CHAUMONT	(Rosen)	115	4	5	5	5	5	5	5	19.35

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CELIBA, $5.00, $3.00, $2.20; POLISHER, $4.20, $2.40; GALLIC, $2.20.

CELIBA, saved off the pace until straightened on the back stretch, went through on the inside when going to the leaders, displaced POLISHER and drew out at will. POLISHER raced GALLIC into submission, but was unable to withstand the winner when vigorously urged. GALLIC was rushed hard to force the pace and had nothing left when called on.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles; claiming. Purse, $700. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 5:37. Off at 5:38½. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, E. A. McCann's b. g. (5); by Durbar II—Mary Maud. Trained by H. L. Cornwell. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:55.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight
BENARES	(May)	116	5	1	1¹½	1¹½	1¹	1¹	1³	$1.70
CANIMAR	(Schraidenbach)	110	4	5	5	2ʰ	2¹½	2²	2⁵	17.80
LONE HAND	(I.Hanford)	111	1	2	2¹½	3ʰ	3²	3²	3⁵	1.75
HOME WORK	(Kastner)	109	3	4	3ʰ	5	5	5	4⁵	3.80
PALASA	(J.Renick)	108	2	3	4ʰ	4¹	4²	4½	5	7.05

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BENARES, $5.40, $4.10, $2.60; CANIMAR, $10.80, $3.40; LONE HAND, $2.30.

BENARES, favored by intelligent handling, assumed command immediately, raced under slight reserve until reaching the final bend, responded nicely when shaken up and then held on strongly to stall off CANIMAR. Latter moved into contention readily after being straightened into the back stretch, secured racing room on the inside to reach the pacemaker, then closed determinedly in the last quarter mile. LONE HAND, eased back of the pacemaker after being steered wide at the first turn, went prominently until reaching the final turn, then tired in the closing drive.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles; claiming. Purse, $700. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 6:13. Off at 6:13½. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Winner, Max Hirsch's ch. g. (4); by American Flag—Hi Gloss. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:47.

TUMBLING GLASS	(Stafford)	110	7	5	6²	6⁴	6ʰ	7	7	38.30

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAG OF WAR, $5.30, $3.70, $3.00; PROHIBITION, $5.60, $3.70; PARADE ON, $4.40.

FLAG OF WAR opened up a long lead when reaching the back stretch, saved ground all the way and held sway until the close. PROHIBITION, rated for the first 6 furlongs, moved up strongly when leaving the back stretch and finished with good speed. PARADE ON was kept under pressure from the beginning, saved ground and held on well.

Gymnasts Will Stage Exhibition at Howard

The Springfield College gymnastic team has arranged to stage an exhibition Saturday night in the gymnasium at Howard University, under direction of Leslie L. Judd. The team was obtained by the physical education forum, a Howard organization composed of students majoring in physical education. The director was formerly a member of the famous Australian Olympic gymnastic team.

A feature of the program will be a scene depicting statuary of youth, in which eight men assume poses giving phases of athletic life in artistic interpretation. Another feature will consist of the swinging of lighted Indian clubs in a darkened gymnasium. Proceeds will be used for a scholarship fund.

Vote Boy Triumphs at Tropical

Brown Twig's Late Bid Is Futile

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., March 16.—Showers that began falling yesterday afternoon left the local racing strip sloppy for today's sport, but there was a fairly hard bottom beneath the watery surface. The going just suited Vote Boy, a 4-year-old gelding by Torchilla—Voterina, which carried the silks of T. F. Swords to a driving triumph in the featured Pahokee Handicap of 6 furlongs.

Mrs. R. H. Heighe's Brown Twig, favorite in the field of six, came within a half length of catching the winner while taking the place by eight lengths from E. R. Bradley's slow-beginning Bird Flower. Vote Boy, paying $9.20 for $2, negotiated the distance in 1:12 flat under Eddie Arcaro's strong handling.

The race became a two-horse affair a few yards after the start. Vote Boy, running to top form, sprinted to the front, with Brown Twig daylight behind. Wise Prince, making his seasonal bow, showed a flash of speed for 3 furlongs, after which he began dropping back. Bird Flower moved up fast from last place at the break and was third at the first turn.

Vote Boy increased his advantage around the bend and turned for home with apparently nothing to fear. However, Johnny Longden brought Brown Twig up on the inside of the winner in the last sixteenth and had Vote Boy "straight as a string" passing the judges. Bird Flower was an easy third.

MISS ALINE	(Merritt)	105	7	2	3h	8	8	8	39.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHYNO, $6.60, $4.20, $2.90; BLOND JESTER, $7.90, $4.90; SAY DO, $6.90.

SHYNO, favoring the footing, was rushed hard to take command in the opening furlong, drew clear when leaving the back stretch and held away for the balance of the trip. BLOND JESTER gained stoutly after the first furlong to reach a contending position, rallied to strong pressure, but could not menace the winner. SAY DO raced in the first flight from the beginning and held on with good courage in the closing drive.

SECOND RACE—Four furlongs; claiming. Purse, $700. For 2-year-old colts and geldings; maidens. Went to post at 2:52. Off at 2:54. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, Robert W. Collins' b. c. (2); by Lee O. Cotner—Lady of Lynn. Trained by Robert W. Collins. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:48 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BARON LYNN, $26.80, $9.80, $4.10; DARK FRIEND, $3.10, $2.30; LEGION, $2.80.

BARON LYNN, racing stoutly while in near attendance of the pacemaker, rallied willingly when reaching the home stretch, wore DARK FRIEND down inside the closing furlong and came out slowly at the close. DARK FRIEND was hurried to the front, saved ground all the way, but finished in the deeper footing on the inside and weakened under a stout drive. LEGION followed within striking distance of the leaders, but could not menace when the real test came.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs; claiming. Purse, $700. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 3:23. Off at 3:24½. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Winner, Miss Lillian C. White's ch. g. (4); by Epinard—Beautiful Lady. Trained by J. Gorga. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:12.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EPIBEAU, $19.10, $11.40, $6.30; PORTDEN, $6.50, $4.70; SAGE GIRL, $9.20.

EPIBEAU, going in his best form and having more speed than usual, opened up a safe lead after taking command in the opening furlong, saved ground and was never in danger. PORTDEN came through on the inside of MISS PURRAY midway of the turn, rallied nicely, but could not menace the winner. SAGE GIRL held a forward position from the beginning, swung to the outside and finished with good courage.

FOURTH RACE—One mile; claiming. Purse, $700; 3-year-olds. Went to post at 3:52. Off at 3:52½. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, B. G. Guth's ch. g. (3); by Happy Argo—Dove. Trained by Hirsch Jacobs. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:41 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PHRIXUS, $11.60, $4.70, $3.90; TRAGEDIAN, $5.10, $4.70; CHRYSEIS, $5.80.

PHRIXUS, hustled into a forward position going to the first turn, raced close to the pacemaker until reaching the final bend, took command when straightened into the home stretch and drew out under stout urging. TRAGEDIAN saved ground wherever possible and closed gamely when shaken up. CHRYSEIS showed good speed while setting the pace, but weakened when forced to a drive in the last quarter mile.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Pahokee Handicap. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 4:27. Off at 4:29½. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, Thomas F. Sword's b. g. (4); by Torchilla—Voterina. Trained by George Mayberry. Value to winner, $725; second, $175; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 1:12.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—VOTE BOY, $9.20, $4.10, $3.20; BROWN TWIG, $3.00, $2.50; BIRD FLOWER, $3.40.

VOTE BOY, at home in the going, sprinted into a clear lead midway of the back stretch, responded gamely when put to a drive and outstayed BROWN TWIG under severe urging. BROWN TWIG, forcing a fast pace from the start, was blocked badly when attempting to drive through on the inside of the winner in the stretch turn, came again after obtaining racing room and was going much the fastest at the end. BIRD FLOWER was outrun by the first two from the beginning, but was easily best of the others.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles; claiming. Purse, $700. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 5:03. Off at 5:03½. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Winner, Mrs. Kirby Ramsey's b. m. (5); by Swift and Sure—Bourse. Trained by Kirby Ramsey. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:48.

CHAUMONT	(Rosen)	115	4	5	5	5	5	5	5	19.35

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CELIBA, $5.00, $3.00, $2.20; POLISHER, $4.20, $2.40; GALLIC, $2.20.

CELIBA, saved off the pace until straightened on the back stretch, went through on the inside when going to the leaders, displaced POLISHER and drew out at will. POLISHER raced GALLIC into submission, but was unable to withstand the winner when vigorously urged. GALLIC was rushed hard to force the pace and had nothing left when called on.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles; claiming. Purse, $700. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 5:37. Off at 5:38½. Start good. Won driving; place same. Winner, E. A. McCann's b. g. (5); by Durbar II—Mary Maud. Trained by H. L. Cornwell. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:55.

PALASA	(J.Renick)	108	2	3	4h	4¹	4¹	4¹½	5	7.05

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BENARES, $5.40, $4.10, $2.60; CANIMAR, $10.80, $3.40; LONE HAND, $2.30.

BENARES, favored by intelligent handling, assumed command immediately, raced under slight reserve until reaching the final bend, responded nicely when shaken up and then held on strongly to stall off CANIMAR. Latter moved into contention readily after being straightened into the back stretch, secured racing room on the inside to reach the pacemaker, then closed determinedly in the last quarter mile. LONE HAND, eased back of the pacemaker after being steered wide at the first turn, went prominently until reaching the final turn, then tired in the closing drive.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles; claiming. Purse, $700. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 6:13. Off at 6:13½. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Winner, Max Hirsch's ch. g. (4); by American Flag—Hi Gloss. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:47.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAG OF WAR, $5.30, $3.70, $3.00; PROHIBITION, $5.60, $3.70; PARADE ON, $4.40.

FLAG OF WAR opened up a long lead when reaching the back stretch, saved ground all the way and held sway until the close. PROHIBITION, rated for the first 6 furlongs, moved up strongly when leaving the back stretch and finished with good speed. PARADE ON was kept under pressure from the beginning, saved ground and held on well.

Gymnasts Will Stage Exhibition at Howard

The Springfield College gymnastic team has arranged to stage an exhibition Saturday night in the gymnasium at Howard University, under direction of Leslie L. Judd. The team was obtained by the physical education forum, a Howard organization composed of students majoring in physical education. The director was formerly a member of the famous Australian Olympic gymnastic team.

A feature of the program will be a scene depicting statuary of youth, in which eight men assume poses giving phases of athletic life in artistic interpretation. Another feature will consist of the swinging of lighted Indian clubs in a darkened gymnasium. Proceeds will be used for a scholarship fund.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Foreign exchanges drooped yesterday as traders tried to peer through the clouds of European uncertainty.

In New York the pound sterling was down ⅜ of a cent to $4.97½. This was equivalent to the rate at which the dollar had closed in earlier London dealings.

New York transactions in the French franc saw that unit decline .00⅛ of a cent to 6.64½ cents. This compared with an earlier closing for the dollar at Paris which was the equivalent of 6.643 cents to the franc.

$6,000,000 Sharon Issues Offered Today

Include $2,000,000 of 4½ Per Cent Debentures, 40,000 Pfd. Shares.

Issues of $2,000,000 of 15-year 4½ per cent convertible debentures of the Sharon Steel Corporation and 40,000 shares of convertible $5 preferred stock are being offered today by Speyer & Co. and Hemphill, Noyes & Co. The bonds are priced at 102 per cent and the stock at $100 per share.

Proceeds of the $6,000,000 financing will be applied to the redemption at 103 of $5,328,000 first mortgage 5½ per cent sinking fund gold bonds of the predecessor company, Sharon Steel Hoop Co., with the balance for corporate purposes.

The debentures will be redeemed at various prices ranging from 105 before March 1, 1938, to 101 from March 1, 1946 to maturity. Up to May 1, 1938 the debentures are convertible into common stock at $40; up to May 1, 1940 at $43; up to May 1, 1942 at $46 and up to May 1, 1946 at $50.

The convertible $5 preferred stock may be exchanged at the following prices for the common stock: up to May 1, 1939, $35; to May 1, 1942, $40; to May 1, 1946, $45; to May 1, 1951, $50. The preferred is redeemable at $107.50 a share up to March 1, 1939, and thereafter at $105 a share.

Japan Is Challenging U. S. for China Trade

Shanghai (AP).—Japan is challenging the United States for the premier position in China's foreign trade. For the first time in several years, China is buying as much from Japan as from the United States.

While American exports to China were dropping off during the past year, Japanese exports to this country were increasing. The result was that during 1935 the United States supplied only 18.93 per cent of China's imports, while Japan provided 15.03 per cent. The figures were 26.16 per cent and 12.21 per cent in 1934.

Stocks Hold Steady Tone in Less Active Trading With Narrow Price Movements.

New York, March 16.—Financial markets lacked the power shown in Saturday's rally, but a steadier tone persisted. On moderate turnover stocks regained fractions to a point or so. Bonds were dull but steady, and foreign currencies held their own. Francs were a little better. War talk was regarded as perhaps a shade less alarming, although in the main the markets are merely becoming more calloused rather than reassured. May wheat closed ¾ of a cent lower at 99 cents a bushel.

Stocks had the smallest sales volume of a month at around 2,000,000 shares and outside of a flurry in utility stocks and a side demonstration in one or two airplanes, little of interest took place. Prices moved in a narrow range, with little haste to buy or pressure to sell. Trading in the public utility group accounted for about 15 per cent of the total stock volume. American Power & Light and Electric Power & Light were the features. Their prices climbed from 1 to more than 3 points.

Railroad stocks moved irregularly lower. Largest losses were suffered by Santa Fe and Nickel Plate. New York Central, Great Northern and Pennsylvania were higher. With the exception of U. S. Steel, the steel stocks worked lower. U. S. Steel was helped by its annual report and the realization that, at present rate of operations, something is being earned on the common shares.

Oil shares were lower, including Standard of New Jersey, which has stood out for the past few days. Metals were mixed. Smelters dropped 2 points. U. S. Smelting looked brighter. The majority of the rail equipments improved, and the tobacco stocks reversed their downward trend. Most of the food shares were firm, and that was about the best that could be said for the motors. Chemicals, accessories, mail orders were mixed.

In the specialty group Colorado Fuel common and preferred tumbled 3 and 8 points, respectively. The break followed sharp cracks in the stocks on Saturday, when news of the reorganization plan became general knowledge. National Lead lost 8 points on one sale. National Supply common and preferred were strong on the stimulus given the oil business by the new Louisiana fields.

Trade News Favorable.

Seldom will it be found that all factors at once are favorable to business. European war talk seems to be affecting security and exchange markets more than it is business; in fact, the effect so far on trade probably is slight, although our export and import activity would suffer should fighting break out. Although the war clouds have put into obscurity for the moment the new tax program, that is the real menace to further business recovery. Businessmen will hesitate to carry out expansion plans until they know what taxes they will have to endure, and especially until the Treasury's plan on surplus becomes clear to them.

Were there less to worry on the score of taxes and were there less nervousness over the possibility of general war in Europe, a good deal of satisfaction could be taken with the condition of business. Whether the stock market has overdiscounted the progress made and in early prospect is another matter. Over the week-end the trade reports were favorable. Cotton consumption last month turns out to have been better than a year ago. This week, according to the estimate of the American Iron & Steel Institute, the industry's operating rate will step up to 60 per cent against 55.8 per cent last week and 46.8 per cent a year ago. All steel companies will make money at that rate and probably the top is still to be reached.

Fetish of March 4.

National bank officers here were amused that, for the third year in succession, the Comptroller had called for reports of their condition as of March 4 or thereabouts. It was March 4 a year ago and March 5 two years ago (March 4 in that year being a Sunday) and three years ago it was the darkest day of the bank holiday and also the day the New Deal took office. So any comparisons made with that bottom of the vale of the banking business are bound to show enormous progress. Doubtless that is one of the reasons why the anniversary of the coming of the New Dealers to Washington is the favorite day for bank calls. Bank officers remark that March 4 is supplanting June 30 as the fixed and invariable date upon which they can expect to be called upon for a statement, and that there is now only one call date which is now not known in advance. It is also noted that, since a Government agency last year asked State authorities to choose call dates identical with those fixed by Washington, many of the State banking boards are slavishly following the suggestion.

Erosion.

Recent and imminent changes in personnel of the Securities and Exchange Commission pose the problem of maintaining the high standard of organization necessary to administer the securities laws properly. Because of the depression the SEC was able at first to enlist rank and file of more than average ability. Some of the executives, too, were attracted by the romance of setting up the new machinery. Now private capital is buying the ability and the special training of many members of the SEC staff. Incidentally, about 40 per cent of the organization qualified as experts exempt from civil service rules. The "career men," upon whom smooth operation depends, probably are in the civil service group.

Colorado Fuel.

The stock exchange has its worries on policy of trading in stocks of companies in receivership or in bankruptcy proceedings. Last year Colorado Fuel common sold as low as half a dollar a share and the preferred sank to $5 a share, when it looked as though a reorganization would wipe out all value for the common and virtually all for the preferred issue. Then a tight situation developed in the preferred stock (i. e., corner, as for a day or two none was available for borrowing and a premium was charged for a long time after the stock exchange forced stock into the loan market), and owing to its small supply the price was steadily forced up. With improvement in business for the steel companies, and with the receipt of some rail orders, the market shoved the stocks along at a merry pace. Only recently the preferred reached 49 and the common 9⅜. Late last week when the court approved a reorganization that means for the common merely the right to pay for new common at $35 a share, provided it looks that good, and warrants to preferred shareholders to buy shares of common the light began to dawn on some who had bought at the higher prices. At today's low prices the common had come down about 65 per cent and the preferred nearly 50 per cent.

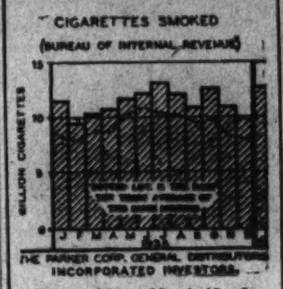
Business Pays 80 Per Cent of Federal Taxes

Indefinite Tapping of Source Seen Harmful by Conference.

New York, March 16.—In 1935 more than 80 per cent of all Federal tax revenues were collected from business in the first instance, according to the National Industrial Conference Board. In an analysis of the proposed tax on undivided profits, the board points out that while many of these taxes, such as the taxes on tobacco and liquors, are shifted to consumers, the Federal Government now depends and must continue to depend upon business for the major part of its tax revenues. Consequently, the Government would be pursuing a course contrary to its own revenue interets in adopting measures tending to disorganize and deplete the capital structure of business enterprise. A summary of the board's study, issued today, states:

"The earnings of corporations and unincorporated businesses cannot be tapped indefinitely without introducing tendencies which in the long run will prove to be economically harmful. If the Government absorbs $620,000,000 more of the earnings of business enterprises in 1937 than in 1936, it will mean that the funds available for productive purposes and for the expansion and improvement of productive equipment will be reduced.

Cigarette Output Continues Climb



Boston, Mass., March 15.—January was the seventh successive month in which cigarette consumption in this country established monthly records. The production of nearly 12¾ billion cigarettes passed January, 1935, by 12½ per cent, and was exceeded by only two other seasonally high months.

Cotton Is Steady In Narrow Range

New York, March 16 (AP).—The cotton market today was a repetition of the dull and narrow price swings shown in most recent sessions. The close was steady, net 5 points higher to 1 point lower.

World Cotton Trade Headed For New Peak

Consumption Is Running Above All Previous Season Records.

New York, March 16.—Unless the improvement in world business which has been under way since the middle of 1932 is checked by war, growing out of the European crisis, or by some other adverse development, the world cotton trade is likely to expand to larger proportions than any yet seen, according to the New York Cotton Exchange Service today. World consumption of cotton is running at a record-breaking rate, and, if this country increases its production substantially this year, world production for the coming season may also establish a new high record.

"World consumption of all cottons is currently running at a rate of about 27,000,000 bales per year, as against a previous maximum in any single season of 25,778,000 bales," says the Exchange Service. "Consumption is at this record-breaking rate notwithstanding the inroads of rayon staple products and other competing fibers, the unemployment of many millions of industrial workers in this country and abroad, the blocking of international trade by tariffs, quotas, and other barriers, and a shortage of foreign exchange in numerous countries."

Culbertson on Bridge

Not Luck; Judgment!

Bridge tragedies more often are due to human frailty than to the malignant interference of fate. This statement must not be interpreted to mean that there is no such thing as a "bad break." Every player of long experience has suffered from having the cards seemingly stacked against him at some time or other. But it is unfair and unintelligent to count as "a break" anything that could have been avoided by either care or sagacity.

I am quite sure that the hapless declarer in today's hand felt he was a victim of the evil eye when the opponents chalked up a 1,700 point penalty against him. Personall, I feel much greater sympathy for his partner.

This hand was reported to me by Thomas H. Peeples, of Boston, who was the East player. Probably out of charity and sportsmanship to his stricken adversaries, Mr. Peeples failed to comment on South's bidding. Not knowing who South was, I am not so restrained. Whatever slight excuse there may have been for the five heart bid instead of five clubs cannot hold in view of the subsequent pass to the penalty double. Under ordinary circumstances a suit as strong as South's may be considered solid, but the circumstances were not ordinary! East's four spade bid was a loud warning or, rather, it should have been! West's double was the second and louder warning. When declarer closed his ears he actually invited disaster.

North, dealer.

NORTH
♠ K 3
♦ A 9 6 4

WEST
♠ J 8
♥ 10 8 6 4 3 2
♦ K 7 5 3

EAST
♠ A Q 10 9 7 6
♦ None
♣ K 4

SOUTH
♠ None
♥ A K Q J 9 7
♦ Q J 2
♣ Q 8 6 5

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 club	4 spades	5 hearts	double [final bid]

Bad as South's bidding had been, his play proved worse. He ruffed the opening spade lead and played his four top trumps. Then he took the club finesse. East won and did not make the error of leading the ace of spades, which would have immediately cut off communications between his hand and partner's, and would have reduced the penalty to one trick. Observing his partner's nine of clubs on the first lead of that, he returned a club. West ruffed and drew declarer's remaining trump. A second spade lead put East in for the cashing of his enormous suit. Result, down six doubled, vulnerable, 1,700 points!

Six clubs could not have been defeated, since East would have had to make the opening lead. But even at the five heart contract, proper play would have saved at least four tricks. Declarer could not afford to lead out trumps until the club suit was safely established. With the clubs established, the top hearts could have been drawn, and West's long trumps conceded for a set of two tricks. If South guessed the location of the diamond king, he could actually have made his contract, but that would have required double dummy play.

Farm Program Urged By Page County Group

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., March 16.—Improved stock-breeding, crop adjustment, protection of farmers from competition, and regulations to affect parity in prices were recommendations formulated Saturday by a committee of 12 delegates from 2,500 farmers in Page County, who have been holding group meetings during the last six weeks. The meeting was presided over by County Agent G. H. Clark.

Those on the committee are: Leakesville—Irvin Foltz, C. D. Price, Willie Comer; Shenandoah—Grover Koontz, D. D. Kite, C. W. Louderback; Springfield—Oscar Hammer, E. J. Montgomery, O. O. Baker; Luray—C. E. Musselman, Carroll Spitler, former postmaster, and L. N. Foster.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., March 16.—Indorsing the movement launched by the Kiwanis Club of this city, to have music taught in the Charlottesville public schools, Harry Rogers Pratt, associate professor of music and dramatic art at the University of Virginia, in an address before the weekly Kiwanis luncheons today, expressed the hope that clergymen of all denominations would co-operate.

"The first man in American life to urge the adoption of music in the public school system," Prof. Pratt said, "was our neighbor, Thomas Jefferson. In 1819 he was prepared to include a school of music in the original set-up of the University of Virginia, and advertised in the Baltimore and Philadelphia papers for a 'gentleman proficient on two instruments, who could also teach musical composition.' Nobody answered the ad. His hope was to make music a part of the life of every student from the primary grade through the univer-
